CHAPTER XVII

Marshal Joseph Joffre, upon my invitation, arrived at Chaumont October 15, 1917, to see our First division.

The French military officials were anxious to show their respect and it was arranged to have both an American and a French guard of honor drawn up to salute him upon his arrival at my residence. These two small guards vied with each other and both seemed to get a great thrill out of the ceremony.

After an interesting evening with the marshal and his staff as our guests we left the next morning by motor car for Treveray, accompanied by Generals Ragueneau and Alvord, Colonels De Chambrun and McCoy and Captain Boyd.

The troops of the division were drawn up in line ready to receive us and presented a much better appearance than at the review by President Poincare. The men were especially keen to be inspected by a marshal of France and their pride was clearly evident by their perfect lines as they swung by in the march past. The marshal in turn was enthusiastic over their vigorous appearance and military bearing.

One incident occurred that was not on the program. On the way to the field for the ceremony a well-groomed mule that happened to be running loose pricked up his ears, looked us over and decided to trot along with us. One of my staff wagered that this wise animal knew what was going on and would be present to see the march past. Sure enough, when we reached our position this Missouri product had preceded us. Cautiously approaching, he displayed the greatest curiosity in the guest of honor. As all efforts to drive him away seemed futile, he hovered near as an interested spectator of the proceedings, much to the amusement of the marshal.

Review Other Units.

I gave a luncheon at Neufchateau for the marshal's party and my own and the senior officers of the First division. After that we saw the training conducted by the First corps school and visited the American and French billets at the village of St. Blin, where the One Hundred and First regiment, Twenty-sixth division, and the French Sixty-ninth passed in review in excellent form. As we returned toward Chaumont other American and French units were drawn up by the roadside in honor of the marshal.

It was rather late when we started and darkness overtook us while passing on foot through the lines. The trumpets of each regiment sounded as we approached, and with the lights from our automobiles close behind illuminating the trees that bordered the highway and the faces that peered through the shadows to catch a glimpse of the marshal the scene suggested some legendary painting.

Finally we halted and the troops, including the French One Hundred and Fifty-first infantry, which had made a remarkable record at Verdun, marched past us. As the regiments came out of the darkness into the spotlight of our autos they made a picture never to be forgotten.

Denies False Cable Rumor.

Returning to Paris October 19, I learned that a dispatch from Berlin to the New York Times represented me as having said that the German lines were impregnable. The report might have been idle gossip, but it was more probably circulated to create the impression that our armies were starting on a forlorn hope. This report was so far from the truth that I cabled the secretary of war that it was absolutely false and without any foundation whatever.

In every reference to our future operations I had strongly maintained that it was not only possible to break the German lines but that it would be done. The very system of training that we were persistently following was based on the determination to force the Germans out of their trenches and beat them in the open. On no other theory could they have been defeated.

Yet without question there were not a few among our allies and probably some in our own army who thought the task impossible, supporting their view by citing the failures of the previous three years, especially that of the spring of 1917. It was none the less a surprise, however, when a report came directly to me that such views had actually been expressed in the presence of civilian visitors by officers of rank in our army.

I was indignant to learn of that kind of talk, and in commenting on it to the Americans who had heard such statements made I said that "The German lines can be broken, they must be broken, and they will be broken," and those present will recall that it was said with considerable emphasis.

Positive steps were taken at once to eradicate such notions, or at least prevent them from being openly stated, and I was determined to relieve immediately any officer, without regard to rank, who should express any such opinion.

First Division Moves In.

My general impression of the situation at this time was set forth in a cable to Washington October 21:

"During the last week the water-soaked ground in Flanders and on the western front generally has prevented farther development of offensive movements. Summing up wastage of German army in this year's campaign, a single offensive, such as the Anglo-French in Flanders in progress since July 31, is insufficient materially to weaken Germany's man power. Next year must see two offensives, continuously maintained throughout summer, if decisive result is to be obtained. This can only be secured through aid of effective United States army on this side. . . . The troops on the western front have been re-enforced by one German division from the Russian front. . . ."

As the training of the First division had now progressed sufficiently it was put into line in the quiet sector northeast of Luneville, under the supervision of the French, for actual trench experience. The division was underofficered and short of horses, clothing and many other things, especially rolling kitchens, of which a few had only recently been received, and trucks, which were borrowed from the French.

Stressed Need of Winter Clothing.

My repeated cables, beginning in July, for winter clothing had received scant attention, and with the coming of colder weather the shortage became critical. The initial stock requested was disallowed, the monthly allotments were totally inadequate and the depots were practically empty.

The explanation that came from the quartermaster general's office, that our requests could not be granted on account of the needs at home, showed a total lack of appreciation of the necessity of properly clothing the fighting man actually at the front above all others. After another urgent appeal a partial supply was sent, but we had succeeded in obtaining a quantity of clothing from the British to tide us over.

CHAPTER XVIII

Upon the invitation of General Petain I went to the French front to be present at their second offensive since General Nivelle's failure in April, arriving by motor at the headquarters of General d'Esperey, commander of the group of armies of the north, on the evening of October 22, 1917.

The plans for the attack were explained to us, and from the extreme care taken in working out the details and from their accurate knowledge of the enemy's forces and his position, there seemed to be little doubt of success.

Soon after their victory near Verdun in August the French had begun to prepare for this offensive, in which they could not well afford to fail. The advance was made by eight divisions of the Sixth army on a front of only seven and a half miles extending along the Aisne, with the object of gaining a more advantageous position for the winter and also still further building up French morale.

Extended Artillery Fire.

General Maistre, the army commander, gave the operation his personal attention, prescribing an artillery preparation covering six days, during which the expenditure of ammunition was even greater than in the offensive of August 20. The long period of artillery fire was considered necessary, as the Germans were strongly fortified along the chalky bluffs of the Aisne, where numerous caverns afforded cover for large garrisons held near the front.

The assaulting lines of infantry, accompanied by numerous tanks, succeeded without difficulty in reaching the limited objectives. Fort Malmaison, the key point, was reduced to a heap of rubbish by the very heavy artillery fire concentrated upon it. The capture of this dominant position by the French caused the immediate withdrawal of the Germans on the right and left, and during the succeeding fortnight they retired behind the Ailette.

Victory Is Offset.

This achievement of the French in capturing positions against which the April offensive by Nivelle dashed itself to pieces had a very stimulating effect upon their morale, but it would have been more lasting had it not been followed so soon by the serious defeat of the Italians at Caporetto October 24.

After extending thanks to our host we left for Compiegne, literally covered with mud, stopping there to congratulate General Petain on the success of the day. While at Compiegne we dropped in at the dispensary where some American women under Miss Elsie De Wolfe (who afterward became Lady Mendl) maintained a clinic for badly burned gas cases. We also made a brief call at the hospital nearby to see Colonel Bunau-Varilla of Panama canal fame, who had lost a leg at the recent French offensive near Verdun. From his cheerful mood he seemed to be rather proud of his wound.

In 1927 I took part in the dedication of the Ossuary near Verdun, at which Colonel Bunau-Varilla was present. On the rounds to inspect this fine monument we passed the many bays which contain the bones of men who lost their lives in the great battle. When we came to the bay corresponding to the sector in which he fought, he jovially remarked that he thought his leg must be in there.

Dock Construction Delayed.

Toward the end of October, accompanied by Gens. Richard N. Blatchford and Mason M. Patrick, and Cols. Charles R. Krauthoff and David S. Stanley, I visited Bordeaux, one of the ports chosen for the use of American troops. As facilities were only sufficient to accommodate a limited amount of additional medium draft shipping, we had started the construction of new docks at Bassens, 12 miles below, where deep water would permit vessels to come alongside. Although considerable quantities of material had been sent over, this new construction was delayed principally because of the lack of piling which the engineers had planned to have brought from the Pacific coast.

An incident happened in connection with the shipments of piling from home that would have been amusing if it had not been so serious. One ship that reached Bordeaux was supposed to be loaded with especially long piling, but upon inspection the engineers found it much shorter than prescribed. Upon inquiry it was learned that to get the piles in between bulkheads the supercargo had sawed the ends off. While speaking of forest products another example of inefficiency that occurred a little later might be mentioned.

One of the vessels from home was loaded by the quartermaster's department with shavings for the cold storage plant instead of steel billets for the manufacture of guns when tons of sawdust and shavings could have been obtained from the logging districts in France.

Trouble With Russians.

Continuing the inspection, we went on Sunday to Cornau, about forty miles from Bordeaux, thinking it might possibly be available for our use later on. It was then occupied by a brigade of disaffected Russians, who, like most of their fellows, had defied their officers and refused to participate further in the war. After being withdrawn from the line they had given the French so much trouble, even to committing depredations on the people, that they had to be sent out of the zone of the armies to this rather remote camp, where they were held practically as prisoners.

There was no transportation to carry them back to Russia, and as they had been allowed to keep their arms it was difficult to enforce discipline among them. I spoke to two colonels and criticized the lack of sanitation, but it was evident that they were unable to compel the men to work, even to the extent of cleaning out stables, latrines or drains, and the conditions may be better imagined than described. The men were a heavy, stupid-looking lot, who, in their new estate, apparently did not care how bad things were so long as the French continued to feed and clothe them.

Progress Is Noted.

Gievres, which lies 100 miles directly south of Paris, became the site of our principal supply depot in France. Under Col. C. J. Symmonds' able and energetic direction construction to cover an area of 12 square miles was going forward with all possible speed. Colonel Symmonds was gradually putting order and system into the place.

Regardless of the adverse conditions under which the line of communications was laboring there was everywhere a fine and enthusiastic spirit among the officers and men, who, without exception, were cheerful and optimistic.

After all, considering the lack of men and material, we were making progress on the physical side of the organization that would feed, clothe and furnish munitions for the great army we hoped to have.

One obstacle, however, was to be found in the number of independent bureaus represented at the ports and the larger centers of activity, not only in our own system but especially in that of the French, and the consequent difficulty of securing teamwork among them. As a remedy I sent to each base section a competent general officer with an organized staff to coordinate and systematize the management of affairs, and in a brief time considerable improvement was noticeable in methods of handling troop arrivals and cargo and in the increased progress of construction.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Well, nobody has called to decipher last week's letter, and the writer of the same has not accepted my challenge, so needs be I must grind out another column this week. And with the track meet in full blast. I'd much rather be out there watching the athletes sink into their ankles in the mud track. Why can't they make a cinder track for them?

And with the weather getting rather nice. It's time that summer is showing up, anyway. You know winter has lingered so long in the lap of spring that it has occasioned a great deal of talk around the old burnside stoves, drug stores and bank corners.

And speaking of bank corners, if they don't get a lot of people to lean on the back of the Garrett National Bank building across the way from The Republican building, the army of unemployed who like to sun themselves in front of it, are going to push it into Wilson Creek. Mit Sincell surveyed the front of it during the past week and found that it may be pushed out of plumb, notwithstanding its substantiality and even with Neil Fraley on the second floor with his weighty law offices to hold it in place.

Why is it a fellow chasing a straw hat looks so comical? One of the early season addicts had his blown across the street on Monday and if he felt as comical as he looked, he could join Barnum's side show.

I feel funny enough with one on my head. It doesn't have to blow off to make my self-conscious self crop out and give me goose flesh.

Going from the high to low, or from the sublime to the ridiculous reminds me of the feet that got covered over with roof paint last Thursday morning. When a whole barrel leaks out on them, to say nothing of the shoes and trousers, it's enough to make one want to sleep beneath a roof that has holes in it and leaks, isn't it, Jeff?

Knows Its Place

I am a nickel.
I am not on speaking terms with the candy man.
I am too small to get in the movies.
I am not large enough to buy a necktie.
I am of small consideration in the purchase of gasoline.
I am not fit to be a tip—
But, BE-LIEVE ME, when I go to church
I am SOME money.

Colonel Bell had a tree planting one day last week in front of his establishment. He telephoned to the Mayor to make an address of welcome and to cover the life root of the tree, but hizzoner couldn't be found, so Colonel Bell called on former Senator Naylor to pinch hit, and he delivered an oration that was heard by Browning's filling station employes, those of the Sharps Motor Company and guests at the Frantz Hotel. His theme was "Why watering the roots will bring forth Winesaps."

It's too bad there isn't somebody by the name of Cecil Faraday. If there were I might be tempted to print the poetry (with the boss editor's ok) I received last Friday from someone who signed his name.

Women who have gray eyes can have them changed to blue or brown by a new kind of contact glass which fits the eyeball, according to a story from London. But if you want a black eye it can be obtained quicker in the old fashioned way.

A plant called "kaabee" has been discovered in Peru, which is three hundred times sweeter than sugar cane. A tip to song writers: "When I take my kaabee baby to tea."

Do You Know That—

It costs the county only $25 per month for the home demonstration agent. The balance of her salary and expenses are paid by the State and Federal governments.

Heated arguments on street corners and in alleys are getting popular and at the same time somewhat inexpensive. One of the recent participants has been called the Al Capone of Oakland.

If there is a state in the Union needing rain it should apply to Garrett county for a part of its share. No drought-stricken area can afford to be without our services, and our charges are reasonable.

MT. LAKE PARK

The Park never looked more beautiful than it does at the present. The abundant rainfall has carpeted the whole area with a luxurious growth of grass, the maples are in full leaf, the oaks are beginning to show their colors, the early flowers are in bloom. It is at this time of year one forgets the rather tedious dreariness of the winter months.

The coming referendum election on the new charter, like the weather, is getting some hot.

As a reminder that there was a mighty growth of timber in this section, joists, some of them 34 feet in length, solid, well preserved and unspliced, are being removed from old Briarbend Seminary. The timbers being salvaged are well preserved and apparently as good as the day they were placed in the building. We do not have the exact date of its erection, but the Seminary must have been built more than forty years ago. We understand much of the material will be used in the erection of a club house and cottages on Deep Creek Lake.

The Park wishes to extend congratulations to John (Buddy) Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Morgan, and to Kermit Jessee, son of Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Jessee, in winning their events at the field meet in Oakland. Buddy had the honor of being on the winning 440-yard relay race team and tying the record for baseball distance throwing, while young Jessee broke the record in the hop, step and jump (95-lb. class) event, and was likewise on the team winning the 440 yard relay. Both of these boys won some medals and will join the winners in the other counties on a trip to Baltimore, all expenses being paid.

It is a well known trait of birds to revel in a good dust bath. But a lady of our acquaintance is advocating a training school for birds to teach them the impropriety of using for that purpose porch flower boxes in which she recently planted some seeds. It is a question whether the seeds will sprout in the boxes or in the ground beneath.

The Kimmell cottage was damaged to quite an extent one night last week. The lower laps of weather boarding were broken off for a distance of perhaps ten feet. It is thought by some that a large dog did the damage in its efforts to get at a nest of squirrels. Others believe that the dog (if dog it was) had the assistance of its master.

On the main stem of Loch Lynn the cement sidewalk leading from the Weeks to the Harvey-Ream corner has been top dressed, raising the surface of the walk some two or three inches, thus getting rid of a sloppy, icy condition in the winter and much improving the surroundings.

Complying with many requests we submit the summer program for the Park a second time:

Camp Meeting, June 26-July 5; the Pittsburgh Epworth League, July 13-20; Baltimore Epworth League, July 20-27; Ministerial Training School, July 27-August 6; Summer School of Missions, August 1-6; Moody Bible Institute, August 9-16; Tennis Tournament, August 10-16.

Preaching at the M. E. church on Sunday night; Sunday school at 10 a. m.

Rev. and Mrs. Gregory Bleakley, son and wife, are at their cottage for a few days. Rev. Bleakley is pastor of the Warwood M. E. church, Wheeling, W. Va.

Mr. H. L. Bittner was the recent purchaser at public auction of the Harmison and Felty cottages at the Park.

Dr. Sumner Stone, of New York, is a guest in the Park for a few days.

Mrs. Howard Smouse, Fairmont, is here as a guest of her sisters, the Misses Hamill.

Mr. and Mrs. John Deveny, Fairmont, entertained at a week-end party guests from Baltimore, Cumberland and Frostburg.

UNDERWOOD

We have experienced a cold, stormy week and it was feared the wheat and fruit would suffer, but as yet everything has escaped damage from the frost.

Artie Dodge was a business visitor in this section Friday.

Miss Marion Bloss, teacher in our school, visited her home at Siebert, Allegany county, over the week-end.

Mrs. L. C. Nine and Miss Frances Cress were week-end visitors of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Miller near Grantsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sims and Miss Carrie Sims were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Arnold at Sunnyside.

Mrs. Floyd Wensell, of near Oakland, spent several days recently with her mother, Mrs. R. J. Nicholson, who has been quite ill but who is improving at this time.

Ray Browning and wife were visiting at the Nicholson home on Sunday.

It seems that going back to the farm is the best thing to do at present, hence we note the following as having taken up agriculture in this section: Lester Welch has moved to the Alonzo Hardesty farm; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hesse have moved to the Crowe farm at Gortner; Mrs. Jennie Sanders is again occupying her farm; Mr. and Mrs. Sebe Ashby have moved on the Thomas Ashby place; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dawson from Deer Park, are tenants on the L. C. Nine farm; Charles Barkman and family have gone on the C. F. Glotfelty farm from Crellin; Philip Crissinger and family have taken the Asa Coddington farm for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin O'Haver were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joe O'Haver the past week.

Russell and John Durst, of Crellin, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barkman on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Dillsworth have moved to the old Dillsworth farm from Salt Lick, W. Va.

Alex. Lantz with his wife were calling on Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Lantz on Sunday. Mr. Levi Lantz accompanied them to their home at Crellin Sunday evening.

Homer Lipscomb, who is seriously ill, has been taken to a hospital in Elkins, W. Va., for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham and family were visitmg friends at Deer Park on Sunday.

"Voices of the Past" will be the theme of the pastor's message at the Presbyterian church, Memorial Sunday. The Triple Trio will sing "Lest we Forget," a special arrangement of Kipling's stirring "Recessional," music by DeKoven.

Beyond the County

In Washington the Civil Service Commission is planning to fingerprint all appointees to Federal jobs, it being estimated that out of the 260,000 examined annually, one out of every thirteen have police records.

At Aurora, Ill., a horse lost 18 races, but after his owner had fed him pineapples (the horse having been raised on that diet in Havana) he has taken every race since.

In New Orleans, Edgar Bouligny, the first American wounded in the World War was killed by his wife in the French quarter of that city.

In Baltimore, 14 members of an alleged international rum ring were held in $140,000 bail for action on the Federal Grand Jury by a Federal commissioner after a preliminary hearing Monday.

VOLUME 55. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, JUNE 4, 1931. NUMBER 16.

CHARGE TO GRAND JURY GIVEN BY JUDGE SLOAN

June Term of the Circuit Court Convened Monday; Will be Last June Term Under New Law

H. P. MILLER, FOREMAN

The last June jury term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened Monday morning shortly after ten o'clock with Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, of Cumberland, presiding.

Under the law passed at the recent session of the Maryland General Assembly this will be the last jury term of the Circuit Court to convene during the month of June. Hereafter jury terms of this court will convene in September and March of each year.

Mr. Henry P. Miller, foreman of the grand jury, and his fellow members of that body were sworn by Clerk E. Z. Tower, following which Judge Sloan delivered the charge, the full text of which appears below:

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:—

So many of you have already served on grand juries that it seems almost superfluous to instruct you as to the dutics you are to perform.

You are an investigating body whose duty it is to investigate charges of offenses against the criminal laws of the State. The grand jury is, perhaps, the most ancicnt institution that we have in the administration of the law.

There was a time when the grand jury was not only an accusing body, that is, that it brought charges against those who had violated the criminal law before the court, but after having done that it heard the trials of those offenses on their merits and then decided as to the guilt or innocence of the party charged.

Your duty, however, is now confined to the mere investigation of offenses. If you find that the testimony in your judgment is sufficient to warrant a trial of those charged with the commission of these offenses on the merits then it is your duty to present them and indict them in order that they may be brought into court and their guilt or innocence determined by the court or a jury as the party charged may elect.

Your duties are rather clearly defined in the oath which was administered to your foreman and to which each of you has subscribed. You are, without partiality and without prejudice, to hear the witnesses who may be brought before you and, as your judgment may dictate, indict or not indict.

It is desirable that you keep secret, as you have sworn to do, all that transpires in the jury room. One of the reasons for that is that if any of those against whom charges may be brought and who have not been apprehended or have not given bail, should hear of it it gives them an opportunity to escape and there are, over a period of years, perhaps scores of cases in which arrests have not been made because of the fact that information has got out or the parties suspected that they are wanted.

It is desirable also in the administration of justice, that you not only talk to no one of what goes on in the grand jury room or about any of the offenses that you may investigate, but that you do not permit anyone to speak to you about such matters. It is contempt of court if they attempt such a thing and it is your duty to bring to the attention of the court anyone who may speak to you outside of those whose duty it is to investigate and bring these matters to your attention. It is contempt of court for them to have anything to

Council Discusses Second Good Will Tour of County—Report On Streets Made

Probabilities of another good will tour were discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council held Monday night in the Council Chamber. A tour of the towns of the county and a session with the mayors and councils of other communities was said to be highly successful and terminated with a banquet held in Oakland last year.

A report of the streets committee showed that a number of streets were being repaired and plans made for the improvement of others. The Crook Crest road leading to the reservoir will be improved; Third street south of the Youghiogheny River bridge will be repaired, and Crook street between Second and Third, Pennington street between Wilson and Second will be built out full width. Third street between Green and Alder has been widened to the full width of the street lines and is ready for oiling. All streets will be oiled and screened within the next week or two.

A contract has been entered into by the Mayor and Council with the Boys' Band whereby the band would play a number of concerts this summer for the benefit of the town. The sum of $150 was turned over to R. R. Gilbert, director, for use of the organization.

ORTHOPEDIC CLINIC TO BE HELD IN OAKLAND JUNE 13

All Old Patients and Any New Ones Are Urged to Attend

Arrangements are being made for an orthopedic clinic to be held in Garrett county on Saturday, June 13, by Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, public health nurse. The clinic will be held in the Court House, Oakland, and all old patients as well as new cases are requested to be present.

An orthopedic specialist will be in charge and he will be assisted by Mrs. Fahey and others. The clinic is being conducted under the Maryland League for Crippled Children organization.

The purpose of the clinic is to further aid those who have already been helped by the treatments they have received, and to take care of any new cases which may have been found. In the orthopedic clinics held in the county previously, 214 people have been examined and a number of these have received hospitalization.

"All persons who have previously been examined and those who have received treatment following the examination, should attend this clinic for re-examination," Mrs. Fahey stated. "If there are any crippled children or adults in any community of the county who have not been examined, these are also urgently requested to attend. There is no charge whatever for the examination, and it may be the means of preventing serious trouble in the future," Mrs. Fahey concluded.

HOMEMAKERS CLUBS HOLD FOURTH ANNUAL PROGRAM

Miss Venia M. Kellar, State Agent, Gives Main Address

The fourth annual program and tea for homemakers of the county was held yesterday in the Lutheran church with a large number present, and with each club and group in the county represented.

The features of the meeting were the address by Miss Venia M. Kellar, State home demonstration agent, and the dress review of children's clothes, made-over garments and the $1.00 dress contest.

The program included greetings from Miss Elsie M. Benthien, home demonstration agent; reports of homemakers clubs and groups; community singing; reports of home flower garden project leaders by Mrs. T. C. Bittinger, Mrs. William Frazee, Mrs. J. W. Baker and Mrs. O. S. Ridder; report of rural women's short course by Mrs. J. S. Elliott, Mrs. T. C. Bittinger and Mrs. C. C. Beachy; a book review by Mrs. J. B. Emory, Bittinger; an election of a county council of homemakers, and the roll call of clubs.

Following the dress review in the afternoon a tea was held under the direction of Miss Eleanor Howe, director of home economics department of McCormick & Company, Inc.

Miss Helen Bowers, Pleasant Valley, was awarded the teapot during the afternoon demonstration, and a number of food products was distributed among the homemakers.

A county council of homemakers was formed with the following officers: Mrs. C. C. Beachy, Bittinger, president; Mrs. J. S. Elliott, Mt. Lake Park, vice-president; Mrs. C. E. Hardesty, Loch Lynn, treasurer; Mrs. Lawrence Brenneman, Bittinger, secretary.

Maryland Hunting Licenses Are Placed on Sale

All three types of hunting licenses issued in Maryland were placed on sale on Monday throughout the State by clerks of the circuit courts, according to E. Lee LeCompte, state game warden.

Previous licenses expired at midnight, Sunday, Mr. LeCompte said. The permits include 64,300 county residents of the state only in their home counties, 12,275 statewide licenses permitting shooting in all sections of the state, and 3,100 non-resident licenses permitting residents of other states to hunt in Maryland.

A fee of $1.25 is charged for county resident permits, $5.25 for state-wide and $15.50 for non-resident licenses.

Mr. LeCompte warned that the bounty paid on hawks was removed at the last session of the legislature.

CHILD DROWNED IN DEEP CREEK LAKE ON THURSDAY

Body In Nine Feet of Water, Is Recovered by Elmer Haulenbeek, Five Hours Later

FUNERAL HELD SUNDAY

Evidently fearing that she would be carried out to the middle of Deep Creek Lake in a drifting boat, Verda Ann Savage, six years old, daughter of Mrs. Nora Kurtz, of McHenry, jumped from the boat in which she was playing last Thursday afternoon shortly after four o'clock and was drowned. Her body was recovered at nine o'clock that evening by Elmer Haulenbeek, of Rainbow Inn, in about nine feet of water. The body was found at a point near where the child sprang from the boat.

Funeral services were conducted on Sunday morning at ten o'clock from Oak Grove church with Rev. Jonas Sines officiating. Interment was made in the Oak Grove churchyard between Sang Run and McHenry.

The child was playing with some other children on the shore of the lake when she climbed into the boat moored alongside a small dock. The other children remained on the land. After getting into the boat it began to drift out into the lake, and the child becoming frightened, leaped overboard into the water. Mrs. Kurtz, mother of the child, was on the front porch of her home at the time and saw her sink beneath the surface of the water. Other residents of the neighborhood wre notified and several men went out in boats and dragged the bottom of the lake until the body was recovered.

This is the second death to occur in Deep Creek Lake, the first having been that of William Harvey, Frostburg, who committed suicide last April by jumping from Glendale bridge. His body was not recovered until twenty days afterword.

NEW MEMBER BOARD OF EDUCATION TAKES OFFICE

Norval Speelman, Friendsville, Succeeds the Late John W. McCullough In Important Post

TERM WILL EXPIRE MAY,'33

Norval Speelman, of Friendsville, qualified Monday morning as the third member of the Garrett County Board of Education, having been appointed to this important post on May 25, 1931, by Governor Ritchie for the unexpired term made vacant by the death in February of Mr. McCullough, whose sudden death in the office of the Board of County Commissioners remains fresh in the minds of the residents of the county.

Mr. Speelman's commission was received at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland Thursday afternoon of last week.

Mr. Speelman had the recommendation of the Democratic County Committee of Garrett county for the appointment and while there were other applicants for the appointment they were not considered, hence Mr. Speelman's selection.

The new officer has shown interest for some years in civic affairs in his native town—Friendsville—just recently retiring from the office of Mayor of the town after ten or eleven years of service. By profession Mr. Speelman is a lawyer and civil engincer and is a leader in politics and municipal activities in Friendsville and the surrounding community.

The Board of Education of the county reorganized on Tuesday of last week when Mr. H. A. Loraditch was chosen president and Mr. Stuart F. Hamill, both of Oakland, vice-president. Mr. Speelman constitutes the third member of the Board with Mr. F. E. Rathbun as superintendent of the school system.

OAKLAND YARDS-GARDENS SHOW BIG IMPROVEMENT

Contest Chairman Urges People to Create Outdoor Rooms

That entrants in the Yard and Garden contest had already greatly beautified their grounds and that Oakland as a whole was cleaner in appearance than last year, was stated by Mrs. Harold Harned, chairman of the contest, being sponsored by the Oakland Civic club.

Practically every family in the city could create an outdoor living room this spring and make living so much more enjoyable during the hot summer months, she pointed out.

Such a room out of doors can usually be arranged in the area to the rear of the house or oftentimes a side yard offers rich opportunities in that respect. The outdoor living room can be developed on a small as well as a large lot. One of the first essentials is privacy. Trees of the quicker growing varieties, the high growing shrubs and vines serve particularly well for this purpose. They provide shade against the sun and protection against wind and dust.

Never before has such a program of tree-planting been carried on in Oakland, she stated. All entrants in the contest are placing shrubs, trees and flowers in their yards and keeping the lawns in wonderful shape.

FARMHOUSE AND ALL ITS CONTENTS CONSUMED

Home of Henry and Miss Theresa Shaffer Burned Friday Evening

The farm home of Henry Shaffer and his sister, Miss Theresa Shaffer, located on the Deer Park road three miles east of Oakland and near Broadford, was entirely consumed, along with its contents last Friday evening at seven o'clock, the loss being a total one as information cannot be obtained respecting insurance on the property being in forcc.

The couple, both elderly people, had gone to their barn a short time previous to the time the fire was discovered to milk their cows. Upon emerging from the barn they discovered the dwelling to be a mass of flames with no hope of saving even the barest of neccssities.

The building was erected many years ago by the father of the couple. It was substantially built and was said to contain some rare antiques.

35 FROM GARRETT LISTED ON WAR MEMORIAL TABLET

Dedication Is Made At Memorial Building in Baltimore.

A memorial tablet for thirty-five soldiers from Garrett County who gave their lives during the World War and other memorial tablets in honor of the soldiers from all parts of Maryland, were dedicated with appropriate services on Saturday evening in the War Memorial Building, Baltimore.

The program included addresses by Governor Albert C. Ritchie and Howard W. Jackson, mayor of Baltimore. Delbert Davis represented Garrett county and spoke in memory of the county's war dead. Other members of the Garrett county committee were H. L. Jones and A. D. Naylor, Oakland; John A. Shores, Kitzmiller, and Earl Guard, Friendsville.

Tablets with the names of those who died during the war inscribed thereon were unveiled by the county representatives. The following are listed from Garrett county:

Corp. Percy P. Kildow, USMC; Corp. William C. Stanton, USA; Wag. Grant Wrightsman; First Class Privates Orem R. Engle, Robert R. Glotfelty, Philip Polidoro, Frederick L. Sellers; Privates Marshall S. Baker, Sheridan C. Broadwater, Ralph G. Browning, Allen Burdock, Earl M. Calhoun, James A. Chlsholm, Charles S. Craver, Sherman B. Custer, Dayton H. DeWitt, James A. Edgar, Albert M. Enlow, Harry E. Enlow, Owen F. Friend, Oran H. Friend, Charles L. Harvey, William Hockman, Eugene J. Kerns, John D. Little, Grover C. Lohr, Charles T. Michael, John H. Oester, Aris C. Roth, Earl R. Savedge, William P. Smith, George H. Timmerman, Earl Trimbley, John A. Younkin, all USA; Fireman, second class, Henry Keiper, USN.

Mr. Davis' address follows:

In behalf of the people of Garrett county, I wish to thank the War Memorial Commission for the opportunity of participating in this memorial service and in the dedication of this magnificent memorial to Maryland's heroes.

The boys from Garrett county whose names appear on these walls are dear to us. They are a part of us, the very fiber of our soil. To them we owe a debt, and it is fitting that we should perpetuate their memory as we are here doing this evening.

Our obligation to them does not end, however, in the erection of monuments and the placing of tablets to their memory. We think of the inscription in marble and bronze as eternal, but in a larger sense only the impressions made upon the hearts of men and women really live. To these boys whose names appear here we are pledged to the task of so inpressing upon the hearts and minds of the present and future generations the futility, the waste and the dreadful consequences of war that the peace for which they died will be an enduring peace. And as by their sacrifice the flag of our nation became an emblem of justice for humanity, so must we continue to be foremost among the nations of the world as the champion of justice, liberty and peace for all people.

We in Garrett county are peace loving. We think peace, talk peace and in our humble way pray for peace. Not the peace obtained by might, continued by fear and only realized at death, but that peace brought about by a broad understanding and appreciation of human character, by international cooperation and by the practice of the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. And should this priceless peace be threatened and the clouds of war darken our horizon, again will Garrett county come forth, not in idle words and phrases, but with her brawn and her brain represented by the sons and daughters of the boys in khaki, that life, liberty and the pursuit of happincss, once declared the inherent right of men, and for which these boys died, shall not be trampled in the dust.

GRAND JURY DISCHARGED AT NOON ON FILING REPORT

Body Found Sixty-Seven Indictments After A Session of Four Days; Ninety-seven Witnesses

CRIMINAL COURT MONDAY

Upon filing its report just before noon today with Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, who has been occupying the bench in the Circuit Court during the week, the grand jury, which has been in session since Monday morning was discharged from further duty at this time.

During its four-day session the grand jury had before it and examined ninety-seven witnesses and found sixty-seven presentments and indictments.

Judge Sloan upon receiving the report from the foreman of the jury thanked that body for its diligence and application to duty and then issued their discharge. Judge Sloan will return to Cumberland this afternoon.

Upon reconvening court on Monday the criminal docket will be taken up.

The report of the grand jury is as follows:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland:

The grand jury for the June Term, 1931, of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, hereby submit the following report:

We have been in session for the past four days and have had before us and examined ninety-seven witnesses and found sixty-seven presentments and indictments.

From the information received there appear to be many infractions of the criminal laws at this time, although the violators, in most instances, have been apprehended. The laws are being enforced throughout the county and the officers in authority in the various sections are to be commended for their efforts in this regard.

In accordance with instructions received from Judge Sloan, we have made inspection of the Court House and surroundings and the Sheriff's residence and Jail and surroundings and find them all to be in good condition.

We have examined the various books and records in the several offices and find them neatly and correctly kept insofar as we have been able to ascertain. We desire in this connection to thank the officials and clerks in charge for the kind attention shown us during our examination of the several offices.

In making our inspection of the Jail we find sanitary conditions to be very good and the prisoners well cared for. We find, however, that there is no means of refrigeration in the Jail for the protection of food and we recommend and urge that an electric refrigerator be placed in the Jail at once so that the food can be taken care of and the health of the prisoners better protected and in our opinion this should not be delayed as the matter is of vital importance, particularly at this season of the year.

We also recommend that a two-car garage be erected in the rear of the Jail for the use of the Sheriff, as there is no place at all at his disposal for the storage of his car, and it is necessary that they be on the premises so that he can have them ready at short notice.

We are grateful to Judge Sloan for the many courtesies shown us during this session of the grand jury.

We also wish to thank Walter W. Dawson, State's Attorney, for the help he has given us during our deliberations.

HENRY P. MILLER, Foreman.
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
ERNEST N. FRIEND, Clerks.

Matchless economy with six-cylinder smoothness

"Better than 20 miles to the gallon." "Its cost-per-mile is the lowest of any car." "Never have to add oil between crankcase changes." "Drove from Ohio to California on a repair expense of $1.05." "It just runs and runs and runs."

—typical comments from owners of the Chevrolet Six

Chevrolet's 152" frame supports the body throughout its entire length

Why is it that Chevrolet—a big, powerful, smooth-running six—actually costs less to operate and maintain than any other car you can buy? The answer lies in five outstanding factors of Chevrolet economy:

1. Efficient Engine Design makes Chevrolet fuel consumption so low that 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline is nothing unusual for a Chevrolet owner.

2. Modern Chassis Design—as evidenced by Chevrolet's long heavy frame, four parallel-mounted springs, and smooth-running six-cylinder engine—increases the ability of the Chevrolet Six to run dependably, day after day.

3. Excellence of Manufacture also adds to Chevrolet dependability and long life. Chevrolet pistons, for instance, are built so carefully, and held true to such close limits of precision, that many owners have gone 20,000 miles or more without having their motors opened for major servicing.

Chevrolet's pistons are built to close limits of precision

4. High-Quality Materials are used throughout the Chevrolet car—costly nickel steel, chrome-vanadium steels, chrome-nickel steels—to assure trouble-free, low-cost service for tens of thousands of miles.

5. Economical Nationwide Service, with its low flat-rate charges on labor and genuine parts, is available at 10,000 dealers throughout the country, who also offer the protection of the most liberal owner's service policy ever to back a low-priced car.

Chevrolet's Owner's Service Policy is the most liberal ever offered in connection with a low-priced car

Remember—in addition to all these basic economies—Chevrolet offers the extra dollars-and-cents advantage of one of the lowest delivered prices on the market. And this cost may be spread over a period of many months by the liberal G.M.A.C. plan.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

The City manager of Cincinnati in the Rotarian Magazine for the current month of June, writes that "chain stores make large contributions to community chests and other charitable and civic efforts. Local representatives are urged to participate actively in community undertakings."

Maybe there's a law against such practices in Maryland, because there's never been any such show of civic interest in or about Garrett county on the part of chain stores.

Elmer Ault is hunting for a company which will insure him against poisoning by deadly insects and such. And he is also putting a high price on the next tarantula he captures. The Rum and Bugle Corps

The story comes out of Grafton that while the bottle-scarred members of the drum and bugle eorps were marching along the main alley of that municipality, somebody noticed the very youthful appearance of Di-di Jim Nordeck, and scoffed at the idea that he had been in the war. Jute Littman, not to be outdone, replied, "Madam, he is one of the war orphans we picked up overseas."

And if madam had looked a little closer she might have seen three other "war orphans"—Russ, Bob and Bus.

Tom Compton said the marching of the corps was improving as a whole and individually. He said Ed. Lawrence was out of step only once during the entire parade. Ed's chest swelled out until it looked as big as Paul Beckwith's, until Tom finished the sentence—"that once was all during the parade."

How these people can get into a swimming suit and make a flying dash for the water is beyond me, and yet they outnumber the ones who ease in by degrees by about five to one, or in other words four out of every five have "w. a." (water appeal).

I took my first ducking of the year least Saturday morning (it just came on Saturday by chance) and it took me thirteen eases and one jerk to get in up to my neck, and then the rest was easy. I don't know why submerging the solar plexus causes more goose pimples than can be found in a whole flock of honkers, but it does. And after the solar plexus come the shoulders.

To hear me tell about it Saturday afternoon, though, you would have included me in the "w. a" list—that is, unless you knew me as well as you ought to.

Here He Is As Is

People of the Bittinger section are profoundly disappointed. Last Sunday when Col. Bell was down there gettin' a photy somebody told Mrs. Colonel that they had read about Col. Bell in The Republican for so long they had him pictured as a distingulshed gentleman with a goatee, a mustache, high silk hat and swallow tall coat and were too full of disappointment for words at the real honest to goodness image.

Scoop is sorry for this mistake and in order that noone else will make the same error, a special picture of the Col. was taken as he was watering his garden the other evening.

DOING THE IMPOSSIBLE

LOTS of things are supposed to be impossible. For example, being in two places at the same time, or making the old dollar go as far as it used to. But there is a very simple way to accomplish both of these.

The answer is standing right on your desk. It's your telephone. It will carry you hundreds of miles, yet you won't have to move from your chair. You can be in two places at the same time in just a matter of seconds. And never were out-of-town rates cheaper than today, nor transmission as clear, nor connections as fast.

To enable you to reach anyone, anywhere, at any time, quickly, clearly, and at a reasonable cost, is the constant aim of this company and the other associate companies of the Bell System.

Make station-to-station calls and you can talk about 25 miles for 25 cents, 50 miles for 45 cents, 100 miles for 60 cents. The greater the distance the less the cost per mile.

LONELINESS INSURANCE

We can buy insurance policies to protect ourselves against loss by fire, theft, tornado and most other causes of human distress, but money will not buy an escape from that most poignant of all miseries, a lonely old age. Friendship is the one and only insurance in the world against the tragedy of loneliness.

Loneliness is terrible. If you want to see how terrible loneliness can be, walk down a forgotten city street and look into the swimming eyes of the gray old men as they go from door to door seeking employment. Visit a dowdy park at twilight or any of the rendezvous of desolate men whose feet have slipped. If you think they aren't lonely, win their confidence with a good cigar and talk to them of "home."

Wise old Sam Johnson was never wiser than when he told Boswell:

"If a man does not make new acquaintances as he passes through life he will soon find himself alone. A man should keep his friendships in constant repair."

Napoleon did not follow Johnson's advice. The secret of his life is not in his utterances on great occasions nor in his studied letters. It is found in a chance remark, made when for a moment his cloak of glamor slipped from him.

"After all," he said, "I care only for people who are useful to me, and so long as they are useful." And again, "I have made courtiers, I have never pretended to make friends."

If Napoleon had so cared, he might have made many friends and had he kept his friendships in repair he would not have died in a crazy old shanty, alone.

One does not purchase devotion except with the stuff of fellowship—that extra word of appreciation, a visit to the hospital, the assurance of loyalty when the horizon is overcast.

It pays to keep friendships in repair. And the only way ever discovered to have a friend is to be one.—The Rotarian Magazine.

ALIENS BARRED OUT

Congress failed to provide additional protection for American workmen at its last session, but the administration is making up for that failure by excluding aliens who are likely to become public charges. Sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of relieving workingmen from alien competition during this period of unemployment, but the cumbersome wheels of legislation were not fast enough to turn out the necessary law before the Seventy-first Congress expired. It appears, however, that a substantial cut in immigration will be made this year by administrative means.

The law provides that aliens likely to become public charges may be excluded, even though the national quotas under which their applications are made have not been filled. President Hoover took the attitude that every laborer who comes to America during the depression is liable to become a public charge. In view of the widespread unemployment, foreigners can not find work in the United States unless they displace Americans by offering to work for lower wages. For the last five months aliens have been rigidly examined as to their prospects of self-maintenance. The result has been a drastic reduction in the number of visas issued.

The White House estimates that nearly 100,000 aliens have been kept out by this means. In 21 countries having annual quotas of 148,466, only 10,227 visas were issued during the five months ended with February. This is a reduction of 86 per cent. Even more drastic cuts were made in the eligibility lists of smaller countries under the quota system. Similar results have been obtained in the non-quota countries of this hemisphere. In five months the visas allowed to Canadians were reduced to 3,876 as compared with 15,997 for the same period last year, a decline of 76 per cent. During the same period Mexican immigration was cut down from nearly 20,000 to 884, a reduction of 95 per cent.

This achievement will not be overlooked by the workingmen of America. Without any red tape or delay, the President solved the problem of alien competition while legislators were jockeying with political considerations. It is not surprising that groups in need of emergency relief turn more to the President and less to Congress.

Secretary Doak has set about to deport 100,000 aliens who came to the United States under the guise of seamen. Congress also had an opportunity to correct this situation, but the bill was lost in the shuffle. The Supreme Court has decided that bogus seamen are subject to deportation, and the Department of Labor has a free hand in dealing with them. It is unfortuate that the Government must spend large sums of money to deport these aliens while Congress allows other bogus seamen to be smuggled in at the rate of 40,000 a year.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Town Council of Oakland held its regular monthly meeting and fixed the annual levy at 35 cents on the one hundred dollars worth of property. The estimated expenses of the municipality was as follows: For street lighting, $660; streets and sidewalks, $800; attorney, $25; commissions for collecting taxes, $98; bailiff, $300; night policeman, $460; salaries of councilmen, mayor, treasurer and clerk, $280; contingent expenses, $480.

Four companies for the purpose of mining silver in Garrett county were incorporated under the laws of the State of Maryland following the reported discovery of silver on the Savage River. These corporations were known as the Silver Bell Mining Company, Savage Mountain Mining Company, Silver Brick Company, and the Samuel J. Miller Silver Company. Five tracts of land were leased by the companies thus formed and a reported silver strike in the region created a bit of excitement.

Henry Sines, Deep Creek, brought to Oakland fifteen pounds of the finest specimens of brook and rainbow trout seen in town in many a long day.

Among those mentioned in local items in that issue of The Republican were Mahlon Schooley, of Deer Park; George W. Loughridge, Mrs. L. H. Karn, Mrs. Fleckenstein, Mrs. King Delawder, Miss Mollie Peddicord, Mr. A. G. Sturgiss, S. T. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bush, Mrs. James W. Leathers, Jacob Feik, Misses Hattie White and Carrie Browning, T. W. Casteel, W. A. Wonderly, J. J. Beeghley, William Ravenscroft and Mrs. Ravenscroft.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Thrown from the platform by the sudden starting of a street car in Baltimore, Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft was dragged for half a block and seriously injured.

Dr. Henry W. McComas was at the head of a movement for a Fourth of July celebration in Oakland. Plans were being made for two balloon ascensions, two baseball games, a monster carnival parade, three bands and a grand display of fireworks.

Among the callers at The Republican office during their stay in Oakland where they were attending the sessions of the Circuit Court were Messrs. Salathiel Savage, Fred. G. Fox, W. H. H. Friend, Jr., George J. Kolb, Friendsville; Lyman Frazee, H. J. Speicher, Silas Teats and son Juniper Teats, Accident; C. C. Beachy, Bittinger; C. J. Otto, New Germany, and others.

A number of members of Oakland lodge of Masons went to Cumberland to participate in the services attending the laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic Temple. Among them were N. U. Bond, S. G. Ashby, F. E. Rathbun, Dr. N. I. Broadwater, Jos. E. Harned, B. H. Sincell, Oakland; William Miller and C. A. Jones, Deer Park.

An Interesting Fact

Price Fixing and Reducing Production of Commodities Not a New Theory

In times of business recession and economic stress, publicists herald in the halls of Congress and through the press as newly discovered theories on which curative, or at least pallative, measures may be based. But when these so-called new theories are placed under the strong light of historical facts, we may well consider that "there is nothing new under the sun."

In the present era much is said as to "freezing prices" in times of a national emergency; of the fixing of prices of commodities, at a maximum or a minimum; of the reduction of the planted acreage of wheat, cotton, corn or other crops. These are far from new theories.

In 1666, the Governors of Carolina, Virginia and Maryland, finding that the reckless planting and cultivation of tobacco, that crop "by which the Province doth at present subsist," had caused an over production, as a result of which all markets were glutted, caused to be proclaimed a year's total cessation of its planting. In April of that year (1666) the Assembly of Maryland enacted that from and after the first day of February, 1667, until the first day of February, 1668, "no tobacco shall be sown, set, planted or in any way tended within this Province of Maryland."

This being a matter of supreme importance to the people at large, and as no doubt many evidently believed, one that would interfere with their "personal liberty" (a familiar phrase to our ears even at this date), a committee was appointed to secure, for the first time for any purpose, united action of the three mid-Atlantic Colonies. Cooperation among the three seemed assured until the matter was referred to the Proprietary for his approval. He turned a deaf ear to the proposal and refused his assent, giving as his reason the "inconvenience which may follow, not only to the poorer sort of planters within our said Province, but also the King's most excellent Majesty in relation to his Majesty's customs."

The last reason, we may surmise, was an adroit move on the part of Lord Baltimore to win to his support the ministers of the mother country. In any event, this first effort to secure colonial cooperation in economic matters failed, as did the later attempts in 1681 and 1682. Nature, however, stepped in and created the proper balance in 1667, which is known as the "year of the hurricane," in which, it is recorded, fifteen thousand houses in Virginia were blown down and three-fourths of the tobacco crop destroyed.

STYLES IN FRAMES FOR EYEGLASSES SUGGESTED

Those Most Becoming to the Individual Should Be Worn

By Dr. J. Fred. Andreae.

Today appearance count, and so one does not like to disfigure himself with unsightly glasses. If it is necessary for an individual to wear glasses, he should select that which is most becoming. It is indeed an art properly to select the right style of frame for each individual. The practitioner who writes the prescription for the lenses is perhaps the best judge as to the style most becoming to the the individual.

The power of the lens is sometimes a factor to be considered in prescribing certain types of frames. In children the most rigid frame is essential, and with children style perhaps is not quite so much of a factor, though it should not, by any means, be overlooked. It should be remembered, however, that the bones of the child's nose are very delicate and constantly growing. Hence it is necessary that the frame be properly fitted and adjusted to the child so that no deformity may result from faulty pressure on the structure of the nose.

It can readily be understood from all this that the proper selection and fitting of spectacles is an art that requires the services of a specialist. Fortunately, the changes in the design of spectacles have tended to make glasses more popular and have helped remove the ancient prejudice against them. No longer does the person fastidious about his appearance have to worry, as he used to, about the possibility of obtaining glasses that are becoming to him. In many instances a pair of glasses enhances rather than detracts from the appearance. The proper type of glasses may add dignity and stylishness to the appearance. Such glasses are an asset to many professional men, because the wearing of glasses creates an impression of intelligence; and, truly, is not the wearing of glasses a definite sign of intelligence when eye sight correction is needed? The lawyer, the doctor, the optometrist and the banker are usually pictured in drama and literature as wearers of glasses.

It is not our desire to emphasize the style element in glasses as against the proper fitting of glasses. Naturally the fundamental, basic value of a pair of glasses always comes from the proper fitting of the lenses. Therefore, in the last analysis, style is a secondary factor; but as pointed out above, is a decidedly important factor.

JESUS CRUCIFIED

GOLDEN TEXT—But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 23:33-46.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Death on the Cross.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Taking the World's Guilt.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We Owe to the Lord Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love's Supreme Sacrifice.

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33).

They led Jesus away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. Calvary is the Latin word and Golgotha is the Hebrew. This is a most significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as the result of sin—life and intelligence gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern which once contained them. Jesus was not crucified in the city for he was to suffer without the gate (Heb. 13:12).

II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 33).

Two malefactors were crucified with him. This was in fulfillment of the Scripture. "He was numbered among the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12). He was sinless, but became sin for us.

III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34).

He cried, "Father forgive them." He not only had in mind the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime.

IV. The World Revealed (vv. 34-43).

Jesus Christ on the cross is the supreme touchstone of human life. It is at the cross that the world's heart is revealed. Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified, and representatives of the various classes therein were found around Jesus on the cross. In a real sense the cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The Covetous (v. 34). They gambled for his seamless robe right under the cross where he was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain. If they had had eyes to see they could have beheld a robe of righteousness being provided in his death to cover their sinful nakedness.

2. The Indifferent (v. 35). "The people stood beholding." They gazed upon him with indifference. The great mass of the world still gazes upon the Crucified with stolid indifference.

3. The scoffers (vv. 35-39).

a. The rulers reviled him for his claim to be the Savior (v. 35). They wanted a savior but not a crucified savior. Many today are religious but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in an atonement made by blood. They uttered a great truth when they said, "He saved others, let him save himself." He could not save himself and others, because God's plan was to save others by giving himself.

b. The soldiers reviled him for claiming to be a king (vv. 36, 37). The title "King of the Jews" had been placed over him in bitter irony, but it was true, for by right of the Davidic Covenant he shall one day be King over Israel (II Sam. 7:8-10). Through his death he came into the place of Lordship over all who will acknowledge him. The fact that the superscription was in Greek, Hebrew, and Latin shows that he was to be King over all the world.

c. The impenitent malefactor (v. 39). This brutal man joined in reviling the Savior, even though he personally was under condemnation.

4. The penitent malefactor (vv. 40-43). This conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Savior prayed for mercy. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. The fact that he acknowledged his sin as against God showed that he was penitent. His request for Christ to remember him when he came into his kingdom shows that he recognized that the One who was dying on the cross was making atonement for sin and that he would one day come to reign as King. The salvation of this penitent thief was immediate. Christ said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (vv. 44-46.)

So shocking was the crime that nature herself threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide him from the godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. When the price of sin had been paid, he cried with a loud voice, showing that he still had vitality, that his death was not through exhaustion but by his will.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That for the purpose of establishing, constructing and maintaining water works capable of furnishing the residents of said town with a good and sufficient supply of water for ordinary purposes and for fire protection, the Mayor and Council of Grantsville be and they are hereby authorized and empowered and directed to issue bonds in the name of the Mayor and Council of Grantsville to an amount not exceeding $25,000.00, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purposes aforesaid. The said bonds shall be for sums not less than $500.00 each, nor more than $1,000.00 each, to be signed by the Mayor and President of the Council and countersigned by the clerk of the said Mayor and Council with the corporate seal of said town thereto affixed, bearing interest at not more than five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually in each and every year and dated on the first day of their issue. The said bonds shall be numbered serially. Bond No. 1 shall be due and payable three years from date of issue, and thereafter each bond shall mature and be payable each consecutive year from the maturity of Bond No. 1 in the order of their consecutive numbers; provided, however, the Mayor and Council of Grantsville are hereby given the option to redeem any or all bonds outstanding ten years from date of issue; that all of said bonds issued as aforesaid shall be due and payable within twenty-seven years from the date of their issue, and shall be forever exempt from all county and municipal taxation for any purpose, and shall have printed on them a reference to the Act of Assembly authorizing the issue thereof.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Mayor and Council of Grantsville are hereby authorized and empowered to construct and erect water works and sewerage from said town, and to contract for the purchase in fee simple or lease for a term of years, renewable at their pleasure, any land, real estate, springs, brooks, water courses, streams, and to use and occupy forever or for a term of years any land, real estate, springs, brooks, water courses or streams which they may deem expedient and necessary for the purpose of furnishing said town with water, and they are hereby invested with all the rights and powers necessary for the induction of water into said town. If for any cause the said Mayor and Council shall be unable to agree with any owner of real or leasehold property, springs, brooks, water streams or water courses or any other material which partakes of or is a necessary part of realty, or for any right of way which they may find necessary for the conduct of said water system in its entirety into or in said town, or if such owner is under any disability or incapacity to contract or absent out of the county or unknown, the said Mayor and Council of Grantsville is hereby clothed with the power of condemnation under the right of eminent domain as provided in the Public General Laws of Maryland as fully as if the provisions of said laws had been herein incorporated. The said Mayor and Council of Grantsville shall have full power to fix schedules of rates for furnishing water and sewerage to private residences and other buildings, and the said Mayor and Council shall have power to collect the same as other taxes are collected and the income thereof shall be applied, first, for expenses and maintenance and afterwards for the payment of the interest on the bonds and a sinking fund to meet the bonds at maturity.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the title to said water works and all land, estates and water courses, waterways, conduits, pipes, machinery and all other parts thereto shall, when completed or acquired, vest in the Mayor and Council of Grantsville; and every person who shall knowingly or wilfully pollute any spring, streams, brooks, watercourse, reservoir or standpipe in connection with the said water works so built or constructed by throwing any impure or deleterious substance or thing into the same, or by swimming, bathing or washing themselves, or by washing clothes or any other thing therein, or by committing any nuisance in or near the sources of supply of the reservoir or standpipe for said water works so as to pollute the same shall, upon conviction of such offense, be liable to a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than three hundred dollars for each offense, to be recovered by the Mayor and Council of Grantsville before a justice of the peace as other fines are recovered, or to imprisonment in the county jail or House of Correction for a term of not less than six months nor more than eighteen months, or both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the justice of the peace, one-half of such fine to go to the Informer and the balance to the Mayor and Council of Grantsville for the purposes of this act.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of redeeming said bonds at their maturity and for securing the prompt payment of the interest thereon, the Mayor and Council of Grantsville shall for the year of the issue of said bonds and annually thereafter until the maturity of said bonds, levy a tax on the assessable property of said town not exceeding twenty-five cents on the one hundred dollars to pay the interest thereon, and the sum of one thousand dollars for the principal of said debt for the payment of the same at maturity. The said sum of one thousand dollars shall be held and invested by the Mayor and Council of Grantsville as a sinking fund for the redemption of said bonds at their maturity; and the said Mayor and Council of Grantsville shall from time to time deposit the money belonging to said sinking fund and the increment thereof in some safe depository which pays interest on deposits, or shall invest the same in State or other bonds satisfactory to the Mayor and Council of Grantsville as to them may seem best, or in the purchase or redemption of any of said bonds as may be offered for sale and redemption, and upon the purchase of nny such bonds by the said Mayor and Council they shall be immediately cancelled by stamping across their face (Cancelled by the sinking fund), and no portion of said sinking fund so levied shall ever be diverted to any other purpose than to the purchase and liquidation of said bonds. The money collected each year by the treasurer or tax collector on account of taxes to the extent of said sum of one thousand dollars shall be set apart for said sinking fund, and a separate account shall be kept thereof and be deposited to the credit of said fund, and no part of which shall be chargeable to insolvencies on account of failure of assessments or collections.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the money arising from the sale of said bonds (which bonds shall be sold either at auction or by sealed bids or at private sale in the discretion of the Mayor and Council) shall be deposited in banks to the credit of said Mayor and Council of Grantsville and subject to their check, and the clerk of said town of Grantsville shall keep a book to be specially provided for the purpose of recording the names and addresses of the purchasers of the bonds sold and the amount realized on the sales, together with the serial number of the bonds.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That in any prosecution before a Justice of the Peace under Section 3 of this Act, the accused and the Mayor and Council of Grantsville shall have the right to appeal to the Circuit Court for Garrett County within thirty days to a jury trial. Any person or persons convicted before a Justice of the Peace under Section 3 of this Act who shall pray an appeal to the said Court, shall be held by recognizance or be committed to the county jail to appear before the next regular jury term of the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act be and the same are hereby repealed to the extent of their inconsistency, provided that nothing herein contained shall be taken as affecting Chapter 810 of the Acts of Assembly of 1914, nor as restricting any control which the State Board of Health of Maryland is empowered to exercise within the corporate limits of said town.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That this Act is hereby declared to be an emergency law and necessary for the immediate preservation of the public health and safety, and being passed upon a yea and nay vote, supported by three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses of the General Assembly, the same shall take effect from the date of its passage.

CHAPTER XIX

Breakfasting with me in Paris November 4, 1917, the British prime minister, Mr. Lloyd George, referred to the Italian defeat at Caporetto as being a most serious disaster, and pointed out that sending British and French divisions to Italy had materially weakened the lines in France. Mr. Lloyd George also spoke at some length on the lack of concerted action among the allied armies.

I agreed with him and added that in my opinion there never had been real co-operation on the western front between the British and French, that when one was attacking the other was usually standing still, and that the Germans were thus left free to concentrate their reserves against the threatened point.

We were facing a grave crisis next year, if not sooner, said Mr. Lloyd George, and no one knew how it was to be met. The enemy might attack each one separately, with the same results as in the case of Italy. He then asked what I thought of creating a supreme war council.

Having in mind councils called to decide upon military operations in the field, I told him that the advice of war councils was not usually of any great value and that the proposition did not appeal to me. I said that authority should be vested somewhere to co-ordinate the operations on the western front, and suggested the possibility of having a supreme commander.

Lloyd George Favors Council.

Mr. Lloyd George replied, in effect, that it was unlikely that the allies would agree upon any one, as the French would object to any but a Frenchman and the British might not like that. He thought the council would be useful for the purpose primarily of bringing the heads of the allied governments together at intervals to determine general policies.

I admitted that such an organization might serve to unite the allies in common purpose, but that the conduct of operations by the combined armies should be under military direction. I got the distinct impression that while he was seeking to secure greater unity of action, he also sought some means of controlling the activities of the British army. During previous months that army had been engaged in almost continuous offensive operations, practically single-handed, with very heavy losses and few compensating advantages.

Mr. Lloyd George went on to say that there was to be a meeting of the prime ministers at Rapallo, Italy, and that he hoped they might reach some agreement that would result in a council such as he had in mind. He thought that the United States ought to be represented at this meeting and suggested that I should attend. As the purpose of a council seemed to be more for political co-ordination than for purely military control, I told him that it seemed best for me not to participate without some intimation from my government to do so.

In the afternoon, at M. Painleve's request, I called on him, and he also told me of the proposal to form a supreme war council and wanted me to go to the conference in Italy. I gave him the same reply that I had given Mr. Lloyd George.

Shortly thereafter the Rapallo meeting was held, resulting in an agreement among the prime ministers of the governments participating, Great Britain, France and Italy.

Approved by Wilson.

The creation of the council did not meet with universal approval, the commanders of the British and French armies and high officials in civil circles being opposed to it. Military commanders were afraid it would result in undue interference with the conduct of operations and in derision it was often referred to as the soviet.

The action of the three governments at Rapallo was approved by President Wilson November 17 and that fact appeared in the press a day or so later.

The President's action strengthened the hands of those who favored the council and probably became the influence that saved it.

The fact is that if the French and British army commanders, in a friendly spirit of co-operation, had made a joint study of the military problem of the western front as a whole and then had seriously undertaken to pull together, as though under one control, the supreme war council would never have been born.

The supreme war council made a favorable start and gave the impression that a wise and conservative exercise of its really unlimited powers would characterize its actions. It refrained from interfering directly with military commanders and operations and confined itself largely to questions of policy, such as the co-ordination of allied resources and the conservation and distribution of allied strength. However, as time went on, the supreme war council assumed greater and greater authority over military questions.

Conflict With Wilson Ideals.

As to the political situation, the undercurrent at the moment, as nearly as could be learned, showed a continued lack of accord among the different nations, which were not at all in agreement with President Wilson's ideals. Each had its own aspirations and each sought to gain some advantage over the others. Some of the divergent war aims had to do with territory distant from France and troops were sent that might have been more usefully employed on the western front.

In a letter to Secretary of War Baker I inclosed a memorandum which was a report of a conversation held by a man in my confidence with a British official high up in the counsel of Great Britain. The date of this conversation was October 24, 1917.

"Perhaps it should not be taken too seriously," I wrote, "but it is an indication of the British attitude."

Sees Difference in Aims.

In this conversation the British official declared:

"The European allies and America are not fighting for the same thing. Mr. Wilson thinks a great deal more of his ideas of people governing themselves, of a friendly working arrangement among all the great powers after the war, than he does of territorials or specific things going to this or that country. What he wants is to smash the German military power and have a society of democratic nations afterwards. But to England, France and Italy these things are phrases, useful, perhaps, but of secondary interest.

"England wants to maintain her colonial possessions to keep her position on the sea, and her commercial place in the world. We know what France wants—Alsace Lorraine, as indemnity and security for the future.

Italy has definite territorial claims. Thus the governments of these countries think a great deal about what they want for themselves and less about ideals, unless these ideals are incidental to success. So there is no clear unity among the allies in Europe and America."

CHAPTER XX

Soon after the First division entered a quiet sector of the Vosges the peaceful aspect of the situation was disturbed by a German raid on an isolated post of the Sixteenth infantry November 3, 1917. A group was caught in a box barrage and although the men made a courageous resistance, three were killed, five wounded and twelve captured.

These were the first casualties that had occurred in our army to units serving in the trenches. The dead were Corporal James B. Gresham and Privates Thomas F. Enright and Merle D. Hay, all of company F.

The French took charge of the funerals and turned out a formal guard in addition to our own. The services were conducted by the French general, Bordenux, who came with his full staff and delivered a beautiful oration over the graves. A large number of French troops also came informally to pay their final tribute. This joint homage to our dead there under the fire of the guns seemed to symbolize the common sacrifices we were to make in the same great cause.

Ammunition Question Acute.

The ammunition question again became acute at that time, despite our agreements with the French and their positive assurances that they would make prompt deliveries, but their explanation was that we had not furnished the full amount of raw material required.

In my early reference to the prospects of procuring artillery of 75mm. and 155mm. calibers and ammunition for its use, it had been expected that nothing should diminish our efforts at home in their manufacture, but when the probability of delay and possibly failure of the French to furnish ammunition for these guns was reported to Washington my cable met the complacent reply, much to my surprise, that "the French government must furnish it, for there is no other way of getting it. At the present time there is not in this country any actual output of ammunition of the types mentioned. None has been expected."

Home Ports Overcrowded.

The difficulty of providing the French with raw material was largely traceable to the lack of shipping, and, of course, the unscientific use of what we had. The fact is that the ports at home were overcrowded with all sorts of material and supplies awaiting vessels. The French had over 000,000 tons of supplies at seaboard, which they were unable to move, and were clamoring for 150,000 tons additional of steel rails.

As the situation in which we found ourselves regarding artillery ammunition was approaching a crisis, it became necessary to lay the whole question before the interallied munitions board. After a full investigation of their resources, both the French and British concluded that they could undertake to meet our requirements, with the distinct understanding that their plants must be greatly increased in capacity and that we should furnish raw materials promptly.

The late Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, chief of the War department general staff, represented us in the allied conference and reported results and agreements reached. He had brought the latest data from home and his knowledge concerning steel and munitions enabled him to give valuable assistance to my chief of ordnance in our efforts to find a solution to the difficult munitions problem.

A letter from Secretary of War Baker, dated September 10, had only recently been received, and gave me an idea of some of his problems. In part he wrote as follows:

"I am especially concerned that our troops should not be engaged in actual fighting in France until they are there in such numbers and have made such thorough preparation that their first appearance will be encouraging both to their own morale and to the spirit of our people here. I think it goes without saying that the Germans will make a very special effort to strike swiftly and strongly against any part of the line which we undertake to defend, in order to be able to report to their people encouragingly about our participation and also with the object of discouraging our soldiers and our people as much as possible.

"In the matter of selecting corps and division commanders I constantly feel that I ought to have your advice and judgment. From all that you have said, supplemented by all I have learned elsewhere, the need for young and physically strong men is apparent and I am perfectly willing to go any limit in meeting this requirement.

"It will, of course, necessitate passing over a substantial number of our older generals who are very eager to go to France and who, in their own ideas and that of the country, have certain right to be preferred. But their occupation here in the training of troops is, of course, a valuable contribution to the cause and, whenever I can feel sure in the selection of the younger man that he actually has the capacity to develop to a sufficient extent to justify his being preferred to a man of greater experience I shall not hesitate."

Mobilizing of Army Delayed.

In view of the emergency that was so clearly set forth by the Joffre and Balfour missions when they visited the United States, and which was confirmed after my arrival in France and reported with all emphasis, I have never been able to understand the unnecessary delay caused by waiting six months for the construction of large cantonments before calling out men and assembling them for training.

Of course it was particularly urgent that the specialists and laborers needed in France to build up our facilities should have been provided as fast as they could be profitably employed, but nothing should have postponed the immediate mobilization of the combat units of the regular army and the National Guard.

ORIGIN OF MAPLE SUGAR INDUSTRY IS EXPLAINED

Maryland Forestry Bulletin Compares Season Recently Closed

"From Maryland's far western county, high in the Allegany Mountains, comes the word that the mountaineers have just had a most successful maple products season," says the Maryland State Department of Forestry in a news bulletin just issued.

John H. Carter, County Agricultural Agent, reports that the production season has been exceptionally good, although drawn out over an unusually long period of time. The letter continues:

"The collection of maple sap for 1931 terminated abruptly on April 15, when warm weather disrupted further sap production.

"The Garrett County Maple Products Association, a cooperative organization of maple producers, organized through the efforts of the Maryland Extension Forestry and the Extension Service, is for the second consecutive year selling their syrup according to grades under Federal-State Inspection and under a fully protected trade name. This cooperative association is having a very successful year and hopes to progress further in standardizing the products of the Maryland maple syrup industry.

"The origin of this important Garrett County industry dates back to the time of the Indians. Just how long they knew of maple syrup and sugar is not known, but the earliest record seems to be 1673. It is definitely known that the earliest explorers in America found the Indians making sugar from the sap of maple trees, and in some sections, especially along the St. Lawrence River, producing it in quantity for trade. The crude methods of the Indians were soon improved upon by the white man, but beyond the tapping and boiling the general process is still the same as it was at that time.

"For many years, especially among the early settlers of the northern part of the United States, and even in Kentucky, Virginia and Western Maryland, maple sugar was the only sugar used. Some makers attempted to secure a product equal to the imported cane sugar, or muscovado, of the West Indies, with varying degrees of success. A few refineries for producing white sugar were operated with maple sugar as their raw supply. The iron kettle, birch bark tank, wooden spiles and the old way of tapping trees, yielded a dark, ill-tasting product, but with care and changes in methods and equipment the products have been improved.

"The crude methods of the Indians consisted of cutting large notches in the bark and inserting chips to direct the flow into vessels made of clay or bark, much of the sap being lost in this manner. After collecting the sap the Indians placed it in a large vessel and 'boiled it down' by repeatedly dropping hot stones into it, which of course produced a very dark syrup. Their method of making sugar was by putting the syrup in shallow vessels and allowing it to freeze. The ice was then skimmed off and thrown away, continuing this process until the syrup became sufficiently refined to crystallize.

"Of course the early settlers at first followed the methods of the Indians, but they soon began to make improvements. The first change was the cutting of circular holes in the bark instead of the notches used by the Indians. The circular holes enabled the use of wooden spouts instead of chips, thereby conserving the collection of the sap. Also, the white man substituted copper, iron or wooden receptacles for catching the sap. As a later development, holes about one inch in diameter were bored into the trees with augers and in these were inserted hollow or half-round spouts of sumac or alder.

"In boiling down the sap, the settlers at first used large iron kettles in the open woods without shelter from the weather, resulting in a syrup full of impurities and very dark in color. Sugar was produced by continuing the boiling process until the sap reached a waxy consistency when it was then dropped in the snow and immediately placed in small moulds for it to crytallize.

"Since those days, modern methods have developed and the Garrett County Maple Products Association is promoting the latest improvements. Trees are now tapped with an auger about 7-16 of an inch in diameter in the spring just before the flow of sap begins. Metal spiles are inserted, metal buckets are hung directly on the spile and efficient covers are used on all collecting receptacles, thus insuring a clean and attractive product. Collection of the sap in the woods is accomplished by means of a covered metal tank mounted on a sled. All sap is carefully strained as it is poured from the collection buckets into the tank. The 'boiling down' of the sap is now accomplished in a building with modern equipment. A flat pan is used which has partitions in it which are open at alternate ends which permits the sap to flow slowly in a meandering course from one end of the pan to the other, the flow being regulated so that in its progress it is gradually boiled down to the proper consistency. This is attained when the syrup reaches a temperature of 219 degrees Fahrenheit. The syrup drawn off at this temparture weighs 11 pounds per gallon, which weight is required by the trained inspectors. About one barrel of sap is required to make one gallon of syrup or 7½ pounds of sugar. When the syrup is drawn off the inspectors test it, grade it as to color and quality and it is sealed in tin cans of one gallon or one-half gallon sizes or in glass jars of one to two quart sizes.

"When sugar is made the syrup is heated until it is so thick it pours slowly or becomes waxy in cold water. This occurs at a temperature of 230 degrees Fahrenheit. When it reaches this temperature it is drawn off into moulds.

"There are now twenty-two States and Canada producing maple syrup and sugar, while, in addition, Kansas produces small quantities of sugar only. For many years Maryland has produced something over 50,000 gallons of syrup, which has been gradually on the increase, while sugar production has been on a gradual decline. A sugar production peak of 352,000 pounds was reached in 1910, but production has now dropped to less than a third of this amount. Among the states Maryland ranks fifth in the production of sugar and twelfth in the production of syrup. Vermont is the leading sugar producer, while New York State is the largest producer of maple syrup. The maple products industry in Maryland represents an annual transaction of nearly $150,000 and gives part time employment to over 500 persons. This is the product of over 50,000 maple trees."

Poultrymen to Hold Summer Meet at Centerville

Rascob Estate, in Queen Anne's county, near Centreville, on Thursday, June 18. An attendance of two thousand poultrymen is expected.

Poultry authorities of National renown have been secured to deliver addresses.

CHARGE TO GRAND JURY GIVEN BY JUDGE SLOAN

say to you whatever about what goes on in the grand jury room or about any business that may be brought before you.

It is not only your duty to investigate those offenses for which the parties have been recognized, or have been arrested and are in custody, but further to bring to the attention of the grand jury any violation of the law of which you may have personal knowledge or information.

It is desirable also that you be as expeditious as you can in the performance of your duties, but under no circumstances sacrifice thoroughness to speed, because with the thorough and complete investigation of all cases, you should submit your best judgment, and whatever time is necessary for a thorough investigation should be taken, regardless of the time that may be consumed.

There are certain statutes which are required to be called to your special attention at each term of court.

The law providing for the punishment of the crime known as abortion. While it may seem idle to do this, the statute requires it because these things are usually not very well known and are ordinarily only discovered by accident because of untoward results to those who are engaged in the practice of this crime.

It is your duty to investigate the accounts of the County Treasurer, see how his books are kept and to make report of your findings. You cannot do much more than look at the manner in which his records are kept and see that the balances reported on hand are proper and correct. Investigations are now made by State auditors of the accounts of all officers whose transactions touch the State in any way. The County Treasurer's accounts have to do with the State and for that reason there is investigation of them made every year by a State auditor. It is your duty under the law, however, to make this investigation.

It is your duty also to see that all officers who are entrusted with public money account for the same in the period and at the times prescribed by statute, and if an accounting has not been made in that time it is your duty to take such action as in your judgment may be necessary.

There is no more dangerous infraction of the law and none which is more generally practiced than that of carrying concealed weapons, because of the disastrous results which follow this practice. Therefore, do not hesitate, when you do come across cases of the violation of this law against the carrying of dangerous and deadly weapons to take action, becauseI want to impress upon you that the court does not regard this violation of the law lightly. No one has any business to carry a gun on his person unless he be an officer of the law whose duty it is to enforce the law and who must carry a weapon or weapons to protect him in the performance of his duty; but for private individuals to do it is wholly uncalled for. For a while it may be done and there may be no untoward results, but over a long period of time they do happen and when they happen they always bring consequences which shock th emind and conscience of the entire community.

It has been the custom here ever since the liquor law was first passed to call it to the attention of the grand jury at every term. You have in this county what is known as the local option law by which the people of the county long years ago decided that liquor should not be trafficked in Garrett county. Whether you agree or disagree with the abolition of the traffic in the nation has nothing to do with your obligation to enforce the liquor law of Garrett county. It is your duty, and it is my duty to enforce this law the same as any other law on the statute books and nothing has changed that situation so far as the officers of the law in Garrett county are concerned, and you are now officers of the law by reason of your official position as grand jurors.

As I have said, it is desirable that you be as expeditious as you can without sacrificing thoroughness to speed. You have been selected as grand jurors because of the confidence of the court in your integrity and your judgment as citizens of Garrett county, and the belief that you will give your best attention to the business before you and will perform it as faithfully and well as it can be done.

THEUNITED STATESARMY'S 2 WASHINGTON REGIMENTS

Organized Under First President's Direction Still Intact

It will surprise most Americans to learn that in their regular army of today there are two regiments which have come down intact from their organization during the lifetime of George Washington. According to the Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentiennial Commission, both these regiments were formed undoubtedly with Washington's advice and counsel, and the establishment of one of them must have had his official signature as first President of the United States.

What is now the Third United States Infantry was formed in 1784 as a Pennsylvania regiment, authorized by an act of the Continental Congress on June 7, 1784, and designated as "the Regiment of Infantry." This was six months or more after Washinton's formal resignation as Commander in Chief or the Armies. But during his subsequent Presidency his hand may have left its imprint on the destiny of the regiment, in its official re-designations in 1789 and 1796, when it became the First Infantry. Afterward in its history it went thru other re-designations, but it still was the same organization.

As the Third Infantry in the United States Army of today, it is stationed at Fort Snelling, in Minnesota, between Minneapolis and St. Paul. And are its officers proud of the ancient history of their outfit? The word yes can hardly be expressed with sufficient emphasis for an answer. As a regiment of the United States Army is entitled to decorate its flagstaff with a silver band for every battle in which it has fought, the staff of the Third Infantry must be thickly plated with them, for the list of its battle honors tells of a story of participation in nearly all the heaviest fighting of our history.

It figured in the War of 1812; in Florida in 1814. It was distinctly present at Lundy's Lane. Its record includes service in the early Indian Wars in New Mexico. During the Mexican War it fought at Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, Monterey, Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo and Chapultepec. Its fighting in the Civil War began with the first Bull Run and included Antictam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and Appomattox. During the Spanish-American War it distinguished itself at Santiago.

What is now the First Regiment of Infantry in the present United States Army was authorized by the new Congress of the United States in 1791, under Washington's Presidency, and has another long list of battle honors to its credit in the Official Army Register. Its glories were chiefly acquired in early wars with the Indians.

Not an officer, not a man of these regiments but looks with justifiable pride, now and then, at its silver-banded staff, and at the streamer which, with the flag, floats from it as a marker to its ancient and honorable history of service.

On last Saturday night thieves entered the store of Harvey & Ream, Loch Lynn, by breaking a pane of glass in a rear window and raising the sash. Last year, a little later in the season, the store was visited in a like manner. While no definite clue has been found, the last as well as the former entrance is thought to be the work of local amateurs. Saturday night nothing except the silver and pennies in the cash register, totaling seven or eight dollars, some candy bars, cigarettes and cakes were stolen.

An extension of Roanoke Avenue, in Loch Lynn, is now being completed to connect the street with the Pleasant Valley road, which latter is improved to the junction with the State road at Gortner. Approximately 600 feet will be completed this season.

BACTERIAL STANDARDS FOR MILK IN MARYLAND

Product Must Be Carefully Handled By Producers and Others

Additions recently adopted by the State Board of Health to the milk regulations that have been in force for several years have been announced by Dr. Robert H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health. The amendments establish definite bacterial standards for milk and cream to be sold in Maryland towns and cities by prohibiting the sale of milk and cream containing in excess of 200,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter in raw milk and in excess of 30,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter in pasteurized milk. The sale of milk or cream containing excessive dirt or sediment is also prohibited.

"The State Department of Health," Dr. Riley said, "is particularly concerned with regard to the milk produced and retailed in small towns that have no supervision over their milk supply except that which is given by the State. The State laws and local laws of many towns do not require the pasteurization of milk, which process is highly advisable in protecting the public. It is therefore extremely important that raw milk and cream be handled carefully by persons free from disease, with particular reference to cleanliness and under such conditions that it will be free from excessive bacteria.

"The production of clean milk of low bacterial content is not difficult. Failure to sterilize utensils properly, lack of refrigeration, corresponding failure to cool the milk promptly and to keep it cool, will inevitably result, especially in hot weather, in a high bacterial content. Such milk is potentially dangerous and is not the product the public is entitled to receive as fresh milk.

"Compliance with the bacterial standards that have been established will be required of milk producers and dealers. Those whose milk is found to contain excessive quantities of bacteria will be given an opportunity to correct conditions, but if they expect to sell their product they will be required to follow methods that are necessary for the production of good milk."

Whooping Cough in Maryland

The importance of whooping cough as a cause of death is not generally recognized, stated Mrs. Jos. F. Fahey, public health nurse. Comparison with the number of deaths due to other communicable diseases which commonly affect children is as follows:

Number of deaths from 1921-1929 per 100,000 population, whooping cough caused 394 more deaths than diphtheria, 543 more deaths than typhoid fever, 811 more than measles, 1,224 more than scarlet fever and 1,380 more than infantile paralysis.

Incomplete registration of cases increases the calculated rate of fatality. However, records indicate that while the infection of infants with the disease is relatively low the danger of infants dying from it is high. Those under five years of age and especially those under two years, it is most important to protect from infection.

In agreement with most of the published data, the percentage of cases of deaths in Maryland was higher for girls than for boys. The difference is less marked in those under one year of age than in older age groups.

There has been no regular occurrence of an epidemic but an apparent increase in prevalence about every second year. Whooping cough is prevalent during each month of the year, but records for Maryland show two distinct peaks of mortality occurring during the months of March and August.

The five counties with the highest mortality rate for period 1921-1929 were Queen Anne's, Dorchester, Calvert, Wicomico and Garrett.

The quarantine period of whooping cough in Maryland is thirty days.

The above information was obtained from the Bureau of Vital Statistics, Maryland State Department of Health,

Definite Areas in New Park Assigned to Organizations For Cleaning Up

Responsibility for cleaning up and keeping clean a certain portion of Washington Spring Park has been accepted by a number of local organizations, according to Miss Lottie M. Loar, president of the Oakland Civic club.

A letter from the Oakland Civic club to other local organizations was written last week asking them to take some definite step in beautifying the new park. The area is so large that it was felt nothing could be accomplished until an active program was arranged with specific problems to overcome and certain duties to be executed. With each organization of Oakland being responsible for a definite area, it now seems probable that the work of beautifying will go forward much faster, Miss Loar stated.

The firemen, Knights of Pythias and Masonic lodge have already selected their areas and other organizations are expecting to do the same.

5-YEAR PROGRAM TO AID STATE FARMING PLANNED

Scheme Includes Crop Rotation, Fertilization and Insect Control—Counties to Cooperate

WORK BEGAN LAST YEAR

A five-year plan to aid the development of Maryland's $400,000,000 agricultural industry has been worked out by the extension service and other departments of the University of Maryland, in cooperation with the agricultural and women's organizations of the State.

Each of the 23 counties is to have an individual five-year plan co-ordinated with that for the state as a whole, Dr. T. B. Symonds, extension service director, who announced the program, said Saturday.

Work Started Last Year

Work on the program started last year with a survey occasioned by the drought and the formation of the state relief commission, of which Dr. Symons is a member.

Formation and expansion of cooperatives, crop rotation, scientific fertilization, standardization and grading of crops, and insect and disease control are emphasized in the program. Increasing the number of farms with pressure-water systems by 50 per cent is a concrete proposals.

"Any business having the magnitude of Maryland agriculture, demands careful and thorough planning if it is to achieve a full measure of success," Dr. Symons said.

"The present is especially opportune for launching a program of this nature, because farming is considerably disorganized by the severe drought and the generally unsettled economic conditions. Substantial adjustments must be made and this program is intended to be a service in this respect."

Plan Crop Rotation

In the division of field crops, of which Maryland produces $41,000,000 annually, the substitution of 100,000 acres of winter barley and 50,000 acres of legumes for 150,000 acres of wheat is recommended. Other suggestions are the increase of the average yield of corn one bushel per acre, boosting the annual crop by 500,000 bushels; and to make fertilization "a major consideration."

With regard to dairy products, the program is for the regulation of production to market demands. More extensive cooperative marketing, home production of 75 per cent of the feed used, increasing the average production per cow from 4,500 to 5,000 pounds, boosting by 15 per cent the amount of milk consumed in small cities and towns, and the use of ten per cent more milk and pure butter by farm families.

Would Increase Livestock

Recommendations regarding live stock include increasing the practice of selling cereals by feeding to hogs and other live stock; and raising more colts for replacement of aged work animals.

Reduction of chick mortality to ten per cent. Provision of better marketing methods by organization into cooperative units; and organization of two turkey depots on the Eastern Shore and one in Southern Maryland are among the poultry plan objectives.

Objectives in truck crop production include reduction of production costs 2 per cent a year, boosting asparagus acreage and certified potato and sweet potato production.

In the field of farm management, recommendations include decrease by ten per cent a year the amount of marginal land not now profitable for crop production; development of an equitable system of renting farm lands, and a better system of taxation.

SIXTY ATTEND TABLELAND ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE

Delegates Name Many Sites For A Proposed Music Festival

Sixty delegates from eight of the tableland counties attended the meeting of the Allegany Tableland Association held on June 4 in Oakland to discuss the proposed music festival for the coming summer.

Mr. N. T. Frame, director of the West Virginia Agricultural Extension Department, explained the purpose of the festival. Miss Huff has just returned from touring the music festivals in Europe and attended the international music festival in London. She has been selected by the Allegany Tableland Association to direct the regional festival which was endorsed at the meeting held in Oakland.

Many sites for the staging of the proposed festival were proposed by delegations from the various counties, but finally narrowed down to a choice between Aurora, Davis, Somerset or Mountain Lake Park. Final decision was withheld pending a trip to the different places by Miss Huff and the committee.

At the meeting, Mr. J. B. Watson, of Confluence, Pa., presided. Special addresses were made by Mr. W. E. Patterson, Davis, W. Va.; Mrs. Bessie L. Stemple, Aurora, W. Va.; Mr. J. A. MRS. LETTIE ANTHONY NOT GUILTY OF KILLING FATHER

Verdict Rendered By Jury Last Night Following Trial During Day and Evening Sessions

MANY TALISMEN CALLED

Indicted at the present term of court in which the traverser, Mrs. Lettie Anthony, 23 years old, stood charged with the murder of her father, Aaron Moyer, 59, of Garrett county, opposite Wilson, West Va., on the Western Maryland Railway, on the afternoon of February 10, the woman was placed on trial before a jury yesterday morning and at eleven o'clock last night that body pronounced her not guilty and she was discharged from the custody of the sheriff after having been incarcerated in jail since the commission of the crime.

When the case was called for trial, the regular panel of jurymen was soon exhausted and then the Court directed Sheriff Haenftling to summon talismen. A score or more men were called by the sheriff, but it was nearly noon before the panel was complete with Mr. Guy S. Stanton, Grantsville, as foreman of the body.

The State had summoned and examined in court during the trial of the case thirteen witnesses, while the defense had arrayed nineteen witnesses.

There was no eye-witness to the tragedy, it having occurred in the Moyer home where the father resided, his wife having left him some months before. Mrs. Anthony lived at Bayard and had visited her father the day before the tragedy, returning to Wilson the day of the killing. What occurred there as related by Mrs. Anthony both at the prelminary hearing and in open court yesterday agrees in almost every particular.

The woman said she acted in self-defense; that he had been drinking heavily and that he was in a quarrelsome mood, threatening to kill her with a knife he had in his possession. Seeing a gun within reach she stated that she picked it up and aiming it fired, at her father whom she claimed was advancing toward her. The shooting occurred in the hallway of the house.

The case was given to the jury following arguments by the State's Attorney and W. R. Offutt, attorney for the defense, at ten o'clock. After deliberating for upwards of an hour the jury returned its verdict of not guilty.

During the trial of the case, and indeed, throuhout the entire week, the court room has been packed to the doors by spectators and others interested in various cases claiming the attention of the court.

Judges Wagaman and Doub sat in the case, the former having come to Oakland Monday, while Judge Doub arrived here yesterday morning.

State Scores In Appeal Cases

In the two appeal cases of L. Waingold, appealed from the decision of Justice Gonder, the State filed a motion that the appeals be dismissed as the defense had not filed with the magistrate a written notice of appeal within ten days as required by the statute. The Court, Judges Wagaman and Doub, sustained the motion of State's Attorney Dawson and the decision of Justice Gonder, who imposed fines aggregating $500 and the costs of prosecution, stands.

The traverser was apprehended on two charges, one that he was using or permitting to be used dealer's automobile tage for purposes other than the dealer's own business. On this charge a fine of $200 and costs was imposed.

The second case against Waingold charged him with causing to be removed, defacing and obliterating the serial number from a motor vehicle. In this case a fine of $300 and costs was imposed.

Other Cases Disposed Of

Other cases heard by the Court are as follows, with sentences yet to be imposed:

Nelson Wilt, Bear Hill, sale of liquor, tried before the Court; guilty.

Charles V. Harvey, two cases of selling liquor to minors; not guilty.

Asa Kitzmiller, Hutton, manufacture and possession of liquor; guilty. Tried before the Court.

Carl Davis, larceny; plea of guilt confessed.

Carrie Harvey, sale of liquor; plea of guilty confessed; paroled by Court for three years.

Kelvinator

• STANDARD RATING SCALE for Electric Refrigeration

• Is the refrigerator manufactured by a reliable company with proper experience in the electric refrigeration field?
• Has it plenty of food and shelf space?
• Is the cabinet itself well designed, sturdily built and properly insulated?
• Is there provision for the freezing of an adequate supply of ice cubes? (Quantity of ice rather than number of cubes, which may be of large or small size, should be taken into consideration.)
• Will the refrigerator constantly maintain a proper temperature for the preservation of foods?
• Can the freezing of ice cubes and desserts be speeded up when the need arises?
• Can this extra freezing speed for ice cubes be had without affecting the temperature on the food shelves? (Too low a temperature on the shelves will, of course, injure food.)
• Is there a place to keep ice cream, meat, fish, game, "quick frosted" foods or extra ice cubes indefinitely at a below freezing temperature?
• Are these various temperatures (a. extra fast freezing; b. fast freezing; c. below freezing for storage; and d. normal food preservation temperature) automatically maintained without any attention from the owner?
• Does the refrigerating unit operate often or infrequently? (The fewer "stops" and "starts" the longer the unit will last and the less it costs to run.)
• How long will the cooling unit continue to cool the refrigerator even though the current is shut off? (Refrigeration should continue for 10 or 12 hours.)
• Can the back parts of all shelves, even the lowest, be reached without kneeling or sitting down?
• Has provision been made for keeping vegetables fresh and crisp?
• Can the refrigerator top be used to "set things down for a moment" while the contents of the cabinet are being re-arranged?
• Will the refrigerator add to the attractiveness of the kitchen?
• Has the experience of users over a long period of years proved the refrigerator long-lived and dependable?

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

This past week a marriage license was issued to a Mr. Bush and a Miss Chipps. Lena Chipps happened to be a glass cutter. And Bush was in the insurance business. (He's probably insured against flying chips.)

Other licenses this week were issued to the following: (you'll have to use your imagination) A Weaver and a Thorn; a Woodson and a Shaver; a Shepherd and a Currey; a Sharpless and a Lantz.

Archibaldson says the noise made by the fault-finders is sometimes mistaken for the voice of the people. At least that's what it looks like here about the public health nurse and home demonstration agent positions.

I see by the financial page that call money has been reduced. Well, I call it and call it and still it doesn't come home. But that doesn't prevent my banker calling me, and he certainly did it, twice this week. If I was Noah Webster I would cut out the word "overdrawn" in my next dictionary edition.

Looked Like Real Fish Story

Believing that all fish stories should look rather jumbled and out of proportion, to compare favorably with the majority of those who tell them, the one last week in The Republican about the 28-inch monster, was written in that style.

However, just as close questioning and careful examination of the details of a story will usually bring out the truth from the narrator, so will a careful study of the printed story bring out the truth. The article is written in three columns and not clear across the page as it looks. If the reader will but pick up last week's issue, and divide the material into three equal parts, then read down the column, he will discover what manner of fish is being jerked out of Deep Creek.

And speaking of Deep Creek Lake—At the roadhouse formerly managed by Soldier Halsey, and now in charge of several gentlemen, evidently of Grecian ancestry, they are charging ten cents for an ice cream cone, and ten cents for a cup of coffee. We have heard rumors that soft drinks are also ten cents, as well as a number of other articles which sell anywhere else for a jitney.

Maybe they'll profit from it, but it's a cinch that Deep Creek won't.

If you haven't heard about Lawrence Junkins' trip to see the parade on Friday night, you had better hustle right down to the chopping block in Smouse's meat department. He rushed home from work, milked the cows and chickens, gathered his family, and set out for the Firemen's jubilee. He had heard so much talk during the day about the big parade that he didn't want to miss it.

His first mistake was when he didn't turn left at Bear Creek. When he got to Grantsville the parade was just starting——in Friendsville. He will tell you himself, about his return trip. Just ask him about it.

Archibaldson has gone in for raising ducks. He has built the duck pond, now all he needs is something to put in it. His concrete work would make Bill Whorton jealous. And if anybody saw him smuggling a bushel of limestone gravel from that pile in the road in front of his house, don't accuse him unjustly. He made a contract with the city councilman Cot McComas for that amount.

It's the same story about running out of gas and having to walk home, but in this case it was three girls who had to do the walking—last Friday evening—from Deer Park to Oakland.

Pharm Filiosophy

This poem is from a poet of Calhoun county, W. Va., and appeared originally in the Courtesy and Service magazine of the West Penn Company. It will probably hit a number of Garrett countians:

We live in the country, the best of all places,
From the hide of a groundhog we cut our shoe laces.
We produce our own living by hoeing twixt rocks,
And never wear any but home-made wool socks.
We trade wool and bees-wax for cloth to make clothes,
And the cracks in our house let in wind when it blows.
In summer "the woman" cans beans and tomatoes,
While I dig like hell for a few small potatoes.
Our meat and lard come from 'mast' fattened hogs,
And our only diversion is children and dogs.
The dogs are right good to run squirrels and rabbits,
But the children incline to insidious habits.
Our wood-land's prolific in snakes and in toads—
We haven't a cook-stove or any good roads.
Thin trails through the forest we find good enough.
We raise our tobacco—"the woman" takes snuff.
The old-fashioned fire-place—the base of the draft
Of a "cat and clay" chimney sends forth a warm blast.
The floor of our home, made of "puncheons", is rough,
That don't matter much as our bare feet are tough.
Our beds are not tapestried—made of fine laces—
We get cement sacks when we need pillow-cases.
When we lie down to rest in the glare of the hearth
We think of poor people extant on the earth.
Ours is a primitive life in a primitive land—
All we have we have by the toil of our hand.
But when poverty pinches we always "make out"—
Crack walnuts, bake corn pone, "onkiver" the kraut.
"The woman" has pickled green corn on the cob,
We will live til "ramps" sprout if I don't have a job.

Bob Moomaw, from the front-line trenches of Mountain Lake Park, stopped me this week and told me that all wasn't "quiet along the Park front," as I had stated two weeks ago, because he had never heard such grumblin' and rumblin' as was goin' on at the present time.

To be or not to be, that is the question, according to Shakespeare's old time friend Hamlet.

What is the effect of modern Ultra Violet Rays upon tobacco? Dr. E. E. Free, one of America's well-known scientists, who was retained by us to study Lucky Strike's manufacturing process, addressing the Illuminating Engineering Society, said:

"The essential effect of the Ultra Violet is the production of better tobacco and of cigarettes regarded by virtually all smokers who have tested them as milder and with a lesser tendency to cause throat irritation."

Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette that employs Ultra Violet Rays in connection with its exclusive "TOASTING" Process—the only cigarette that brings you the benefits of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos.

SELL BEFORE HARVEST

For the past three months the Allegheny Tableland Association has been making a study of the great Pittsburgh market for farm produce. This survey has been conducted with the approval and at the suggestion of Dr. Thomas B. Symons and Nat T. Frame, Directors of the Agricultural Extension Services of Maryland and West Virginia, respectively. The information obtained is being passed on to the county agricultural agents, and interested farmers can use that valuable contact for additional facts or get in touch with the Secretary of the Allegheny Tableland Association, Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Even with the over-production expected under normal crop conditions with the resultant drop in prices, there is much for tableland farmers to be encouraged about. Certain commodities of prime importance in the mountain region indicate strength for summer and fall markets in Pittsburgh. This is important and farmers should know it. But good or poor markets do not appear to be so essential, normally, as other factors, and of these the most important factor seems to be ability to plan ahead.

The time to sell is before the harvest.

The time to sell maple syrup, trees and native plants is December and January, not March and April. The time to sell late potatoes, late cabbage and cauliflower is May and June and not September and October. By this is meant plans, ways, means and connections should be made in advance. To do this is impossible for average farmers, because of lack of time and opportunity to get away from their farms.

The Allegheny Tableland Association does not propose to become a selling agency for producers but it can be of great assistance by putting producers and buyers in contact with each other, even to the extent of bringing buyers from Pittsburgh into the tableland area and taking producers to the Pittsburgh market for observation, introduction and study.

Buyers in Pittsburgh want tableland products, so it appears to be a matter of just getting acquainted.

Truck loads, car loads or smaller units of good products can be sold in Pittsburgh with ease and convenience if the proper connections are made. The Allegheny Tableland Association can show how it can be done.

A Mountain Lake Park Resident Laments Governmental Conditions Existing at that Place.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Several years ago I became the purchaser of three properties in the Park. At the time I little realized the feeling that existed between the citizens and many of the property owners against the Association.

I have endeavored to find out why all parties can't work in harmony and for the good of the place.

On the part of citizens, I discovered that they felt they had a right of franchise, even though they were not property owners, since they had this privilege in all State and county elections. Then on the part of citizens and many property owners I learned that they felt they had a right to elect officers to manage the town in which they live and that the Association, which owns only one-tenth of the Park property, had no right to manage affairs for them. I discovered that the Association did this by naming three out of five annual committeemen.

To see outsiders come to the Park and dictate tax rates and town management, went against the grain.

In talking with friends about buying or building summer homes here, they all seemed to have the same objection—the method of government. The depreciation in values of real estate in the Park they attribute largely to this method of government. There is a lack of confidence, and where this exists real estate values can never be what they should.

I was informed that the people in the Park had been promised that if they would contribute toward paying off a mortgage debt of $32,000, before the Foreign and Home Mission Board would accept the Park as a gift, that wonderful improvements would be made which would bring many thousands of visitors to the place and greatly increase values. Some eight or ten years have elapsed since this mortgage was paid and the Park taken over, but no improvements of any kind have taken place; in fact the old buildings now here are in bad repair.

Each year property depreciates. Only last week a twelve-room house, centrally located, sold for less than one-quarter of the cost to build.

There is a reason for all this: it is because it is not managed as a municipality and the people have no confidence, therefore do not work in harmony.

Nature has done wonders for the Park. A beautiful grove, pure air and water, cool days in summer and the State has built excellent roads, but in spite of all these advantages the outside public will not be induced to come here and make investments.

I feel, therefore, that if these petty differences could be done away with that harmony would exist and that all would work as a unit in building the place up and boosting it as it justly deserves.

I have wondered what damage could be done the Association or the Foreign and Home Mission Board if this place is incorporated, and I fail to find any reason why they can't continue along all the lines of business they are now engaged in such as running hotels, ice plant, farm, refreshment stand, bathing beach, boats, etc.

I understand the claim is made that all these enterprises are run at a loss. If this be true, then all the more reason why the place should be incorporated.

If we all pull together, maybe we can build up the Park and bring many more people here during the summer months and help all the hotels and boarding houses.

As a letter published in the county paper recently stated, there is not enough true Christian spirit shown.

Let's ask for Divine guidance and lay aside all animosity and ill feeling, selfishness and propaganda and extend the rights that those who live here are entitled to, because as long as the one-tenth interest of property in the Park controls and manages, so long will this bitterness exist.

Lesson for June 14

THE RESURRECTION AND THE ASCENSION

GOLDEN TEXT—Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who maketh intercession for us.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:25-51.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Living Now.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Living Now.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Living Lord.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Resurrection.

The resurrection of Ohrist is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the grand proof that Christ was what he claimed to be—the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 12:30, 40; John 2:10-21).

I. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-12).

Luke does not enter into a description of the manner of the resurrection of Christ or offer any proof of the fact other than that the tomb was empty. He does, however, indicate the process by which the disciples had become convinced of its reality.

1. The testimony of the men in shining nppnrel (vv. 4-0). The women who had come to the sepulcher bringing spices found the stone rolled away and the sepulcher empty. While they were in a state of perplexity these men in shining garments informed them that Jesus had arisen.

2. The report of the women to the disciples (vv. 7-11). The women believed the announcement made to them because they found that it was in agreement with whnt Jesus had prophesied. Thcy immediately reported the fact of the empty tomb to the disciples.

3. Peter investignting (v. 12). Peter was so impressed with the news brought by the women concerning the empty tomb that he rnn to see whether the report wns true. He was convinced that the tomb wns empty, but wns perplexed over the matter. If he had believed the words of the Lord his personal investigation would hnve cleared the matter in his mind.

II. Two Discouraged Disciples (vv. 13-35).

1. The walk to Emmaus (vv. 13-15). Emmaus was seven and a half miles northwest of Jerusalem. The topic of conversation was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. So little had the Lord's teaching about his resurrection impressed the disciples that the reports which the women brought were to them as idle tales.

2. An unrecognized companion (vv. 16-24).

a. Who he was (v. 15). While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the last few days, Jesus joined them. Even when he questioned them concerning their sadness they did not recognize him.

b. His question (v. 17). Perceiving their sadness and perplexity he sought to help them by calling forth an expression of their grief.

c. Their answer (vv. 18-24). His question so surprised them that they thought him a stranger in Jerusalem, for the condemnation and crucifixion were so recent and notorious that no one that had lived in Jerusalem could be ignorant of them.

3. The Scriptures opened (vv. 25-31).

a. His rebuke (vv. 25-30). Jesus did not rebuke them for not believing the strange stories they had heard, but for ignorance and lack of confidence in the Old Testament Scriptures, the very center and heart of which have to do with the death and resurrection of Christ.

b. Jesus recognized (vv. 31-35). While sitting at meat with the disciples they perceived him as the Lord when they saw him bless the bread and distribute it. They were so filled with joy over this revelation that they hastened to Jerusalem to tell the other disciples of his resurrection.

III. Jesus Stands in the Midst of the Eleven (vv. 36-47).

1. He said, "Peace be unto you" (vv. 36, 37). Instead of receiving peace from him, they were terrified and affrighted.

2. He showed them his hands and his feet (vv. 38-40). He gave them tangible evidence that he was not a mere spirit.

3. He ate before them (vv. 41-45).

4. He commissioned them to evangelize the world (vv. 46-49). They were to testify concerning his shed blood and resurrection and on this ground they were to preach repentance and remission of sins to all nations.

IV. Jesus Ascends Into Hsaven (vv. 50, 51).

Having given them the parting message to evangelize the world, he ascended into heaven.

CHAPTER XXI

The units of the Twenty-sixth division, Maj. Gen. Clarence Edwards commanding, began to arrive the latter part of September, continued during October and the early part of November, and were now assembled in the billeting area near Neufchateau.

I inspected the division November 11, 1917, and found the various organizations presented a very creditable appearance. The officers seemed alert and military and the personnel looked strong and vigorous. Their instruction had been carried out under the direction of Brigadier General Traub, one of the brigade commanders, and seemed to be well advanced.

Germans Ahead in Man Power.

The probable situation as to man power in which the allies would find themselves in the spring was causing much solicitude. The Germans had captured Riga in September. Kerensky's power was at an end and the bolshevik government was established, with Lenin and Trotzky in control. The situation was such that Russia had become entirely negligible as far as assistance to the allies was concerned.

An analysis of the possible strength of the contestants showed that Germany would be able to spare a considerable number of divisions from the Russian front. Careful study by my staff, in co-operation with the allied staffs, had led to the conclusion that her total number in the west by spring would be as many as 217, not counting the possibility of the added strength of forty-eight divisions from Austria. The greatest number the allies could muster, according to estimates, would be 169 divisions, counting two American. Italy could not be counted on to do more than barely hold her own, even with the help of the eleven allied divisions then on that front.

Other American divisions might possibly be in Europe by May 1 if they should arrive according to schedule, which was doubtful, but they would be too late to participate in the expected early spring campaign. At the low rate of arrival we should not have more than half of the twenty-one divisions promised by the War department ready for service by June.

Outcome Depended on America.

In this war, where the battle lines extended across entire countries, and in which the qualities of the opponents were about equal, the strategical aspect largely resolved itself into a consideration of the number and location of divisions on either side. The situation was of such a character that it was a question which side could provide the superiority of forces necessary to success. In other words, the outcome would depend upon the number of troops that America could send over.

All eyes were on the eastern front. To allied statesmen the collapse of Russia meant possible grave political consequences; to the allied commanders it forecast the release of approximately 100 divisions and the increase in the enemy's ranks in Belgium and northern France to a preponderance that could not be overcome. To us it indicated a race between America's best effort to pour our fighting men into France and Germany's best determination to crush the allies before our soldiers could arrive in sufficient numbers to dominate the battlefield.

Faced Defeat With Allies.

Our estimates of the shipping for troops and supplies as set forth in the plan by which a due proportion of combat and line of communication troops were to form such increment of six divisions would require by June 1, for the shipment of twenty-four divisions, a total of over 2,000,000 tons. No one seemed to know where we were to obtain the 1,400,000 tons of shipping in addition to the 600,000 tons we were then supposed to be using.

It appeared almost certain then that should disaster befall the allied armies that under these conditions we would have to go down with them.

I always felt certain, however, that tonnage could be found for our purpose if the necessary pressure were exerted to force it into use. Appeals were made continuously and persistently in an effort to get action on this vital question, but several months elapsed before it really came.

Taken as a whole, the apparently slow progress of our preparation in Europe also caused considerable adverse comment, if not dismay, among the allies. Inquiries were made directly by the military and civil officials as to why we did not move more rapidly, to which the reply was always, "lack of shipping."

New British Offensive.

Immobilized by the mud of Flanders, where British attacks had continued intermittently from the end of July to the middle of November, with rather excessive losses, the British commander in chief turned to a more southerly portion of his line for the final offensive of the year. Choosing the Cambrai front on which to launch the effort, careful preparations, including the concentration of an unusual number of tanks, were made to insure a break through the enemy's defenses. The tanks and the infantry were to make an opening through which the cavalry was to pass and attack the flanks of the enemy. Then French troops held in readiness in the vicinity were to follow. As to the question of command of these combined forces when both should become engaged it was to be left to the senior general officer in the vicinity, who might be either French or British. In going over these plans it seemed to me that their idea of securing co-operation after the French should begin participation was rather vague.

During the day we first went to visit General Byng, commanding the third army, who explained further details of the attack and the progress already made. He and his chief of staff were busy receiving news from the front and felt that all was going well.

British Victory Spurs Allies.

The attack was made on a six-mile front and the British had the advantage from the outset. The sudden debouchment of the long line of tanks, closely followed by the infantry, all without the usual warning of long preliminary artillery bombardment, completely surprised the Germans. The tanks broke wide gaps in the wire and subdued the machine-gun nests, aiding the infantry through the defenses with a minimum of loss.

The front was rather narrow, considering the depth of the objectives. A maximum gain of some four and a half miles was secured the first day, and a greater result was prevented, it was said, by a serious check to the tanks at Flesquieres.

For some reason or other the French were not called into action, but presumably it was because the British cavalry, which was to precede them, could not go forward as planned. The offensive continued for two or three days longer with varying success. It was, however, a decided victory, and, while not as great as the British expected, it gave encouragement to the allies on the western front and no doubt helped to offset temporarily the depressing effect of the serious defeat recently sustained by the Italian army.

CHAPTER XXII

An American mission headed by Col. E. M. House arrived in France toward the end of November for an interallied conference. Other members of the mission were Admiral W. S. Benson; Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, chief of staff, Oscar T. Crosby, for the Treasury department; Vance McCormick, chairman of the war trade board; Bainbridge Colby, shipping board; Alonzo E. Taylor, Thomas N. Perkins, war industries, and Paul Cravath.

As the representatives of different nationalities gathered in Paris recent reports of decreasing losses of ocean tonnage and greater destruction of German submarines, with prospects of still further improvement, seemed to give more of hopefulness in the general situation and allied spirits were somewhat revived.

The British had won at Cambrai and were making satisfactory progress in their advance on Jerusalem, which, it was said, would be facilitated by the use of their new base at Jaffa. The Italians seemed to have recovered their morale to a limited extent, with the stiffening of their lines by British and French divisions, and had successfully held their own against the Austrian attack on the Piave.

Not the least hopeful thing was the step just taken toward unity of command in the creation of the supreme war council. But the decisive factor in the whole situation, if it could be utilized in time, was the tremendous economical and physical power of the United States. To make that available before it was too late was the problem upon the solution of which depended the success of the allied cause. Would the allies see it and would they work together to solve it?

Interallied Conference.

When all were seated around the table in the assembly room at the ministry of foreign affairs Prime Minister Clemenceau, who presided, spoke briefly, setting forth the importance of the gathering and the necessity of translating the noble spirit of the alliance into action. No attempts at oratory were in evidence, nor was there prolonged discourse on any subject. Naturally questions concerning available man power, shipping, munitions and supplies were mentioned, but only in a general way. The conference did little more than agree that the study of the various subjects should be left to committees composed of interallied representatives.

It was very clear that everybody was looking to America to provide the additional man power needed to give the allies superiority. None was more eager to increase our forces than ourselves, but on my part every possible argument to procure shipping had been presented to the allies and to our War department, so when the conference urged the expedition of our forces it made the strongest kind of a case in favor of immediate increase of allied aid in tonnage.

For some time reliance upon the allies for any considerable amount of tonnage had seemed almost in vain, and it looked as though we should have to depend upon our own limited resources for most of it. The British were giving some assistance in the transportation of men. American ships had carried up to November 1, 67,218 and the British 54,751.

Our Engineers in Fight.

The results of the British success at Cambrai were not to be permanent, as the Germans quickly retaliated. General von Marwitz hastily assembled a force of some fifteen divisions, and November 30 suddenly launched a violent counterattack. The British were short of reserves, and before Von Marwitz was stopped his troops had regained most of the lost ground.

It was in this operation that a detachment of our Eleventh regiment of engineers became engaged while serving with the British. The men, to the number of 280, were at work in the Gauzacourt railway yard when the Germans attacked. One officer and nine men were wounded, and the detachment withdrew. They were then given arms and fought with the British.

War Council Meets Again.

The second conference of the supreme war council was held at Versailles December 1. Our representatives, political and military, at this meeting were Mr. House and General Bliss, respectively. At the opening session M. Clemencean drew attention to the general situation, referring especially to the collapse of Russia, the probable release of enemy troops from that front, the adverse situation in Italy, the depletion of allied man power, and the reliance of the allies on American assistance.

The premier enjoined the military representatives "to bear in mind that their function is to advise the supreme war council as a whole and not merely as representatives of their respective nations on the council, and that they should view the problems confronting them not from a national standpoint but from that of the allies as a whole."

The military representatives at this conference were instructed to examine the military situation and report their recommendations as to the future plan of operations; to study the immediate situation in Italy from the offensive as well as from the defensive point of view, and to report on the utilization of the Belgian army.

It was evident that this body was to become a kind of superparliament not only for the discussion of resources, aims and purposes, but for the determination of policies looking to concert of action in support of the military efforts. The spirit in which the problems were approached at this meeting made it clear that the supreme war council would sensibly promote co-operation among the powers.

The second meeting of the interallied conference December 3 closed its sessions. None of the questions brought before the first session could be settled, but they were taken up by the more permanent body, the supreme war council, which, as time went on, undertook to co-ordinate the work of the various committees that had been forced to handle the problems involved.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 55. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, JUNE 18, 1931. NUMBER 18.

JUDGE SLOAN ADJOURNED COURT TUESDAY TIL JULY 7

Sentences Are Passed Upon All Traversers Convicted — Fines Imposed Aggregate Big Sum

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan adjourned the June Term of the Circuit Court Tuesday afternoon until Tuesday, July 7, when it will be reconvened to hear and determine several cases held over until that date, the cases then to be heard being of a civil nature.

Judges Wagaman and Doub, who were on the bench all of last week, recessed court Saturday at noon, and it was reconvened Monday morning by Judge Sloan at which time the criminal docket was again taken up and all cases appearing thereon with one or two exceptions, were disposed of before adjournment Tuesday.

Appeal Case.

The appeal case of Ira Culp vs. the State, sent up to the Circuit Court from Justice West's magistrate's court was dismissed. Culp failed to pay a tax on his dog and was found guilty by the Justice. He appealed and not being able to furnish the requisite bond for his appearance, was committed to jail where he was held for upwards of a month. The court dismissed the case against Culp as he had been sufficiently punished.

Disposition of Criminal Cases

Since the previous issue of The Republican cases on the criminal docket have been heard and determined and fines or prison sentences imposed as follows:

Albert (Bud) Stewart; sale of liquor; plea of guilty confessed; $100 fine or six months in the House of Correction.

Clyde Rodeheaver, sale of liquor; plea of guilty confessed; $100 fine and costs or 6 months in the House of Correction.

Adam Snyder, desertion and non-support; dismissed by order of the State's Attorney.

In the cases of sales of liquor alleged to have been made by John Menhorn, Bertha Hoye, Philip Crissinger and John Pratt, orders of dismissal of the actions against them were entered by the State's Attorney with the approval of the Court. The prosecuting witnesses in all of these indictments were E. M. Sines and Vernon Broadwater.

Philip Duckworth, desertion and non-support; dismissed.

Wade Harvey, sale of liquor; dismissed.

Charles Kight, sale of liquor; jury trial; verdict not guilty. The prosecuting witnesses in this case were E. M. Sines and Vernon Broadwater, the former being the only one to testify.

Mountain Top Ministers' Association Holds Meeting

They also voted favorably on the proposal for a home for the aged near Oakland which is being promoted by Rev. Fr. M. Yuhas, of Morgantown, W. Va.

The association decided to have an outing at Table Rock on July 13 beginning at 4 o'clock to include the families of the members.

WILL BE PARADE ON EACH DAY OF JULY 3-4 JUBILEE

Fire Department To Have Right of Way July 3; Legionaires 4th

Decision to have two parades during the joint celebration of the Volunteer Fire Department and American Legion on July 3 and 4, was made at a recent meeting of the joint committee, according to Nell Fraley, one of the members.

Because a number of fire companies coming here to participate in the celebration have stated that they do not wish to leave home on July 4th, the parade of all fire companies will take place on the evening of July 3, while the Legion parade will be held on Saturday, July 4. Both will be held at 6:00 o'clock in the evening.

MISSING WOMAN FOUND IN FOREST NEAR KITZMILLER

Miss Dollie Matthews, 27, Lost Since June 4, Will Recover

Found last Thursday afternoon in the woods between Kitzmiller and Elk Garden, Miss Dollie Matthews, 27, of Oakmont, Mineral county, W. Va., who had been missing since June 4, is improving and will recover. She is under the care of Dr. A. K. Fidler, of Kitzmiller.

The young woman was found lying in the woods by Albert Warnick, of Elk Garden, one of the scores of searchers who had been seeking her during the past eight days. Her clothing was in tatters and her shoes were worn out. Her body, face and hands were covered with bruises and deep scratches, sustained in her aimless wandering through the briars and thickets of the forests.

Warnick found the missing woman in the woods about 300 yards from the State highway. She was carried to an automobile and taken to the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Matthews, at Elk Garden, where she was given nourishment and medical attention. Dr. Fidler said the young woman was not in a serious condition and did not appear to be ravenous, despite her experience.

Miss Matthews, who had suffered a nervons breakdown and appeared to be mentally deranged, was walking with her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Matthews, and another woman, when she suddenly ran from her companions, waded through a creek and disappeared in the woods beyond.

Scores of searchers directed by Sheriff J. G. Wright, of Mineral county, and Officer D. D. Skidmore, of the State Police, had scoured the woods and dragged the creek for trace of the missing woman. Her brother-in-law, Lee Foreman, of Pierce, W. Va., had offered $50 reward for her recovery. Mineral county authorities also offered a reward for information leading to discovery of the missing woman.

SLACKWATER PLAN OF THE YOUGH RIVER IS DISCUSSED

Project To Canalize It From Pittsburgh Area to Potomac Is Object of Movement

The first step in what is believed to be an all-water route from Pittsburgh to the Atlantic Ocean by way of the Youghiogheny and Potomac rivers was started at a public hearing at West Newton, Pa., on Monday when the location of the dam sites which would slackwater the Youghiogheny River for a distance of 20 miles were considered.

Lieutenant Lester F. Rhoades, corps of engineers, stated that tentative plans provide for two locks and dam, the first to be located about two miles above the mouth of the river, just above the Christy Park works of the National Tube Company and the second about ten miles above, near Robbins Station. The first of these stations is to be of the fixed type, while the second will have a movable crest, with a normal lift of 17 feet.

Army Man Gives Data

Colonel Jarvis J. Bain, in charge of the Pittsburgh district, explained the roll type, which is to be installed in the second dam. This type is particularly adapted for high water and ice conditions and has been in successful operation in other parts of the country. These dams will provide a nine-foot channel for the improved portion of the river.

The locks will be of the standard Monogahela river type. Plans also include the dredging of the stream for practically the entire distance.

In the last five years field men of the Army Engineering Department have conducted much survey work of the Potomac River from Washington to Cumberland and to the Savage River above Bloomington, Garrett county and also the Casselman River to Confluence, Pa.

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce and large manufacturers and other shipping interests in the Pittsburgh area are supporting the movement for an all-water route to the Atlantic Ocean by slackwater and a series of dams.

Final Report From Kitzmiller Shows 682 Individuals Given Aid

The final report has been received from the Kitzmiller district of the Garrett county chapter of the American Red Cross drought-relief committee, of which Rev. Charles Kupfer served as chairman, showing that 682 individuals received benefit from the food, clothing, seed, stock feed, and fertilizer for which the Red Cross paid.

The district included the territory from Bloomington to Steyer and Swanton.

The mines are being operated at present, the report stated, and gardens are growing so that conditions are greatly improved. During the spring months a community committee was formed in Kitzmiller to take care of the acute unemployment situation when the mines closed, and thru the efforts of this committee much suffering was alleviated.

The committee consisted of Robert Wilson, Rev. Kupfer, Mrs. Samuel Cole, health nurse, and the mine superintendents from the Hamill Coal and Coke company, Shallmar Mining company, and Vindex. Rev. Kupfer also served on the farm loan committee and assisted in other relief work.

A total of 179 families were given aid through Garrett county. The $1,500 received by the Garrett County chapter has been disbursed and the cases closed by the auditor from national headquarters, according to Mrs. E. Z. Tower, county chairman.

M'DONOUGH SCHOOL HEAD SEEKS SITE FOR BUILDINGS

Two Tracts of Land Near Deep Creek Lake Inspected Recently

Major Lamborn, head of McDonough School for Boys, which is located near Baltimore, was here last week making an inspection of properties as a possible site for the school, it has been learned.

The officer inspected a tract of four hundred acres and another tract of twelve hundred acres, near Deep Creek Lake, but as yet those owning the land have not had a report from Major Lamborn.

McDonough School has approximately 1000 pupils each year. The buildings were burned two or three years ago and since that time buildings for the accommodation of the students and faculty have been occupied upon a rental basis. A permanent site is now being sought in this section, as Major Lamborn has expressed his purpose of rebuilding the school and wants to operate it in Maryland instead of removing to some other State.

FULL TIME PROGRAM FOR HEALTH WILL BE STARTED

Two Nurses to be Retained and Full-Time Health Officer to be Appointed by State

TO BEGIN DUTIES AUGUST 1

That the two health nurses would remain in the county and in addition a full time public health officer would be appointed, was announced yesterday by George D. Browning, president of the Board of County commissioners, following the regular semi-monthly meeting on Monday and Tuesday.

No announcement was made concerning the retention of the home demonstration agent position.

In making arrangements with the State department of health the commissioners agreed to levy the amount required after January 1, 1932, if the State would meet the expenses of the nurses from July 1, 1931, to January 1, 1932.

The full time county health officer will be placed in the county the first of August, according to Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State health department, the entire expense to be borne by the State. His duties will not interfere with the resident doctors, but will strive to prevent epidemics and improve health conditions, rather than cure sickness. The two health nurses of the county will work in cooperation with him.

Dr. Riley, Baltimore, and Dr. J. P. Franklin, deputy state officer, Cumberland, were before the commissioners concerning the question. The appointment of a full time health officer for Garrett county will make the sixteenth one for the State, leaving only seven counties having the full time health program.

Uncertainty as to whether or not the health nurse positions would be continued in the county was felt when the County Commissioners did not make provision in the annual levy in April of this year for either health work or the office of the home demonstration agent, claiming that many of the taxpayers wanted lower taxes at no matter what cost.

This led to a public meeting before the commissioners on May 11 where representatives of the county expressed themselves strongly in favor of continuing both offices. The State department of health then offered to appoint a full time health officer for this county at the entire expense of the State, if the county would continue the health program. Reconsideration of their decision by the commissioners led to the present announcement.

Deer Park Golf Club Formed by Local Enthusiasts of Sport

A club, known as the Deer Park Golf club, has been formed for the purpose of providing entertainment for those in Garrett county and vicinity enjoying the sport, it has been announced.

The club has obtained the use of the famous Deer Park Golf course, and work is going forward on getting the grounds in shape for its opening on Saturday. At present nine holes will be put in shape, but eventually all 18 holes may be played.

The club grounds will be open to the public at a nominal fee. A meeting of members and anyone interested will be held tomorrow at the Manhattan hotel, at 8 o'clock, and all are invited to attend.

The formation of the club fits in with the program of the Allegheny Tableland association in the development of recreational facilities for this section. Officers elected at a recent meeting included D. Edward Offutt, president; W. O. Davis, secretary and treasurer; and F. R. Utterback, chairman of the greens committee. There are about fifteen members at present.

An official opening of the grounds is being planned for the latter part of July.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

Louis Waingold was scared out of ten years' growth when the judge pronounced sentence against him in court this week. Mayor Stemple and I want it understood, however, that all short people are not short because of a number of sentences from the judge.

Scoop had two pleasant callers in bis private office last Friday evening concerning the roadhouse at Deep Creeke Bridge. These two gentlemen want it known that they charge only a nickel for cold drinks. I agreed with them in that.

They also tried to convince me that I got a ten cent dipper of ice cream for ten cents. I didn't agree with them in that. They never disputed the price of the coffee, which was ten cents for one cup.

I'm just as glad to say that the drinks are only five cents as I was to say that coffee was ten cents; and also that they have five cent dippers of cream.

The party broke up in good spirits, and I hope Deep Creek prospers.

See Your Dentist Twice a Year

I did my yearly trip yesterday. I dropped around to Doc Grant's office, the tusk polisher, to have him examine my fangs and see if any washers needed slipping on. There's only one reason I do it and that is so I can eat taffy and not go around snapping at vittles with bare gums.

I climbed into the chair and opened Mammoth Cave and he immediately began poking around with an instrument. Twice he touched something that suggested the quick bursting kiss of a tropical lightning bolt, but we just laughed that off—that is, he did most of the laughing.

Then he snipped off a couple yards of something, put it on my molar and smeared it with something tasting like sour bean soup mixed with radiator brass polish. Then he propped my mouth open with a two by four, and started gazing out the window to see if it was raining, whether or not Neil Fraley was in his office (which of course he wasn't), who was doing business in the bank, how many patients Dr. Hinebaugh had, and whether Coffman-Fisher's sale was going over.

"Ay, ock," I forced out, "oo ont I onay hance eside oo ok ow au-ee il oo?" He just nodded and replied: "Oh my tonsils feel fine and all the children are well". I just wanted to know if there was any chance of him walking out on me.

I sat there for half an hour while he cross-questioned me about all my family affairs, and all I could say was "es", and "oo".

Then he went into the reception room, leaving me to my fate, but I got it back on him for everything he did or expected to do. I played with his squirt bottles, switches, grinders, and bush buttons until the machinery in there was doing the work of an electric fan. I was just getting ready to sail a paper boat in the blood catcher when he returned.

After he finished he had me return the tools he had used to Kerins Brothers garage. And although it isn't New Year's I am going to make a concerted effort to stop eating caramels and taffy from now on.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Eve started it and the daughters of Eve inherited it. Eve gave Adam the apple, and it seems that Adam must have passed it on. For every man and every woman has an Adam's Apple. Put your finger on your Adam's Apple—that is your larynx, your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. Consider your Adam's Apple—when you do so, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Reach for a LUCKY instead. Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette which brings you the added benefit of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process, which includes the use of modern Ultra Violet Rays. It is this exclusive process that expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

A TRIUMPH FOR COUNTY—

In the face of attempts to cut off enirely the health program in the county by a number of citizens who could see no advantages to the work, it has been made possible to continue both of the health nurses and in addition the appointment of a full-ime health officer and the inauguration of a full-time program, such as are carried out in fifteen other counties of the State.

This is a triumph for Garrett county. To have stopped organized health work in the county just when it had gained a foothold would have been suicide to the whole program and unhealthy for the progress of Garrett county.

But in adopting a full-time health program the county moves forward, the direction in which everybody should be headed.

A SPRING TONIC—

Last week the head of McDonough school, of near Baltimore, was in Garrett county looking over sites for his proposed school. Should he decide to locate in the county, near Deep Creek or not, the advantages of such a step are well worth imagining.

Add one thousand boys to the population of Oakland, and the parents of many of them who would spend a lot of time here, and the effect would be miraculous.

The erection of a school in this vicinity may not be a panacea for all ills, but it would be to business of the community what a spring tonic is to the human system.

Affairs of Mountain Lake Park and the Contenders for Incorporation

To the Editor of The Republican:

I have lived practically all my life in Mt. Lake Park and own property here. Being a carpenter, I have worked on nearly every cottage in the place. I have watched properties decay and go to ruin, all because owners felt that even if they were kept up, and repaired, they could not find a renter or buyer. There are two such houses in my neighborhood now, and many more scattered throughout the Park.

The Park has been running down for the past ten years or more; for we people who live here, and own property and pay taxes, feel that we have but little say in the governing of the town in which we live. The Association or Foreign and Home Mission, have the controlling power in regulating and controlling the place. The citizens, over 200, who live here the year around, can't work in harmony with the Association under present conditions. They feel they are entitled to a Municipal form of government.

And in voting for this, they are voting for their rights. There is no valid reason why the Foreign and Home Mission can't operate its hotels and public buildings under an incorporated town, as well as under the present management in which they have control. The threats that if the place is incorporated, they would sell out. Suppose they did, whoever the purchaser might be, would work to build up the property and make it valuable by renting it to various conventions that would come here.

Then another tale is, that they might abandon all their property and let it go to rack and ruin. Of course they could do this, but would it be acting like Christians towards the poor people at this place, who borrowed money to help pay off the mortgage debt of $32,000, before the Foreign and Home Mission, would accept the Park as a gift. If they don't want their holdings in an incorporated town, then why not sell out to the Camp Meeting Association, or to some other religious order, who don't mind being located in an incorporated town. Loch Lynn has two churches, and we never hear a word that they object to being in an incorporated town. And if it had the buildings suitable for Conventions, Camp Meeting, etc., I am sure they would hold out a true Christian invitation for them to come, and would show them every courtesy. But I don't believe Loch Lynn would favor giving up its Mayor and Council, and letting owners of these convention buildings run the town for them. They could see no plausible reason why this should be done any more than we citizens of the Park can understand why the Foreign and Home Mission, who only own $52,000 of assessed property in the Park out of a total of more than $500,000, should think they are entitled to run our Park for us. Do they think we are a bunch of illiterate Mountaineers and not capable to run our own town?

By propaganda that is being spread they must think we are a crowd of feeble minded people. Let's incorporate the Park, and let the citizens and property owners elect their own people to run it.

If the Foreign and Home Mission wants to take exception to this, and sell out, or abandon their holdings, let them do it; but in doing the latter, they certainly would not show that they were acting thru any Christian spirit. It would show anger and selfishness on their part, and more the promptings of the devil than of God. And they call this Park Sacred Ground. With all the propaganda, slander and falsehoods being told to gain a selfish purpose. I wonder what God must be thinking of his people. Is it any wonder the Park doesn't succeed.

Owing to my health and upon the advice of my physician I am compelled to offer my business for sale.

Here is a fine opportunity for some one, as this business has been established for over thirty years and has always enjoyed the patronage of the public.

The Bakery is equipped with up-to-date machinery, sanitary in every respect. The store room is also equipped with up-to-date furniture and situated in one of the best locations of the town of Oakland.

While I am not able to carry on the baking business, I will continue to operate the store and in addition to light lunches and confectionery I will handle the products of the Sanitary Baking Company, of Clarksburg, W. Va. Their Bakery products are famous throughout West Virginia.

Thanking the public for their patronage and their loyal support in the past thirty years, I hope that my successor will give you the same courteous treatment and service.

Very sincerely yours,

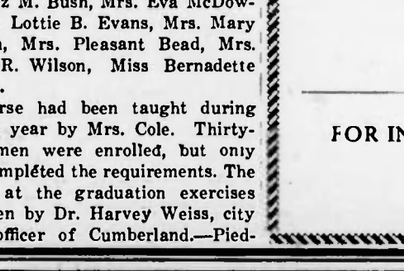
Do You Know That for the price of a Cake of Soap



SOAP is cheap. Everyone knows that! We use it freely without thought of cost. But did you ever stop to think that the electricity to do an entire washing costs less than the soap that is used. And so it is with most other household tasks. Electricity bears the burden at a trifling cost. Nearly every service it performs in the home may be paid for with pennies. In fact, if you paid for electricity as you use it, pennies would pay your electric bill.

Electricity will do 2 weeks washing

"WE HAVE First Class SERVICE AT $4.54 A MONTH"

There's just no end to the ways that elcctricity helps make our home more livable. It's constantly on duty to save me work and worry. At the same time, it contributes generously to the attractiveness of our surroundings by providing us with plenty of good light.

From Monday morning, when it does the washing, to Saturday afternoon, when it gives the house a thorough cleaning for Sunday . . . electricity takes over the heaviest part of the housework. The electric Iron speeds up the Ironing. The electric refrigerator simplifies marketing, preparing and keeping food. Even such electric appliances as percolator, toaster, waffle iron and fan are a big help around the house.

No question about it. I just couldn't keep house without electricity. Yet we have first-class service at only $4.54 an average month. Mrs. J. B. D. (a Monongahela customer—Webster Springs).

And Electric Cooking!

In addition to all this, Mrs. J. B. D. could enjoy the advantages of electric cooking by using only about 130 more kilowatt hours.

Since she is using 94 kilowatt hours, the additional 130 would cost her $3.01. In 1924, this total of 224 kilowatt hours, which now cost $7.55, would have cost her $33.60.

It is our policy not only to decrease the cost of current, step by step, with increased consumption; but also to study constantly how to improve our service.

CHAPTER XXIII

A large party, including Col. E. M. House, the American delegates to the interallied conference, Ambassador William G. Sharp and Lord Northcliffe, went by special train from Paris December 4, 1917, to our training area, stopping at my Chaumont headquarters en route.

On the train I had an interesting conversation with Lord Northcliffe of the British air board regarding the formation of an American army and its transportation overseas. Lord Northcliffe thought his government should do more to help with shipping, but, like most Englishmen, he believed it best for us to send our men for service with the British. He argued in favor of a proposal that Lloyd George had recently made to Mr. House, that we should incorporate in their units any infantry that we might not be able to organize immediately into complete divisions of our own.

"It is all very well," I said, "to make such an appeal to us, but it is impossible to ignore our national viewpoint. The people themselves would not approve, even though the President and his advisers should lean that way. We cannot permit our men to serve under another flag except in an extreme emergency, and then only temporarily."

I also insisted that we would contribute more largely to allied success by the use of the American army as a unit.

Hits Fault Finders.

About this time Mr. House told me that Petain had criticized the American ideas of training and also that Louis Loucheur, minister of munitions, had spoken about the rise in prices caused by American purchases. Mr. House wisely suggested to these gentlemen, he said, that matters of this kind were for me to settle.

I called without delay on M. Clemenceau and told him of the reports and explained my understanding about training agreements with Petain and also the steps that had previously been taken by the purchasing board, in co-operation with his own bureaus, to prevent the rise in prices. I also told him that French dealers were largely to blame if prices had risen, as we had eliminated competition among ourselves and that our purchases were and had been for some time actually handled through French officials.

I objected to these back-door methods of lodging complaints and emphasized the necessity of frankness and directness in all our dealings. I asked him to give instructions that if there was any fault to find with our methods it should be brought to my personal attention. He entirely agreed with me and expressed chagrin and surprise that any other course had been followed. On the face of it there was no other conclusion, however, than that both complaints were made for the purpose of finding out just the extent of my independent authority.

Gets Apology From Petain.

I took occasion a few days later to let Petain know very politely what I thought of the impropriety of this sort of thing and also criticized him then and there for telling anybody, even Mr. House, as he had done, about the plan to attack the St. Mihiel salient as the first offensive by the American army. I was pleased with Petain's apology and his statement that there would be no further action of this kind on his part.

As a matter of fact, I think the French erroneously regarded House as a sort of special ambassador, and thought that they could lay the foundation for an approach through him to the question of amalgamation.

Just before his return to the States House said to me that he entirely agreed with me, and that he felt sure the President and secretary of war intended to leave the whole question regarding the disposition of our troops to my judgment. Assurance on this point was in no sense necessary, as I had full confidence that this was the case.

During his stay in France I formed a high opinion of House's ability. We formed a friendship in the beginning which enabled us to discuss all matters most freely and frankly. Before he left for home he and I arranged for confidential communication by cable should it become necessary to reach Mr. Baker or Mr. Wilson direct.

The Missing Turkeys.

Immediately upon my return to headquarters at Chaumont December 7, 1917, General Harbord reported there had been a shortage of turkeys and other essentials of a truly American Thanksgiving dinner, and in a facetious manner deplored the heartlessness of a staff at Washington that would so neglect our troops.

He stated that the shortage was due to these supplies, which had been ordered in September for delivery November 1, being buried under a large cargo that could not be unloaded in time. The following cable was sent as written by Harbord:

"On September 18 supplies for Thanksgiving were ordered. Your cablegram stated mincemeat shipped on Montanan. There was no mincemeat on Montanan. Mincemeat arrived November 26 on Powhatan, underneath heavy cargo, which it was necessary to discharge before mincemeat could be unloaded. Result mincemeat aboard ship Thanksgiving day. Sweet potatoes arrived on Dakotan and could not be unloaded until November 22; result, some troops did not have sweet potatoes. It was necessary to buy geese to fill requisitions on account of part of turkeys not arriving, notwithstanding the fact that Thanksgiving supplies were ordered to arrive in France November 1."

Although we had treated this matter lightly, I really felt regret that some of our troops had been deprived of a homelike Thanksgiving dinner, and at the same time I was not at all pleased to have further evidence of careless loading of ships.

Need Two Regular Divisions.

In considering the composition of our expeditionary forces, it was a question whether we ought to organize higher units by using regular regiments, with a proportionate number of new officers, or utilize the permanent commissioned personnel of the line for equitable assignment to the citizen contingents and leave our regular organizations to be completed from the relatively raw material at our disposal, and thus build up all categories of the army simultaneously.

I recommended that regular regiments at Honolulu and elsewhere be relieved for this purpose by National Guard regiments. These regular troops would more nearly approximate the standards of our allies at the start, and, more important still, their use would diminish the chances of reverses during our first encounters with the enemy. The acting chief of staff at home, Maj. Gen. John Biddle, agreed with my suggestion, but the widely separated locations of these regiments made their replacement somewhat difficult, and only the Third, Fourth and Fifth divisions came in time for service early in 1918, the Sixth and Seventh arriving to take part in the fall campaign.

CHAPTER XXIV

The progress of our preparation at home at this time (December, 1917) was far from being satisfactory, as tests of newly arrived troops showed their instruction was not up to our standards in France.

It was evident that my recommendations were being disregarded. This faulty training at home threw an extra burden upon us of training officers and men after their arrival.

I had urged that we should follow our own conception of training, emphasizing the rifle and bayonet as the supreme weapons of the infantry soldier, and insisted upon training for open warfare.

The training of officers for the general staff, which also necessarily had to be undertaken in France, was well under way at the general staff school, at Langres, forty miles south of Chaumont, under the able direction of Major General McAndrew. The three months' course of instruction was based upon our staff organization and was conducted by our own instructors, with two or three French and an equal number of British officers to assist as lecturers. The difficulty was the scarcity of officers available for detail as students.

We were confronted with the task of building up an army of millions that would require as many trained staff officers as we had officers in the whole regular army at the beginning of the war. To meet this urgent demand Washington was asked to send over in advance a small percentage of officers from each division for instruction, but only a few ever came.

My diary notes the following:

Chaumont, Wednesday, Jan. 2, 1918.—Both French and British pressing us for amalgamation.

Went to Marshal Haig's headquarters Friday by rail, accompanied by Colonel Wagstaff, and spent the night. Motored through heavy snowdrifts out from Etaples; gangs of "conscientious objectors" opening up roads. Discussed with Sir Douglas possible shipment by and training of American troops with British.

Visited king and queen of Belgium and their army at Adenkirke on Saturday.

As we have seen, there has been some talk of the British providing shipping to bring over American troops for training behind their lines. During the evening I spent with Sir Douglas Haig, as noted in the diary, he presented his plans for training our troops. His idea was to place the battalions as they arrived, one to the brigade, in selected British divisions, preferably those serving on the southern part of their front, and then gradually to increase the number of battalions until the division should become wholly American.

Hoping to commit the British definitely on the question of tonnage, which up to that time we had not succeeded in doing, I did not offer serious objection to the plan and even approved some of the features, especially those pertaining to the earlier part of the proposed training, and for the moment the question was left open for further conference.

Causes King to Wait.

I left British headquarters the next morning en route to the Belgian front to pay my respects to the king and queen. As Sir Douglas was off to London my car was attached to his train and we traveled together to Boulogne, where he boarded the channel boat and I took a special, consisting of my car and one other, and proceeded on my way.

We were due at Adenkirke, my destination, at a fixed hour, but to my surprise the train pulled in ten minutes ahead of time. I was changing into my best uniform—in fact, was just putting on the right boot—when my aid, Colonel Boyd, stuck his head in at the door of my compartment and said breathlessly: "General, we have arrived."

I knew it only too well, as the train had stopped and the royal band outside was playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the mournful cadence common to foreign bands. It was an embarrassing thought that I should be late. In another minute, when the orderly and myself were struggling, this time with the left boot, Boyd again appeared and said in a stage whisper that was no doubt heard by the entire escort outside: "Sir, the king is out there standing at the salute."

That was too much, the humor of the situation overcame me and for an instant all of us, including the orderly, who rarely smiled, were convulsed with laughter. That did not help matters, of course, and meanwhile the band outside, which had already played the national air through three times, was dolefully beginning on the fourth, when I hurriedly descended the steps of my car opposite his majesty, buttoning my overcoat with one hand and saluting with the other.

At my appearance the band started afresh and, as though they had just begun, ran through our national anthem rather more vigorously, cheered up no doubt at last to see me in evidence. A few months later I had the courage to relate the incident in all its details to their majesties and they both seemed to enjoy it immensely.

King Decorates Pershing.

After inspecting the escort in company with the king, he and I drove to their residence, where the queen, in her most gracious manner, received us at the entrance. We had a very enjoyable luncheon, which Boyd thought was quite gay, especially when I became bold enough to air my dreadful French. After lunch King Albert, to my surprise, said he wished to bestow upon me the Order of the Grand Cordon of Leopold, and as I hesitated, saying that we were not permitted to receive foreign decorations, he insisted that I should accept it conditionally, which, of course, was the only thing to do. Boyd was decorated also.

In the afternoon the king, with his chief of staff, took me to his G. H. Q. and then to the front-line trenches, explaining the disposition of the limited force with which their positions were held. It consisted of only the six divisions which had stubbornly retired in 1914 in the face of overwhelming odds. It was then being recruited by Belgians escaping from within the German lines at the risk of their lives.

Amused by U. S. Congressmen.

While we were driving, King Albert related with much amusement some incidents of a recent visit by a party of our congressmen, and inquired whether it was customary in our country for them to be on familiar terms with the President. He said that some of them had called him Albert and one had slapped him on the back, saying: "King, you're the right sort of fellow and everybody in America admires you." I explained to him that our congressmen were more or less privileged characters at home and that they only meant to be friendly. As a matter of fact, I think their familiarity did not offend him at all.

During my brief visit I was particularly impressed by the extreme simplicity of the home life of the king and queen, living there, as they were, in a very modest country place within sound of the enemy's guns and almost within range! The queen often went into the trenches to cheer the troops, and the fine bearing of their majesties through it all made them the outstanding heroic figures of the World war.

These firms are finding, through experience, that Chevrolet sedan deliveries are capable of 20 miles or better, to the gallon of gasoline; that Chevrolet 1½-ton trucks are making fuel records which are relatively just as high. That it costs very little to keep Chevrolet trucks in first-class working order. That Chevrolet service charges on both parts and labor are exceptionally low. Statement Authorized and Approved by the Board of Directors of Mountain Lake Park Association In Session at Mountain Lake Park, Maryland, June 13, 1931.

Board of Foreign Missions,
Methodist Episcopal Church,
150 Fifth Avenue New York.
June 15, 1931.

To the Editor The Republican,
Oakland, Maryland.

Dear Mr. Editor:—Enclosed you will find a statement from the Board of Directors of Mountain Lake Park Association, which will be of interest to your readers. We shall appreciate its clearance in the columns of your paper this week or next.

Thanking you, I am,
Sincerely,
JOHN R. EDWARDS.

The Mountain Lake Park Association, a corporation having a perpetual Maryland charter, was taken over by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church on June 9, 1920, with the understanding that there was no financial or other obligation.

Since the Association has come into the control of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the work has been carried on through a Board of Directors, part of who have been closely identified with the Park by residence and other personal interests.

For many years—in fact from its very beginning—the Park, by reason of its short term of operation, has never met expenses. Formerly stockholders and friends furnished money to meet annual deficits. There has been no exception to this rule since the Park has been under the direction of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, except that the deficit has been carried by the Board of Foreign Missions rather than by subscriptions raised on the ground or from friends of the Association. This deficit with certain repair costs for upkeep, now amounts to $110,133.61.

Summer resorts, similar to Mountain Lake Park, have undergone great changes in recent years. Many new resorts, accesible to the cities and other communities from which Mountain Lake Park draws patronage, have sprung up. Others have fallen by the wayside for lack of patronage. Meanwhile, under the leadership of the Board of Foreign Missions, young people have been attracted to Mountain Lake Park in goodly numbers because pastors and other church leaders of Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia have encouraged and assisted their young people to attend institutes and conferences at Mountain Lake Park.

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church has furnished, since 1920, a religious, educational and recreational program which has brought into the Park several thousand people annually. This program has been continued, even at a financial loss, because of the good accomplished by the program and through interest in the local community.

In the recent Legislature of the State of Maryland, as at other times, certain residents of the community petitioned for the right of incorporation of the Park as a town. The Legislature of 1931 granted a referendum on this subject.

We do not look with favor upon this attempt to incorporate for the following reasons:

(1) The charter of Mountain Lake Park Association, Article II, states:

> "The object of this Association shall be the establishment of a summer resort founded upon Christian principles and designed to afford opportunities for religious and literary instruction and recreation."

The By-Laws of the Community of Mountain Lake Park, approved under Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, Section 22, Chapter 430, Acts of 1888, reads as follows:

> "And be it enacted, That the said Community is not to have, possess or acquire any political franchises whatsoever, nor any of those powers ordinarily distinguishing public or municipal corporations from corporations or associations merely private . . ."

The Association was incorporated and has been developed and operated under these terms, which the plan to incorporate as a town would tend to nullify.

(2) In voting for or against incorporation, the stock of the Association, held by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is without vote.

(3) In case incorporation is voted and put into operation, the Mayor and Council can assess and tax properties which are now held for the good of the community and not for any personal profit whatever, and will be in a position to so restrict the very purpose for which the Association was established and today exists, as to counteract the work of the Association. It is worthy of note that similar places of assembly, such as Lakeside, Ohio; Lake Geneva and Silver Bay are allowed to operate in their respective communities free from taxation. Even then, none of these are able to finance themselves on the summer receipts but are obliged to draw upon contributed or invested funds for support.

Because the subject of incorporation has been brought forward and because division of opinion has arisen, it will be increasingly difficult to operate a successful program, thus throwing increasing financial responsibility upon the Association and increasing losses upon the neighborhood. Therefore, we cannot assume that the Mission Board will continue operation of the Park even though the incorporation act fails of passage.

It is quite certain that if the referendum for incorporation passes, the Board of Foreign Missions will withdraw its support not later than the close of the present season.

Facts Versus Fancies at Mountain Lake Park.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I do not propose to argue or theorize concerning the proposition to turn this summer resort into a twin town to Loch Lynn or a rival to Oakland. Each of those towns has its peculiar place and function; so has Mountain Lake Park. Those living in Mountain Lake Park and longing for the attractions of a municipality, with petty offices to attract the politically ambitious, can easily move into a corporated town at small cost or change of air and climate and without disturbance or disruption of friends and firesides long since established and peacefully enjoyed.

Records show some facts which were open and known to everyone vitally concerned with the affairs and government of the Park from its beginning, so that nothing new or strange has been sprung upon anyone to take advantage of him and for which he did not bargain and agree when he invested in property here.

In the first place, we see the charter for this place recorded in Charter Book No. 1, page 65, and dated September 29, 1881, for a term of 40 years, to establish and maintain a religious, literary and musical summer resort, and further to build and operate hotels and stores for the accommodation and convenience of residents and visitors of the Park. The following that charter by the court we see an act of the Legislature of 1924, made the original charter perpetual.

By carefully reading and studying the Association's charter and the deeds issued under it we can see (without any fancy of our own) whether or not we hold unrestricted privileges to do business, desecrate the Sabbath or demoralize society, as our own wishes may suggest or a Mayor and Council may allow, and yet hold unimpaired title to the property assigned to us under different or opposite terms. It will do little good now to attempt to undo what we have contracted to do and try to put the Association out of business because we have sworn to our own hurt and want a change (See Psalm 15:4).

Following up the records we see a contract in Land Book 13, p. 701, between the Association and all lot owners up to December 31, 1888, "for the better improvement of all the land and for the fulfillment of the object for which the Association was incorporated" to ask the Legislature to incorporate the adjunct known as the Community of Mountain Lake Park. This was done by virtue of this contract and agreement.

Now the new town charter proposes to break the contract and purpose thereof and to ignore the rights of the other party to the contract and to destroy the distinctive value and purpose of Mountain Lake Park as a religious summer resort.

We find ourselves facing these facts whether we fancy them or not. We also find ourselves facing very serious moral as well as legal obligations. We cannot go back and undo the things we do not fancy; they have been done. Like our past sins, we can repent and seek a new life and a life under a Mayor and Council, either in Oakland or Loch Lynn and let those who like Mountain Lake Park live there in peace and quiet.

GARRETT COUNTY SCHOOLS CLOSE SUCCESSFUL YEAR

High Schools Graduate Largest Number In Their History—Much Improvement Made In Buildings and Equipment

ATTENDANCE IS GREATER

With the graduation exercises of the five High schools of the county and approximately 100 elementary schools last week, Garrett county closed one of its most successful school terms, according to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools.

This success was not only in attendance and increased efficiency, but many improvements were made and much development was manifest in the school buildings themselves, Mr. Rathbun said.

The year 1931 brought the largest graduating class from the high schools in the history of the county, 141 having completed their courses atFriendsville, Accident, Grantsville, Kitzmiller, and Oakland, and although numbers are not available on elementary graduates Mr. Rathbun stated the number would surpass any previous record.

The percentage of attendance was higher than in any previous year; there were less changes in the teaching staff, showing a well balanced, contented group; and only five out of two hundred have stated that they do not wish to return here next year.

Standard testing programs carried out in the elementary schools under the direction of the supervisors, have shown remarkable improvement on the part of the children, it was said, and all teachers have first grade certificates, the teaching staff has improved in efficiency.

Through the county commissioners' appropriation for capital outlay of schools, it was possible to build a two-room school at Shallmar, modern in every respect, for $3,500, fulfilling a need which is said to have existed there for several years; a four-room addition to Grantsville High school at a cost of $23,000, the purchase of four acres of ground near Grantsville high, and the installation of a modern heating system in the Grantsville building; the awarding of the contract for the installation of a new heating system in Oakland High school, to include the Maffett addition; placing of heating plants in the Accident, Swanton, and Kitzmiller schools; the installation of a water system at Accident school, and a lot of new furniture in practically every school in the county; and the enlargment of the school libraries.

The number of graduates in both elementary and high schools is increasing each year due to transportation of school children from rural sections, and it is estimated that there will be about 500 pupils in Oakland High school next year. Kempton High school, which was started three years ago, will have a graduating class in 1932, for the first time in history.

Through transportation of school children and the lessening of the number of schools in the county, there will be only three supervisors next year, instead of four, as previously employed.

"The situation throughout the entire year has been entirely satisfactory," Mr. Rathbun concluded.

Railway Employe Is Killed at Ridgeley, W. Va.

Asa A. Beegly, 50 years old, of Cumberland, an air inspector in the employ of the Western Maryland Railway, was killed Saturday when he fell between the cars of a moving train at the Ridgeley yards of the company, opposite Cumberland, in West Virginia. Both his legs were badly crushed and he was injured about his head and body.

Mr. Beeghly is survived by two sons, Aubrey and Park, and by a daughter, Katherine, the latter being the younger of trio, 17 years old. Six sisters also survive, namely: Mrs. Earl Coddington, Hyndman, Pa.; Mrs. Mary Rummel and Mrs. Martha Hunt, Johnstown, Pa.; Mrs. Philip Bowman, Accident, and Mrs. William Frazee and Mrs. Henry Hosteteler, of Oakland. He was a native of Accident, Garrett county, where a number of relatives still reside. His wife died several months ago.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at ten o'clock in St. Paul's Lutheran church, Accident, Rev. A. B. Harper, pastor, officiating, with interment in the town cemetery.

The school will be conducted for two weeks, exclusive of Saturday and Sunday, beginning at nine o'clock and concluding at 11:30 each day.

The leaders in charge are asking the people of the community to again cooperate by sending their children.

The closing exercises will be held on Sunday evening, July 12.

DATES FOR PRE-SCHOOL CLINICS ARE ARRANGED

Children Expecting to Enter the Schools Must Be Examined

A number of pre-school clinics have been arranged by Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, public health nurse, beginning Monday, June 29, in order that all children who expect to enter the public schools of Garrett county this fall may undergo a physical examination. These clinics will be free of charge.

Letters are being sent to all parents of children who are about to begin their school career, urging them to be present at the point nearest their homes on the date given below. A report of the examination will be sent to the family doctor. Vaccination of all children will be included in the examination.

The schedule as arranged by Mrs. Fahey is as follows:

June 29, 10:00 a. m. and 2:00 p. m., Oakland elementary school building.

June 30, 10:00 a. m., Swanton elementary school building; 2:00 p. m., Deer Park school building.

LARGE NUMBER EXAMINED AT CLINIC HELD SATURDAY

Eleven Were Listed As Entirely New Cases at the Examination

Fifty-three were examined at the sixth orthopedic clinic of the county, held last Saturday in the Court House in Oakland. It was one of the most successful clinics ever held in this community, according to Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, public health nurse.

Eleven of those examined were entirely new cases to the examining surgeon and covered injuries to the feet, spine, etc., with one new case the result of infantile paralysis. None of the cases had been caused by recent illnesses, but had been defects of long standing, the health nurse said.

The clinic was conducted by Dr. Weinberg, of Baltimore, assisted by Miss Mary E. Church, executive secretary for the Maryland League for Crippled Children, Mrs. Samuel Cole, Kitzmiller public health nurse, and members of the Oakland Civic Club.

Rev. D. C. Trimble furnished transportation with his car for those to be examined.

Mr. R. C. Thompson, supervisor of special education of the State Department of Education, was present in the interest of providing special education for the physically handicapped children of the county.

The new cases brought to light at the clinic will be studied and hospital care provided as soon as those requiring it can be placed, Mrs. Fahey stated.

Eleven at Chest Clinic

Eleven cases were examined at the chest clinic held last Thursday afternoon. Dr. W. O. McLane, Jr., of Frostburg, was in charge. Eight of the eleven cases were new.

MURDER TRIAL TO BEGIN TUESDAY AT CUMBERLAND

Mrs. Rosa Felda and Mrs. Wm. Harvey to go on Trial for Causing Death of Former's Husband

WAS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Sheriff Hugh A. Hotchkiss of Allegany county was instructed to summon jurors for the trial of Mrs. Rosa Felda and Mrs. William Harvey, of Garrett county indicted in connection with the death of the former's husband, Michael Felda, on February 8. The trial, removed from this county, will start Tuesday morning, June 30, in the Circuit court at Cumberland.

Felda was found dead in bed at his home near Wilson Station, and it was presumed that he died from acute alcoholism. An investigation by county authorities revealed that the liquor found in a bottle by his bed had been poisoned. Examination of the dead man's stomach also revealed traces of poison, investigators declared.

Officers also reported that Mrs. Felda was identified as the woman who purchased poison at an Oakland drug store several days before Felda was found dead. Mrs. Harvey, who is the wife of "Western Bill" Harvey, was indicted in connection with the death of Felda.

Harold Ott, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ott, fell from the top of the summer house in the southeast corner of the Bush property on Crook Crest, last Friday afternoon, running the head of a nail into his right cheek and receiving a number of other bruises.

A physician was called who dressed the wounds.

WILL CONTINUE OFFICE OF THE HOME DEMONSTRATOR

Board of County Commissioners Decides Question at Special Meeting Held Yesterday

POSITION VACANT JULY 1

At a special meeting of the Board of County Commissioners held in the board room at the Court House yesterday morning, it was decided by that body to continue the office of home demonstration agent for this county.

As Miss Elsie Benthien, present home demonstration agent has resigned, the resignation to become effective on June 30, the appointment to fill the vacancy thus created will be made by Miss Venia M. Kellar, State Home Demonstration agent, in cooperation with Dr. T. B. Symons, head of the University of Maryland Extension Service, within the next month.

The office is being continued for the present through a special arrangement with the Extension Service. This brings to a successful conclusion the controversy which arose following the failure of the County Commissioners to provide salaries for either the public health nurse or home demonstration agent in the annual levy in April of the present year.

During the year 1930 the appropriation for both county agent and home demonstration agent work was $1,950, and the appropriation for health service was $2,450, making a total of $4,400 for these very important and praiseworthy objects. While some of the citizens were enthusiastic for the retention of both offices others expressed their disapproval.

Through the present arrangements made by the commissioners, all this work is retained for 1931 with an appropriation by the county of only $1,100, and in addition a full-time health officer and clerk for that office has been promised by the State Department of Health, thus completing a full-time health program for the county at slight expense.

Telegraph Office To Be Open Until 10:00 P. M. During Summer

The Western Union Telegraph Company will extend its business hours until 10:00 p. m. during the summer months, according to Bernard I. Gonder, local manager. The office will open at the regular time, 9:00 a. m. The summer hours go into effect immediately.

COMING TO OAKLAND TO ERECT MONUMENT IN MEMORY OF HER MOTHER, DAUGHTER MEETS LONG LOST FATHER

Mrs. Paul Gatti, New York, Had Lost Track of Her Father, Wm. Chambers, Who Went West In 1917; Now Living Here

MEMORIAL IS ERECTED

Returning to Oakland with her husband to erect a monument over her mother's grave, Mrs. Paul Gatti, of New York City, found her father, William Chambers, living here, whom she had not seen since 1917, and who just last year returned to Oakland from the far west whence he had gone prior to the World War.

At the time Mr. Chambers went to the west he and his daughter Louise, who was then thirteen years of age, were residents of Confluence, Pa. The mother of Mrs. Gatti, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Conn, former residents of Oakland, died a short time after the birth of the daughter and was buried in the Brant family cemetery north of Oakland. Following the death of Mrs. Chambers, the father and daughter made their home at Confluence. Mrs. Gatti was placed with her grandmother in Pittsburgh by her father when he went to the west and she later went to New York, there meeting her husband four years ago.

The father and daughter were unable to locate one another in the meantime and it was not until Mr. Gatti consented to come to Garrett county for the purpose of honoring his wife's departed mother that the whereabouts of each one was established.

The meeting took place at the lake shore home of Mr. Chambers just beyond Deep Creek Lake bridge a few days ago.

When Mr. and Mrs. Gatti return to New York on Friday the Brant family cemetery, three miles north of Oakland, on Route 37, will present an entirely different appearance. Cement posts will mark the boundary of the lots and four large markers will be erected over the graves of the relatives of Mrs. Gatti who are buried there. In addition the entire cemetery will be fenced.

A graveled walk will lead into the cemetery from the highway and facing the road a marble column will be erected with the inscription, "The construction and remodeling of this cemtery has been accomplished through the efforts of Paul Gatti, from Torino, Italy, June 24, 1931." The column is nine feet in height including the pedestal upon which it rests.

The four markers will bear the names of Mrs. Cora Mae Conn Chambers, who was Mrs. Gatti's mother; Miss Viola Conn, Mrs. Georgiana Sterne Savage, and Miss Mattie Kathryn Conn. Mr. J. W. Conn, grandfather of Mrs. Chambers, is assisting with the work of remodeling.

The material and construction work will cost approximately $1,000, according to Mr. Gatti. Mr. Gatti has been in the United States for twenty years and is the owner of two restaurants in New York City. He served 26 months in the United States Army during the World War, having enlisted as a private and received an honorable discharge as a second lieutenant. He was attached to the Twenty-eighth Division.

Upon the completion of the work, the cemetery will be open to the public at any time. Many other graves in this family plot have nothing more than plain markers, hence it is impossible to state who are buried beneath them.

TWO STILLS DISCOVERED BY PROHIBITION AGENTS

Emory E. Devers Is Arrested Early This Morning

Two raids last night and early this morning netted prohibition officers two stills, several barrels of mash, and eleven gallons of liquor, and caused the arrest of Emory E. Devers, near Table Rock.

Devers was arrested last night on the Hays farm, near Table Rock where Harold B. Hall, William R. Harvey, prohibition officers, deputy sheriff Clarence Spear and Charles Peifer, special officer, discovered a 50-gallon still and eight barrels of mash.

Officers found four and one-half gallons of liquor at the home of William H. Lower, near Bayard. Later they found a 25-gallon still in operation on his farm near Table Rock, 7 gallons of liquor and 70 gallons of mash. Officers Hall and Harvey made the raid.

JOINT JUBILEE EXPECTED TO ATTRACT LARGE CROWD

All Arrangements Have Been Completed for Celebration in Oakland on July 3 and 4

TWO PARADES SCHEDULED

With all arrangements made for visitors, drum corps, fire departments, bands, scout troops, concessions, rides and many other amusements, everything is in readiness for the homecoming celebration to be held in Oakland July 3 and 4 under the joint auspices of the American Legion and Volunteer Fire Department.

The number of attractions is equal if not greater than those provided last year, according to Neil Fraley, member of the committee in charge, and many former residents of Garrett county are expected to return for the celebration and make it a homecoming event.

George Henderson, State commander of the legion, will be present and others who have been invited and who expect to attend are Arthur McGee, State adjutant; Major George Parker, famous fighting marine; Charles Houck, vice-commander, of Frederick.

Firemen's day will be Friday, July 3, and the parade in the evening at 6 o'clock will include fire companies from Frostburg, Tri-Towns, Ridgeley, Barton, Midland, Terra Alta, Keyser, Friendsville, Rowlesburg, Romney, Grantsville, Thomas and Davis, and others, and visiting bands will be in Oakland on that day.

Legion Day will be Saturday, July 4, and the parade of drum corps, floats, scout troops and visiting bands will take place at 6 o'clock p. m. Drum and bugle corps from Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania will take part. The Oakland Drum and Bugle Corps members will appear for the first time in their new uniforms.

Stores to Close

All stores in Oakland will be open on the evening of July 3, but will be closed all day July 4.

The Keystone Attractions Company will be here all week, beginning June 29, on the Sweeney lot, Third street, and will have a merry-go-round, ferris wheel, swing, two shows and a number of concessions. A large fireworks display has been arranged for the evening of the Fourth. One hundred dollars in cash will also be awarded at this time.

Every ex-service man in Garrett county and the surrounding counties are urged to be present at the celebration and take part in the Legion parade on the evening of the Fourth.

The local Legion post will hold a special meeting Monday, June 29, at 7:30 in order to make final plans and appoint last minute committees.

Large Motor Boat Not For Hire On Deep Creek Lake

"Miss Chevrolet of Johnstown," the large motor boat recently launched on Deep Creek Lake, is not used for pay passengers, but is only for the use of members of Camp Majestic, according to a letter received from Lee Gilbert, president of the organization.

The letter was written to correct a misunderstanding that the boat would be for hire to the public. The owners are employes of the Chevrolet Motor Sales Company of Johnstown, and any member who desires the use of the boat must make arrangements with the officers of the organization.

ANNUAL FAIR TO BE HELD SEPTEMBER 15, 16, 17, 18

Henry M. Speicher is Reelected Secretary and General Manager at Recent Board Meeting

CROP OUTLOOK EXCELLENT

That there will be an agricultural fair this fall and that the dates will be Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 15, 16, 17 and 18, was announced Monday by Henry M. Speicher, who was reelected secretary and general manager for 1931 by the Board of Directors at a recent meeting of that body.

"The outlook for crops is excellent," Mr. Speicher said in making the announcement of the coming fair. "Live stock is looking well for this time of the year and everything points to the greatest fair we have ever had if we have the support and cooperation of the farmers along with the business men of Oakland and other towns of the county."

John H. Carter, county agent, and Mr. Speicher within the next few days are going to work to revise the fair premium list, especially the awards relative to live stock, it was stated.

"If the people of the county will talk fair, think fair and act fair, the fifteenth annual agricultural exhibition will be the greatest we have ever had. Let's boost instead of knock and see the results," Mr. Speicher concluded.

The Board of Directors of the association includes the following: Dr. Henry W. McComas, president; Chas. W. Ream, vice-president; H. M. Speicher, secretary and general manager; W. G. Meyers, treasurer; H. A. Loraditch, A. R. Martin, G. B. M. Friend, Daniel E. Orendorf, H. L. Porter, J. W. Whorton, A. D. Naylor, W. C. Welch, Samuel R. Ringer, George D. Browning, Henry P. Miller, Bert C. Scott, Guy Hinebaugh and N. C. Sanders.

Kitzmiller High Teacher Weds.

A romance which developed at the Frostburg State Normal School culminated Monday at Cumberland, when Miss Loretta Porter, of Hagerstown, became the bride of Harold L. Alderton, of Cumberland. Both are public school teachers, the bride having taught at Hagerstown for several years and the groom having been an instructor in Kitzmiller High School the past year.

20 Boys Form Potato Club and Purchase Sprayer

For the purpose of receiving the benefit of a potato sprayer, with the hope of realizing more profit from their potato crop, a club has been formed by twenty 4-H club boys of Oakland. The organization is known as the Oakland Boys' Commercial Potato club.

The sprayer was obtained through the efforts of the county agent, the University Extension service, in cooperation with the vo-ag department of the local high school. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad donated $100 in cash toward the purchase of the sprayer and the John Bean Manufacturing company gave a discount.

Summer Assistants Named for Local Scout Troop

James Lee and Kenneth Stahl have been named assistants of Oakland Troop No. 1, boy scouts of America, for the summer months, and will be in charge of the meeting on Friday.

Members of the local troops are beginning to make preparations for the annual camping trip which will begin the early part of August, and each patrol is striving to maintain a good attendance record at meetings, and have all scouts reach the second class rank by the latter part of July.

A benefit picture will be held on July 27 and 28.

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

I really have no business writing a column this week. The whole office force seems to think that I am shaky and rather scatter brained, for, as you know, coming events cast their shadows before. The reason they think I am shaky is because I can see two shadows where before I could only see one. I am really very calm.

All was going peacefully until last week when I was swatting flies with unusual energy. The flies that escaped went out for reinforcements and brought back with them a whole insect army, included in which was a matrimonial bug. And when I made a swing for him with my trusty swatter I missed, for the first time in six weeks, and the brute stung me.

Once you are bitten by this bug, there is no hope for you, so Archibaldson tells me, and he ought to know, having been bitten by one himself.

All mistakes in The Republican this week, of whatever nature, will be charged to me, because the boss editor thinks I am in an excusable condition. But be careful what you read in this column for the next two weeks, because Archibaldson or the boss editor might try to cover up their shortcomings as columnists by telling a few things about me that aren't true.

Up at the Last Court

Said lawyer to citizen, "You're a cheat." "And you're a liar," retorted the citizen. "Now that the parties have identified each other," remarked the judge, "we will proceed with the case."

If you have nothing else to do, try passing an inspection on that new linoleum in Harned's drug store, and see if it doesn't remind you of broken raw eggs mixed with chopped up carrots and spinach.

Are You Paid Up?

A citizen who was seven years in arrears for The Republican, who had never had a good word to say for the editor, and who was always opposed to public improvements, was dying the other day, so Archibaldson went out to write up the obituary. "How do you feel?" he asked. " All looks bright before me," he gasped. "I thought so," returned Archie, "you'll see the blaze in about ten minutes."

At a final examination at the Oakland Grammar school, one of the questions asked was "Who are the four great men in Maryland history?" and one pupil answered, "Governor Ritchie, Lord Baltimore, Bill Broening, and Mayor Grover Stemple. In Friendsville, the answer included Wilbur Glenn and Johnny Fitzwater.

Maybe, someday, I will be famous too.

The entertainers at the Maryland theatre on Monday and Tuesday nights were fairly good. They all knew their instruments. But they would have gone over a lot bigger had they lost their announcer down about Deep Creek Lake. He evidently has stood bareheaded in the sun a little too long.

One of the great crimes which shorten life is indifference. If there is going to be indifference in Garrett county this summer concerning the Garrett County Fair, the offenders should be given free lodging in the hoose-gow.

If you talk fair, act fair, think fair, and play fair, you will get behind this annual agricultural exhibit and make it a success, no matter where it is held, and let these petty grievances float away on Wilson's creek.

If you can't boost, for heaven's sake, don't knock.

What Deep Creek Lake needs right now is for the property owners to hold a confab and decide to rid the banks and shore line of those logs, which are a menace to boats as long as they are allowed to roam with the wind.

I'll be back to help in two weeks.

Preliminary Figures on Marriages and Divorces in Garrett County Are Given

The Bureau of the Census announces that, according to the returns received, there were 24,592 marriages performed in Maryland during the year 1930 as compared with 25,124 in 1929, representing a decrease of 532, or 2.1 per cent. Of the total there were 1,236 marriages performed in Garrett county in 1930 and 1,243 in 1929. Garrett county stood fifth among the counties in the greatest number of licenses issued.

During the year 1930 there were 2,045 divorces granted in the State as compared with 2,111 in 1929, representing a decrease of 66, or 3.1 per cent. In the State there were 16 annulments in 1930 as compared with 6 in 1929. Garrett county showed 16 divorces in 1930 as compared with 10 in 1929. There were no annulments in the county.

The figures for this report from the Census Bureau were furished by the State Board of Health. The figures for 1930 are preliminary and are subject to correction.

AVOID FOURTH OF JULY ACCIDENTS AND TETANUS

Lockjaw Possible from Injuries Caused by Powder Burns

In your program for the Fourth of July include picnics and pageants; flag raisings; band concerts and ball games; fried chicken and ice cream; peanuts and lemonade; athletis contests and sports and a good time generally, but cut out the toy pistol with its blank cartridges and all other dangerous fireworks, is the advice of Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, to individuals planning Independence Day celebrations.

"Each season brings its own problems of health and of safety, and to nearly all health officers," Dr. Riley said, "the Fourth of July is associated with injuries from fireworks and the danger of tetanus—or lockjaw, to use the more familiar name for it—which is always connected with such accidents. This year's crop of accidents from toy pistols, torpedoes and other fireworks is not waiting for the Fourth of July. The papers are already carrying reports of such accidents. There are plenty of ways of celebrating Independence Day without firing off blank cartridges or indulging in other dangerous fireworks. Try something that is safer and saner.

"There is always danger of lockjaw from injuries that are caused by fireworks. The disease is caused by a germ that flourishes in closed places out of reach of the air and that develops in injuries into which the dirt has been forced and sealed in.

"Wounds from firecrackers, blank cartridges and similar explosives are of this sort. Gun wadding or other material that has been forced into the flesh usually carries the germs of tetanus with it.

"Other injuries besides those from fireworks carry the same danger, as the germs of tetanus are widely scattered. They are particularly found in street dirt, stable dirt and in the dirt that is blown around in the dust. The size of the wound makes no difference. A mere puncture by a dirty nail or by splinters may force the infectuous material into the flesh. Automobile accidents or other accidents that cause dirt to be crushed into a wound have the same possibilities of danger.

"A person who has an injury of this sort—no matter how it is caused—should get to a doctor as quickly as possible so that the wound may be opened, surgically cleansed and properly treated, and also in order that the doctor may administer tetanus antitoxin to prevent lockjaw from developing. The preventive dose of tetanus antitoxin should be administered immediately. It is not safe to wait until symptoms of lockjaw develop—by that time it may be too late.

"Tetanus antitoxin for the prevention of lockjaw—whether from Fourth of July accident or from other injuries—is supplied free of charge to the physicians in the counties by the State Department of Health, through the county health officers.* The larger quantities necessary for the treatment of advanced cases are furnished at cost.

*In Baltimore City tetanus antitoxin for the prevention of lockjaw is supplied free of charge to all but compensation cases.

Traffic Falling Off over Pike

During the past two or three weeks a perceptible falling off in the traffic over the National Highway (Route 40) has been noted. The chief reason advanced for this decline is owing to the torn-up condition of the highway between Grantsville and Frostburg where curves and grades are being eliminated, and to do this work deep cuts are being made and heavy fills at other points are found necessary, thus deterring the motorist from attempting to use the highway if another route leading to his destination can be found.

STANDARD RATING SCALE

NOW—there is expert help for everybody in the selection of an electric refrigerator

STANDARD RATING SCALE
for Electric Refrigeration

- Is the refrigerator manufactured by a reliable company with proper experience in the electric refrigeration field?
- Has it plenty of food and shelf space?
- Is the cabinet itself well designed, sturdily built and properly insulated?
- Is there provision for the freezing of an adequate supply of ice cubes? (Quantity of ice rather than number of cubes, which may be of large or small size, should be taken into consideration.)
- Will the refrigerator constantly maintain a proper temperature for the preservation of foods?
- Can the freezing of ice cubes and desserts be speeded up when the need arises?
- Can this extra freezing speed for ice cubes be had without affecting the temperature on the food shelves? (Too low a temperature on the shelves will, of course, injure food.)
- Is there a place to keep ice cream, meat, fish, game, "quick frosted" foods or extra ice cubes indefinitely at a below freezing temperature?
- Are these various temperatures (a. extra fast freezing; b. fast freezing; c. below freezing for storage; and d. normal food preservation temperature) automatically maintained without any attention from the owner?
- Does the refrigerating unit operate often or infrequently? (The fewer "stops" and "starts" the longer the unit will last and the less it costs to run.)
- How long will the cooling unit continue to cool the refrigerator even though the current is shut off? (Refrigeration should continue for 10 or 12 hours.)
- Can the back parts of all shelves, even the lowest, be reached without kneeling or sitting down?
- Has provision been made for keeping vegetables fresh and crisp?
- Can the refrigerator top be used to "set things down for a moment" while the contents of the cabinet are being re-arranged?
- Will the refrigerator add to the attractiveness of the kitchen?
- Has the experience of users over a long period of years proved the refrigerator long-lived and dependable?

Consider your Adam's Apple!!*

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

When you visit your physician for your periodic health examination, one of the very first things he asks you to do is to open your mouth wide, and to say "Ah." He is examining the delicate lining of your throat. "Ah!" There is not a man or woman who could even make this simple sound, if in the throat there were no Adam's Apple. For your Adam's Apple is your larynx—the voice box containing your vocal chords. And what a delicate piece of Nature's handiwork the Adam's Apple is. A slight cold—even a tiny particle lodged in the throat—and our voice often grows husky. In acute cases, we may even lose our voice for several days. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants—Reach for a LUCKY instead—remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wander 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

NO BACKWARD STEP—

Upon the heels of the announcement that the health nurses would be retained and that a full time health program would be inaugurated, comes the announcement from the County Commissioners, George D. Browning, George W. Harvey and James A. Fitzwater, that the office of home demonstration agent would also be maintained.

The continuation of the health and rural development programs are both necessary for the advancement of the county, and The Republican is glad to note that they have not been discarded.

A CRISIS AND A REMEDY

A serious international crisis confronts the world. The economic status in Europe is most alarming. This, if permitted to continue threatens to result in the absolute economic collapse of Germany, which will directly affect the United States.

Germany has said with much truth that she cannot continue to meet the reparations payments imposed and adopted under the Young Plan, which will result in the loss to Europe of a very large source of revenue. If this non-payment on the part of Germany is permitted to materialize Europe, as a conscquence, will be unable to meet her war debt payments owing to the United States.

It is now that Uncle Sam, called by some of the European nations, the "Shylock of the World," comes to the rescue, as he did at the crisis of the World War..

President Hoover, to meet this emergency, on Saturday of last week, proposed an inter-governmental moratorium for a period of one year on all World War debts due this country, provided that the war victors grant Germany similar relief as to reparation payments. Simplified, this means a postponement for one year from July 1, 1931, payments by the allies of debts due the United States and a like postponement of reparation payments to the allies by Germany. This proposal, of course, is subject to confirmation by Congress, which cannot be had until the next regular session in Decemher unless an extraordinary session is called. In the meantime President Hoover is in communication and conference with leading Democratic and Republican members.

The purpose of the proposal is to give the forthcoming year to the economic recovery of the world and aid free action of the recuperative forces already set in motion in the United States.

Stripped of all technical verbage, the situation at this time is that the credit stability of Europe is being diminished at a rapid rate, due to a number of causes, among which are lack of political and economic confidence, the abnormal flow of gold into the United States and the natural unrest to the world-wide recession of business, causing general depression and unemployment. These are some of the things that diminish the buying power of foreign countries of our exports and to a large extent the cause of our continued unemployment and low prices of farm products.

It is not so much now a question of overproduction as it is of underconsumption.

President Hoover makes it plain that in no sense is he in favor of a cancellation of war debts owing to us, nor does he suggest any reduction of the amount of the war debts. But he brings to our attention the fact that the basis of the settlement of both debts and reparations was the capacity of the debtor to pay under normal conditions. But there is now an abnormal situation.

It is agreed among financiers and statesmen that the Hoover, or some similar plan, must be adopted, and that right soon. And while we hear some discordant notes from the rapid anti-administration individuals, the real statesmen, irrespective of party politics, casting aside sectional, interracial and international differences and animosities, forgetting the Presidential election of next year, are getting behind the plan to save the world, not alone for democracy, but for humanity.

Mr. Harned's Recent Book is Praised by Nature Magazine

Nature Magazine, July issue, has the following to say concerning the book, "Wild Flowers of the Alleganies," recently published by Mr. Joseph E. Harned, of Oakland, the edition being a product of the Sincell Printing Company:

"Most of the wild flower handbooks are uninteresting volumes except to the one looking to them for identification purposes. Often one wonders whether the author has ever seen personally more than a handful of the flowers covered. While this does not detract from the value of any authentic book, the author of 'The Wild Flowers of the Alleganies' has proved that something more may be put into such a book. This author is Joseph E. Harned, whose life has been spent with the study of wiid flowers as a recreation and hobby. So into this volume, together with the information of the usual handbook, Mr. Harned has carried his enthusiasm and love for wild flowers. Reading the description of a flower you can feel the author reliving the first time he came upon it in its native habitat. It adds immeasurably to the enjoyment of the book, and for the one turning to it for identification it must inevitably establish a feeling of kinship with the writer. The volume is illustrated with many line drawings plus eight beautifully printed color plates by Mary Eaton and F. S. Mathews. It is published by the author, well printed and bound, and available from him personally at Oakland, Maryland, for $4.50. It is worthy of the highest consideration.'

Nature Magazine is considered by all nature lovers as being the standard publication of its class in the nation, therefore the words of commendation concerning Mr. Harned's book coming from such a source is of more than ordinary interest and value.

Lesson for June 28

REVIEW: JESUS THE WORLD'S SAVIOR; SUFFERING AND SOVEREIGNTY

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Savior.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Savior.

Since the lessons of the quarter center in one Supreme Person and have one transcendent theme, Jesus Christ the world's Savior, the best method of review for senior and adult classes will be to refresh the mind with the principal facts and leading teachings of each lesson. The following suggestions are offered:

Lesson for April 5.

Jesus taught humility to the disciples by the parable of how guests bidden to a wedding should seat themselves. The humble man will take the lowest place. Those who choose the lowest places in life have a chance of promotion.

Lesson for April 12.

The younger son, becoming tired of the restraints of home, demanded of the father the portion of goods which he would inherit. The father acceded to his request, and after his life of profligacy joyfully received him back into his home. This act portrays the forgiving mercy of God.

Lesson for April 19.

The story of the rich man and Lazarus gives us a look into two worlds. In this world the rich man lived in luxury while Lazarus begged at his door. In the other world their positions are reversed.

Lesson for April 26.

Prayer is an obligation on the part of the believer. It is essential to spiritual life. All true prayer is accompanied with becoming humility.

Lesson for May 3.

Zacchaeus brushed aside all difficulties in order to see Jesus. The soul which earnestly seeks Jesus shall never be disappointed. Zacchaeus proved the reality of his conversion by making restitution. He was saved instantly upon receiving Jesus Christ.

Lesson for May 10.

The Parable of the Pounds was spoken to correct the misapprehension of the disciples as to the immediate establishment of the kingdom. While the kingdom awaits establishment, it is incumbent upon the believer to use faithfully the gifts left in his hands by the Lord. While the size of the gift is a matter of sovereign choice on the part of the Lord, fidelity in its use is demanded. There is a time of reckoning coming.

Lesson for May 17.

Christ's entry into Jerusalem was his official offering of himself as the promised Messiah. His coming was in exact fulfillment of prophecy. Christ's driving out of the temple the money changers demonstrated his authority over the temple and its service.

Lesson for May 24.

Jesus knowing that the hour of his death was near, instructed the disciples to make preparation for the Passover, that he might have fellowship with them in this ordinance before his crucifixion. In connection with the Passover Feast, he instituted the Feast of the New Covenant. The bread was symbolic of his broken body. The cup was a symbol of his atoning blood shed on Calvary.

Lesson for May 31.

Jesus' indescribable agony in the garden shows us what it cost the sinless Son of God to identify himself with a sinning race. The load of sin was so revolting that the face of the loving Father was turned from his beloved Son.

Lesson for June 7.

The story of the crucifixion of Jesus presents the greatest tragedy of all history. The sinless Son of God suffering for a sinning race should move all sinners gladly to accept salvation at his hand.

Lesson for June 14.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the supreme proof that Christ was what he claimed to be and is the unmistakable evidence that his offering on Calvary's cross was accepted by God. The empty tomb is the supreme and grand proof of the deity of the Son of God and of his vicarious sacrifice.

Lesson for June 21.

Disputes and misunderstandings are bound to arise even among those who are members of Christ's body. Those who have been vitally united to him will be scrupulously careful lest they cause to stumble those for whom Christ died.

Never Fear

Never fear when the Lord bids you go down to the way "which is desert." The moment you set your foot in the wilderness you are the Lord's guest, and he ever keeps his table right royally furnished.—Guy Mark Pearse.

Interest in the Bible

What other book beside the Bible could be heard in public assemblies from year to year, with an attention that never tires, and an interest that never clogs?—Robert Hall.

PREVENTING SICKNESS OF BABY BETTER THAN CURE

Ways of Protecting the Young From Disease Are Suggested

Some of the ways by which the youngest citizens of this commonwealth may be protected against the illnesses to which they are particularly susceptible during the warm weather, are suggested by Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, in the following letter to mothers:

"Babies and young children are particularly susceptible at this time of the year to digestive upsets and to diarrheal diseases. It is much easier to prevent than to cure such diseases. Here are some of the ways by which the baby's health may be safeguarded and the baby kept comfortable during the hot weather:

"Doctor's Care—Young babies, especially during the warm weather, should be brought up under a doctor's supervision. The doctor should see the baby that is under a year old every month, and if he should be sick he should be advised as to its feeding and daily care.

"Mother's Milk—Very few babies who are fed exclusively by their mothers have diarrheal diseases. Every mother should nurse her baby if possible. Weaning should be avoided in hot weather.

"Clean Cow's Milk—The next best substitute for mother's milk is clean cow's milk diluted with water under the doctor's direction and the mixture boiled for two or three minutes, then cooled before feeding it to the baby. When cow's milk of good quality cannot be obtained, unsweetened or evaporated condensed milk, diluted with water makes a satisfactory substitute. The sweetened condensed milk is not recommended. Babies fed on it exclusively are chubby, often look well but have less resistance to disease. Studies that have been made show that many of the children who have come to our attention from time to time in counties of Maryland had been fed on sweetened condensed milk.

"Contact with Other Cases—Babies should be carefully protected from contact with older persons in the family who are suffering from diarrhea.

"House Flies—House flies frequently carry the germs that cause diarrheal diseases from outhouses to the baby's food or to the baby's hands and face and body. Houses should be screened in the summer and flies should be kept away from the baby, its food and clothing.

"Clothing—The baby and young child should be dressed according to the temperature and not according to the season.

"Intervals Between Feeding—Babies should rarely be fed oftener than every three hours. There is less risk, especially in hot weather, if they are fed at four-hour intervals, that is, five, or at most, six times in twenty-four hours.

Give Him a Drink of Water—Cooled, boiled water should be offered to the baby, frequently, between feedings, in hot weather."

INCREASED EYE-COMFORT NECESSARY IN BUSINESS

Dull Furniture and Equipment are Restful to Eyes of Workers

Every good housekeeper likes to have things "shine." Every office worker likes to have their furnishings and equipment well polished and neatly kept. But there are places where "shine" is undesirable and the top of the desk, the work-bench, or any place where one is looking for considerable periods of time should be finished in "flat" or unpolished finishes.

For this reason the use of plate-glass desk and table tops is the extreme of folly, for their surfaces greatly promote reflection glare and eye-fatigue. The same applies to highly polished floors in the office or at home as well as all objects which are frequent in the line of vision and which possess light colored or polished surfaces.

Dark green desk blotters are always restfull, but why not extend the same principle to the remainder of the desk? Some of the new metal desks with dark, unpolished linoleum tops are certainly the extreme in eye-comfort. Bearing these simple facts in mind, it would be easy for the office worker to arrange his equipment and work in such a manner that increased eye-comfort and reduction in fatigue will result.

BITTINGER

The warmest weather of the present season prevailed here all of last week.

Guy Yutzy, of Oakland, was a very pleasant business caller in this community one day last week.

Miss Ercelle Giles, of Grantsville, spent last Saturday with friends in Bittinger.

Members of the German Baptist Brethern church are holding a series of meetings in the Bethenda chapel near here this week.

Mrs. Oscar Herrick spent last week at the home of her parents near Somerset, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brenneman motored to Meyersdale, Pa., last Saturday evening on a business mission.

The village public school closed on Friday after a very successful term under the direction of Miss Helen Bockhouse, of Cumberland, and Mrs. Herebert Buckle, of this village.

CHAPTER XXV

Returning to my headqnarters at Chaumont December 31, 1917, I was not surprised to receive the following cable from Secretary of War Baker, in view of the numerous suggestions tbat had come to me regarding various plans for training our troops with the French and British:

"Both English and French are pressing upon the President their desires to have your forces amalgamated with theirs by regiments and companies, and both express the belief in impending heavy drive by Germans somewhere along the lines of the western front. We do not desire loss of identity of our troops, but regard that as secondary to the meeting of any critical situation by the most helpful use possible of the troops at your command. The difficulty of course is to determine where the drive or drives of the enemy will take place; nnd in advance of some knowledge on that question any redistribution of your forces would be difficult.

"The President, however, desires you to have full authority to use the forces at your command as you deem wise in connection with the French and British commanders in chief. It is suggested for your consideration that possibly places might be selected for your forces nearer the junction of the British and French lines, which would enable you to throw strength in whichever direction seemed most necessary.

"This suggestion is not, however, pressed beyond whatever merit it has in your judgment, the President's sole purpose being to acquaint you with the representations made here and to authorize you to act with entire freedom to accomplish the main purposes in mind. It is hoped that complete unity and co-ordination of action can be secured in this matter by any conferences you may have with French and British commanders and line of action that may be agreed upon."

French Show Determination.

The following cable also was received from Washington, which showed the determination of the French to carry their point:

"The French ambassador called on the secretary of war today and read him a dispatch from M. Clemenceau to the effect that General Pershing and General Petain had conferred as to the wisdom of seasoning American troops by attaching their regimental units to the French division before committing a part of the line to an American division made up of troops not accustomed to actual front conditions.

"M. Clemenceau's cablegram stated that General Pershing had reported himself and General Petain in substantial agreement after conference on the subject, but General Petain conveyed to M. Clemenceau the opposite opinion. Apparently some misunderstanding has arisen which the secretary of war will be glad to have General Pershing endeavor to clear up by placing himself in communication with M. Clemenceau and reporting the result of the interview.

"The French urge action as outlined above as being safer for American troops than it would be to give them at once an independent place in the line, and urge very strongly that the secretary of war here accept their view and commend it to you. This the secretary of war is not willing to do, desiring to leave the matter wholly within your discretion after full consideration of the important elements of the matter."

Pershing Replies to Baker.

The following extract from my cable of January 8 conveys the main points of my reply:

". . . The French have not been entirely frank, as unofficial information indicates they really want to incorporate our regiments into their divisions for such service in the trenches as they desire. As to our instruction, a certain amount of work with French troops is beneficial, and this we are having and expect to have . . . Have expressed a willingness to aid in any way in an emergency, but do not think good reason exists for us to break up our divisions and scatter regiments for service among French and British, especially under the guise of instruction."

It thus appeared quite clear that the French were so intent on their plan that Premier Clemenceau presumed to cable Washington as to how our units were to be handled. Upon the receipt of the cable from Washington about the disagreement between Petain and myself I wrote at once to M. Clemenceau, quoting the cable and adding:

"May I not suggest to you, Mr. President, the inexpediency of communicating such matters to Washington by cable. These questions must all be settled here, eventually, on their merits, through friendly conference between General Petain and myself, and cables of this sort are very likely, I fear, to convey the impression of serious disagreement between us when such is not the case. . . ."

Clemenceau's Reply.

M. Clemenceau's reply, translated into English, follows:

"My Dear General: I hasten, without losing a moment, to reply to your letter dated January 5, 1918. I found myself in the position of cabling to the ambassador of France at Washington because the two contradictory responses which I had received from General Petain and from yourself. when you did me the honor of calling on me, obliged me, in the interests of the common cause, to seek an arbitration between the two commanders in chief.

"I need not conceal that I placed full confidence in the American government with regard to this. However, it was not to the American government that I addressed myself. I cabled to the ambassador of France, which was my right and my duty, in order to give him directions for the conversations which might take place either with the secretary of war or with the President of the United States.

"It might very well have happened that later on I should have addressed the American government, but I insist, on this point, that I have done nothing of the sort. I had not authorized the ambassador of France to read all or part of my dispatch to the secretary of war. I regret that he did so, but I do not disavow anything that I wrote.

"I am giving you here the explanation which I owe you and I am going to exercise all the patience of which I am capable in awaiting the good news that the American commander and the French commander have finally agreed on a question which may be vital to the outcome of the war."

Clemenceau's Motive Questioned.

As the French were dead set on getting our troops under their control it is more than probable that the French premier, feeling that their plans were not working out, sought to create some distrust in the minds of our administration at Washington against my management of things in order to pave the way for insisting that we were entirely wrong in not consenting to amalgamation. However, at later meetings with Clemenceau and Petain the alleged differences were seemingly settled amicably, as indicated in my cable of January 14, which follows:

"For chief of staff: Have now definite understanding with French satisfactory to them and to me that our divisions now in France shall complete their training as already begun. In the future divisions arriving in zone of French armies are to have period of training with French, each regiment in a French division. When sufficiently experienced by training in a quiet sector with French our divisions are to be united under their own commander and will be placed in the line in our own sector."

CHAPTER XXVI

The necessity for controlling the use of strong drink among our troops had been brought forcibly to my attention through the ease with which alcoholic beverages could he obtained.

The use of light wines as a part of the French ration was simply the continuance in the army of the universal custom of the people of having wine with their meals. The wines and beer were not so objectionable, but strong alcoholic spirits were regarded by the French themselves as dangerous and were prohibited for their troops, but the prohibition was not well enforced outside the zone of the armies.

The problem of preventing our troops from drinking the stronger liquors was difficult, especially at the ports of entry. Efforts to obtain enforcement through conferences with local authorities and through agreements with the port and district officials were made from time to time, but with little result.

I finally appealed to Prime Minister Clemenceau for support, but he would only counsel local officials, as he did not wish to declare a "state of siege" (martial law). In the end it was necessary to take the matter in our own hands and declare every bar and restaurant where the heavy liquor was sold as "off limits" for our troops. Our officers were directed to give their personal attention to the enforcement of this order.

Vice in Army Denied.

About this time a cable was received from Washington that some publication at home had made a sweeping charge of both immorality and drunkenness against our men. No such statement could he based on fact, nor could it serve any purpose except to cause unnecessary anxiety to parents and relatives and perhaps satisfy on the part of some one an unworthy desire for sensation. In reply I cabled in part as follows:

"There has never been a similar body of men to lead as clean lives as as our American soldiers in France. They have entered this war with the highest devotion to duty and with no other idea than to perform these duties in the most efficient manner possible.

"Engaged in healthy, interesting exercises in the open air, with simple diet, officers and men like trained athletes are ready for their task. Forbidden the use of strong drink and protected by stringent regulations against other evils and supported by their own moral courage, their good behavior is the subject of most favorable comment, especially by our allies. American mothers may rest assured that their sons are a credit to them and the nation."

Seek More Chaplains.

My diary notes the following:

Paris, Thursday, Jan. 10, 1918. Have appointed Maj. Robert Bacon to be colonel aad A. D. C. on my staff. Bishop Gwynne, deputy chaplain general, British army, and Bishop Brent were my guests at Chaumont on Monday.

On Tuesday Brent and I discussed increase in number of chaplains, which we both favor.

Bishop Brent had been selected by me for appointment as chaplain with a view to his being the chief of the chaplain corps which it was planned to organize. The bishop did not approve of this iden and in deference to his opinion, and upon his suggestion, a permanent executive committee of chaplains was appointed to study the problems involved and make recommendations direct to me from time to time. Bishop Gwynne of the British forces explained their system, the methods of administration and the control and direction of chaplain's work, from which we adopted such features as were applicable to our service.

Custom in our army, arising from lack of appreciation of the usefulness of chaplains, had relegated them as a class to the status of handy men who were detailed to write up boards of survey or run libraries

Aviation Problem Serious.

Aviation questions demanded nare-mitting attention, for in no other service was unpreparedness so evident and so difficult to overcome. Apparently there was earnest effort at home, but it was too often misdirected.

On the part of the allies, especially the French, lack of mechanics and delay in procuring motors and material, such as spruce, had given them a setback. Due to these conditions and their own increased programs the French and also the Italians were unable to take more than a small proportion of our 1,500 flying cadets who were on the ground and who, under agreement, were to be instructed by them.

About this time the contract for planes we had made in August was formally abrogated, the French government being unable to meet its conditions due to the delay in receipt of machine tools and raw materials from the United States, a possibility which had been forecast in my cables to the War department. In its stead we later made an agreement whereby we should be dependent upon the allotment that might be made us according to the number of divisions we might have in France.

Early in December I signed an agreement with Lord Northcliffe of the British air board that we should send 15,000 enlisted men to England and maintain that number in training in their aircraft factories and air service stations. This plan proved to be beneficial to both sides, as far as carried out, but especially to ourselves in providing us with trained men and saving us the necessity of establishing extra schools for teaching them ourselves. Due to the nonshipment of air personnel from home we lacked 4,500 of reaching the number specified, and later the need for line troops prevented our completing the number.

British Wanted U. S. Men.

When General Robertson came for the conference regarding the shipment of troops for training with the British as mentioned in my diary, we began to discuss the details of the disposition to be made of our forces which might be brought over in British shipping. It was found that General Robertson's proposal was practically the same as the one submitted to E. M. House through Mr. Lloyd George. He wanted to bring our infantry and machine-gun units by battalions only, and pointed out how much more expeditiously this would meet the shortage of men in the British army than to ship whole divisions with all their equipment and stores.

He believed that the British government would take the task of releasing temporarily some shipping engaged in carrying food and raw materials if America could see her way to provide the men, although, he said, it could not well undertake the transportation of complete divisions as not enough men would he brought over in this manner to justify the great risks involved. In other words, the British had the shipping to transport American battalions on condition that they would serve in the British armies.

However, as General Robertson's proposal would enable us to increase our strength more rapidly, my preliminary cable to Washington reporting the confereace recommended that it be given consideration and, in view of our national attitude regarding service with another army, that if approved the plan should be regarded as a temporary measure to meet an emergency; that as soon as possible the remaining troops of our divisions thus temporarily broken up should be brought over and the units reassembled; that division, brigade and regimental commanders and their staff be sent with their infantry for training with the corresponding British units, and that the infantry be taken from those divisions that would not otherwise be transported until after June.

A STUDY OF DRUG STORES IS MADE BY HEALTH MEN

State Department Makes Survey of Pharmacists in Maryland

Did you ever count up the number of prescriptions you have had filled within a year at your neighborhood drug store? That is what the Bureau of Food and Drugs of the State Department of Health has done in connection with recent surveys of the retail drug stores of the State, with particular reference to the law which will not permit any but licenses pharmacists—persons who have had special training and who have graduated from accredited professional schools—to put up the prescriptions ordered by physicians.

Here are some of the findings of the surveys as reported to the State Board of Health by Dr. Robert L. Swain, Deputy Food and Drug Commissioner of the State Department of Health:

First, as to the pharmacists: The total number of registered pharmacists in Maryland is 1200, two-thirds of whom are employed in drug stores in Baltimore City and one-third in the counties. The total number of retail drug stores in the State is 667, of which 452 are in Baltimore City and 215 in the counties. The total number of stores from which reports were received was 618, of which 418 were in Baltimore City and 200 in the counties.

Second, as to prescriptions: The total number of prescriptions compounded in the stores from which reports were filed, for the year ending December 31, 1930, was 2,717,775, of which 2,025,685 were filled in Baltimore City and 692,090 in the counties. Basing the total filled in all of the stores on these figures, it is estimated that 3,347,226 prescriptions were filled during the year, or an average of two per person in the State, or—considering Baltimore City and the counties separately—of 3 per person in Baltimore City and 1.10 per person in the counties.

Of the total of 2,428,722 prescriptions put up in the retail drug stores in Baltimore City, 1,738,518 were new prescriptions and 690,204 were refilled. Of the total of 913,246 filled in the counties, 606,441 were new and 306,805 were refilled.

The average number of prescriptions filled during the year by each store was 4,846 for each of the stores in Baltimore City and 3,461 for each store in the counties. In proportion to population there is one drug store to each 1,781 of the population of Baltimore City and one to each 3,845 of the population of the counties.

"The study is the first of the sort undertaken in this country. In developing the plan, the Maryland Bureau of Food and Drugs had the advice of the U. S. Bureau of the Census. The information collected," Dr. Swain said in presenting the report, "shows the signficance and importance of the drug stores of the State."

At the request of the Bureau of the Census, similar studies are to be made by the State authorities in Florida, Indiana and Washington.

A Reply to Notabene

To the Editor of The Republican.

A short time ago a circular entitled "Mt. Lake Is Again Agitated by Local People," was hurled into our midst. The pen-name of this would be political writer was Notabene. We think it should have been signed "Just A Bean."

We didn't know whether to become amused or angered when we read it. Amused perhaps because of its absurdity and angered because he evidently believed the people of his community ignorant enough to fall for his faulty reasonings.

Of one thing were we convinced, and that was that Mr. Notabene is not a student of municipal government. As this is an attempt to prove the fallacy of his arguments and not meant to satirize him we will proceed.

First, he made the foolish statement that "The Mayor and Council can pass and enforce all laws and ordinances that they want." We wonder where he got that idea. Does he not realize that we have National and State Constitutions, and that no laws and ordinances can be in conflict with these? Does he not realize that the town is subordinate to the State and that the State will interfere if the town authorities attempt to exceed their authority? Has he never heard of Judge Dillon's famous law or decision which is generally accepted as being authority? This law states that the mayor and council has only such powers as are granted to them in the charter and all other powers necessary to carry out the delegated powers. A number of other restriction could also be cited—such as pressure brought to bear on the mayor through public opinion.

Yet Mr. Notabene would have the voters believe that the governing body would have unlimited powers; in fact he would have us believe that we are attempting to set a more aligircial form of government than the one now existing. A study of the charter will show this to be an absurdity, for is it not like any other town charter and more up to date in some respects?

Mr. Notabene certainly shows his ignorance in municipal matters when he says the mayor should not have the power to appoint the treasuerer, assessor, tax collector, etc. Let us say that this is practiced in most towns in the United States and has come to us as a development in the evolution of town government. Prior to the Civil War these offices in most town governments were filled at election time by popular votes. This system resulted in extreme disintegration. It set up a number of officials who were responsible to no one but the voter. It was found that this system entirely lacked executive unity.

Under the system as stated in our proposed charter the mayor appoints these officials. This means centralization instead of disintergration. These officials are responsible to the mayor and if they do not properly carry out their functions the people can bring pressure to bear through public opinion and it will be to his best advantage that he appoints efficient men.

We will ask Mr. Notabene to trace the history of the development of municipal government in the United States and see if we are not correct, and also ask him why we shouldn't use this method for the appointment of officials.

The biggest laugh came to us when we read his spiel on Tammany Hall and corrupt politics. Whoever heard of a small town developing a machine like Tammany? Does Mr. Notabene realize that Tammany's county committee is composed of ten thousand delegates? How could a small town offer the opportunity for corruption when every voter is personally known by every other voter and the character and calibre of each candidate for office is known? Still he would have us believe that the democratic form of government we propse would become corrupt. True, his speech is an attempt at eloquence, but the only power it has is in his use of words and not in his use of judgment.

There are several things we can't understand. Why couldn't the Association function under a mayor and council? Don't other business organizations function under municipal governments? If the present form of government is fair and square why do the higher powers attempt to fight our establishing a legal, standard, accepted, modern form of government? All we can say is there must be a "nigger in the woodpile some place."

We have not meant to be partisan, biased or satrical and have only tried to present facts, not only as we see them, but facts which are stated by most of the standard writers on municipal affairs who have made a life study of governments.

If Mr. Notabene had not written such an indignant and unworthy article, we would never have gone to this trouble. Thank you for your attention, and we are called on to repeat Mr. Notabene's advice: "'Read the proposed charter carefully before you vote.'"

"LIBERTY"

To the Edtir of The Republican.

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," those three great things allotted to us by the Constitution of these great United States; but are we the citizens of the Community of Mt. Lake Park granted these privileges? Let us consider these points: Life, yes. Liberty? What is it? Do we people of this community enjoy this privilege? Are we supposed to share in the freedom of one of the greatest nations of the face of the earth, and one of the oldest democratic States in the Union, or are we to be satisfied by a form of government not intended by the makers of our Constitution?

It seems to me that the time has come for the people of this town to make that decision. Surely it is not necessary that we go back to the days of the Revolutionary War. Yet in the Community people are taxed and without the franchise to vote, unless they purchase their ballot. If such a thing as this was worth fighting for in those days, it surely should be more so now in this era of advanced civilization. Why should we not share in the principles and freedom that this great country of ours was founded on? Why are people registered in other states and cities allowed to vote here in this Maryland town, by proxy, if they find it convenient, and so desire? Surely you will agree with me when I say it is contrary to the Constitution of our country and to the government of the sovereign State of Maryland. Yet this thing is practiced here, and we are condemned if we voice ourselves against it. Are we the citizens of the United States supposed to give up our liberty for the benefit of some association, corporation or body of people that might derive personal gain? There is only one legitimate answer, and that to my mind is No!

Why should we be deprived of a municipality? It could not hamper the business of any person, groups of persons or corporations. These things are not permissible under State statutes. Would it deprive the present Association of anything that rightfully belongs to it? Could it ever hope to do so? Yet we hear on every hand that if a charter is granted that it will destroy the town; that the property of people will be "erected on stilts," and that every property holder will lose a fortune in the transaction. It is true that the charter provides for and is granted the privileges of a body politic, but it is not the same thing in force in our present charter? Yes, and to whose hands is it entrusted? Do the citizens enjoy this privilege? And if they don't deserve it, who does?

Why not get down to facts and see if these is any reason why we should not enjoy a government as described by the great American, of the people, by the people and for the people, instead of just a small part.

And in closing allow me to call your attention to the following statement:

"Municipal institutions constitute the strength of free nations. A nation may establish a system of free government, but without municipal institutions it cannot have the spirit of liberty."

Civic Club Member Expresses Her Appreciation of Work Done in Oakland.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The flower bed on Second street and near the railroad bridge, has been planted again this year, the H. Weber & Sons Company, florists, kindly donating the flowers.

The Civic Club appreciates so much the work done last year by the citizens living in the southern section of town and hope they can give their service this year in keeping the flowers watered and the surroundings in a neat condition.

These little services all help to beautify Oakland, of which we should be very proud.

We regret that some persist in throwing trash into Wilson creek. Why not dispose of this litter by burning it in your back yard and thus allow the little stream to be "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

2-DAY CELEBRATION BEGINS TOMORROW

ALLEGANY COUNTY JURY TRYING MRS. ROSA FELDA FOR KILLING HUSBAND FINDS VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER

Jury Deliberated From Yesterday Afteroon Until 11:30 o'Clock This Morning In Case Removed From Garrett County—State Dismisses Case Against Mrs. Carrie Harvey, Indicted Jointly With Mrs. Felda.

At eleven-thirty o'clock this morning the jury before whom Mrs. Rosa Felda had been tried for the murder of her husband Mike Felda, on February 8 last, at the Felda home near Wilson Station, in Garrett county, and removed for trial to the Allegany County Circuit Court, rendered a verdict of manslaughter after having deliberated since early yesterday afternoon.

The verdict of the jury carries with it a penalty ranging from a fine of $500, two years in the county jail or ten years in the penitentiary.

In the case of Mrs. Carrie Harvey, indicted jointly with Mrs. Felda in causing the death of the latter's husband, the State entered a plea of not guilty and the charge against her was dismissed by the Court.

It is said that a majority of the jurors in the Felda case were inclined to bring in a verdict of second degree murder, but those favoring the lighter penalty won them over and the verdict as above set out was rendered.

Testimony in the case was completed at 11:00 o'clock yesterday morning by the State and denfense counsel continued with its examination of witnesses for some time afterward, when the case was given to the jury.

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, in his instructions, said the jury could return any one of five verdicts: (1) Murder in the first degree; (2) Murder in the first degree without capital punishment; (3) Murder in the second degree; (4) Guilty of manslaughter and not guilty of murder; (5) Not guilty.

Taking the stand in her own defense, Mrs. Rosa Felda, 50-year-old Garrett county woman, charged with the murder of her husband, Mike Felda, last February 8, admitted Tuesday that she bought poison on February 6 at an Oakland drug store, but claimed she put the poison in a bottle of moonshine liquor with the intention of ending her own life. Her husband drank the liquor.

The case, removed from Garrett county, was taken up Tuesday morning before a jury in Circuit Court at Cumberland, with Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Judge Albert A. Doub on the bench. The State completed its case Tuesday afternoon and several defense witnesses testified before court adjourned. The jury was locked up for the night at the Algonquin hotel, in the custody of Deputy Sheriff George Kemp.

Mrs. Felda, who was the second defense witness called, said she married Felda in 1905 and was the mother of ten children, of whom three are living. She said she loved her husband and was griefstricken over the tragic death. The woman admitted purchasing a quantity of strychnine in Oakland, at her husband's request, to kill rats and squirrels about the home.

The accused woman said she placed the poison in a cupboard and two days later, on Sunday, she was nervous and depressed, and decided to take the poison and kill herself. She testified that she placed half of the poison in a bottle of moonshine and threw the remainder in the stove. Mrs. Felda said she put the poisoned liquor in the inside pocket of a coat of her deceased brother, which was hanging behind a door, in a place her husband never looked. Felda, apparently discovered the liquor, she declared, and drank it.

Felda was seized with cramps, she declared, and she attempted to aid him by giving him salt water, but he succumbed before a physician arrived at the home, near Wilson's Station

Was Drug Addict

Dr. A. K. Fidler, of Kitzmiller, the first defense witness, testified that he treated Mrs. Felda last October for nervous disorder and had her committed for several weeks to the state hospital for mental diseases, at Sykesville, Md. Defense council declared that the woman was a drug addict.

Drs. Thomas W. Koon and A. Leo Franklin, of Cumberland, testified that a drug addict sometimes has suicidal tendencies when deprived of drugs.

Relative Also Held

Pattie McRobie, a brother of the accused woman, said he was at the Felda home when Mike Felda became ill. He said he heard Felda say "they poisoned me. Rosa and Carrie did it." Mrs. Carrie Harvey, a relative of Mrs. Felda, was also indicted in connection with Felda's death, and is charged with procuring the moonshine which was poisoned. McRobie testified that he went for a physician after Felda became ill.

Calvin Browning said that he talked with "Aunt Jane" McRobie, 78-year-

AMBROSE MATTINGLY, A RECLUSE, FOUND DEAD

His Nonappearance Led a Neighbor To Find His Body

Having noted his nonappearance for several days, Harry Helbig, a neighbor, upon investigating the disappearance of Ambrose Mattingly, an aged recluse residing in a small dwelling located on Route 37 at the north edge of Oakland, peered through a window of the building and saw him lying dead on the floor.

The dead man, who had lived a life of seclusion for a number of years, had upon a number of occasions housed himself against the rest of the world and would not be seen by his nearest neighbors for a week or more at a time, hence his absence did not raise a suspicion in the minds of those acquainted with him that anything of a serious nature had befallen him. Upon one other occasion he was discovered by Mr. Helbig in a seriously weakened condition due to illness and lack of food, although he was a man with sufficient money laid by to supply his meagre wants. He was last seen alive on Friday, when he was in his yard surrounding his home.

State's Attorney W. W. Dawson and Sheriff W. H. Haenftling made an investigation into the cause of death. After forcing their way into the dwelling and making an examination of the surroundings an inquest was deemed unnccessary and the body was taken in charge by Undertaker Bolden. He had been dead two or three days in the opinion of the undertaker.

It is said that Mr. Mattingly's age was between 70 and 80 years. He had never married and had lived a peculiarly quiet life.

Funeral services were conducted on Wednesday morning in St. Peter's Catholic church, interment being made in the church cemetery here.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Raymond Mattingly, of Kingwood, W. Va., who was here to attend the funeral, her husband being detained at home on account of illness.

American Legion Over Million Mark in Members

A bulletin from State headquarters this morning addressed to local Legionaires stated that for the first time in history the National membership of the Legion has gone over the million mark. Proctor Kiidow Post is responsible for this in a meager way by more than doubling its membership during 1931. The membership of the Post in 1930 was 51, while today it has 103 members.

YOUTH'S BODY IS FOUND AFTER ALL-NIGHT SEARCH

Martin Filsinger, 17, Drowned In Deep Creek Lake When Seized With Cramps Monday Night

TO BE BURIED TODAY

The body of Martin Filsinger was recovered from Deep Creek Lake, Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock after an all-night search had been made by a group of men following the drowning of the youth late Monday night.

Filsinger was 17 years of age and was the son of Mrs. Pearl Casteel Filsinger-Durst, formerly of Oakland, but now a resident of Dry Run, near Swanton, and had been visiting relatives and friends who reside along the shore of Deep Creek Lake near Glendale bridge when the tragedy occurred. He was swimming with a company of boys about ten o'clock Monday evening. Upon being seized with a cramp he called to his companions for help, it was stated by Elmer Haulenbeek, Sr., a member of the searching party.

It is said that another youth in an endeavor to rescue young Filsinger narrowly escaped drowning.

The search for the body of the boy was continued throughout Monday night and was sighted the following morning at nine o'clock by Earl Harvey, of Sand Flat, who saw the body at the bottom of the sloping shore of the lake in about ten feet of water and about ten feet from the water's edge. It is evident that Filsinger suffered a cramp while in the water as his body was drawn in an unnatural position and was quite rigid when found.

The remains were taken to the home of John Green, Dry Run, near Swanton, by William Winterberg, undertaker from Grantsville and there prepared for burial. The funeral service will be held at the Green home this afternoon at two o'clock.

The youth is survived by his stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Durst, and by two brothers, Paul and Edward Filsinger, and by two sisters, Marie and Catherine Filsinger. Two half-brothers and two half-sisters also survive.

Planes to be at Deep Creek Lake

During the two-day celebration on the mountain top and continuing until Sunday evening several passenger planes will be located along the shore line of Deep Creek lake. The planes will be located on the peninsula near Rainbow Inn and will carry passengers daily.

CANNING COMPANY BEGUN OPERATIONS ON TUESDAY

150 People Given Employment; Pea and Corn Crops Are Expected to be Abundant

With seventy-five men, women and boys employed, the Mount Airy Canning Company's plant at Mountain Lake Park went into operation on Tuesday, commencing what is expected to be a six-weeks' continuous run on peas.

The force of employes at the plant has grown to 150 men, women and boys this morning, which number will be kept busy during the entire canning season, it was stated by Howard Reinhardt, manager of the plant.

Six hundred and ninety acres of land is being used this year throughout the county for the production of peas, and providing the crop proves as abundant as is now anticipated, the company will can approximately 65,000 cases, Mr. Reinhardt said.

The corn season will follow close upon the pea season and will provide employment for a large number of people for an additional period of time which cannot now be determined as the corn has not developed sufficiently to enable an estimate being made as to the yield.

THREE MEN ARE HELD FOR SERIES OF ROBBERIES

Are Said To Have Operated In County Several Months

Three alleged robbers were apprehended on Sunday and Monday by Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear and several fellow officers, when George L. Beeman, of near Frostburg, and Dennis Long and Branson Brady, both of Deer Park, were arrested and confined in the Oakland Jail and in the Petersburg (W. Va.) Jail.

The three men are said to have operated in Garrett county for the past two months at least and stand charged with entering and burglarizing Harvey & Ream's store at Mountain Lake Park and the James Walter service station and Warnick's general store at Deer Park, besides the Virgil Steyer store at Steyer, Garrett county.

Beeman was taken into custody at Frostburg at 4.00 o'clock Sunday morning by Deputy Sheriff Spear, in company with Sheriff Kimmell, of Grant county, West Va., who wanted Beeman on warrants charging him with having committed crimes of a like nature in West Virginia, and as the Garrett county officer had no convincing evidence at the time that Beeman is guilty as charged in the warrant, turned him over to the Sheriff from West Virginia, who took him to Petersburg.

Long and Brady were taken into custody on Monday and are being held in the Oakland Jail for the action of the grand jury at the September term of Court.

Since the apprehension of the three men is has been alleged that they were implicated in a series of robberies extending over a period of several months and also with the theft of an automobile belonging to a Frostburg resident which was located by an officer at Terra Alta, West Va., back of the high school building in that town.

The parade will start promptly at 6 o'clock Friday evening and will traverse the streets of Oakland, ending at the show grounds on Third street.

Weber & Sons Company, local florists for many years, left Oakland Friday night for New York City and on Saturday he sailed on the Mauretanla for a visit of several months with relatives in Scotland and England. GIRL FINDS FATHER HERE AFTER BELIEVING HIM DEAD

Garrett county has at least one extremely happy man and one happy young woman within her borders today.

The story:

After having believed her father dead for twenty years or more, Miss Edith Browning, 24 years old, met with an individual whom she now calls a "real friend" at her home in Louisville, Kentucky, along about Eastertime, who, in the course of a conversation unknowingly mentioned the name of her father, Mr. Edward A. Browning, now 77 years of age, and after comparing notes and making an investigation, Miss Browning was soon convinced that she had been misinformed and was happy to think that she might see her parent still alive.

The young woman lost no time in getting into communication with her father and after establishing one another's identity, she arrived in Oakland, the place of her natlvity, on Monday morning, the place of meeting being at Red House, to which point Mr. Browning had gone to meet a Greyhound bus which had brought his daughter to him from her Kentucky home.

Mr. Browning is well known thruout Garrett county and will be remembered as a former County Superintendent of Schools. He is now a Justice of the Peace with offices in the Dixon building on Liberty street.

Miss Browning is a teacher in the schools of Louisville. She was educated in Baltimore but has been in the Kentucky city for a number of years. She will remain here for an indefinite period before returning to her home.

The happy father and daughter are inseparable. They spend a great part of their time visiting sections of the county where their ancestor, Meshach Browning, roamed for so many years as a frontiersman and hunter of big game.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

NOT BY SCOOP—HIMSELF

If for no other reason than to give his "subjects" a break that they might have the opportunity to give Scoop the "needles" or what have you, Archibaldson and the Boss Editor turned this column over to the entire community, and whatever follows comes from the pen of those who are fearless, and who are not afraid of what might happen when Scoop returns.

Several of the citizens who have been "ridden" unmercifully by Scoop, including Jim Kerins, Pokey Shaw, the Gold Dust Twins at Harned's Pharmacy, Ikey Sincell, and others, expressed a fear of using this column for their present aims and gains, stating that while they could put it over on Scoop now, they were aware that it wouldn't be for long and that it would "be just too bad" for them when Scoop again comes down to earth and takes the reins on the staff.

She Loves Me!

Scoop sat on a shady hillside
With a daisy in his hand—
"She loves; she loves me not!"
Suspense? My land!

As he pulled the petals from the flower
He was nervous as he thought:
"I wonder what the fates have in mind?"
She loves me! She loves me not!

The fatal petal alone remained;
Scoop yelled with joyful glee—
His face was like the rising sun:
"SHE LOVES ME!"

After years of continued effort and untiring activity Scoop has taken unto himself a wife, which announcement we are all glad to hear.

We are sure that as soon as the young lady learns to know him as we do she will be happy to unload him when the proper time arrives. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to Mrs. Scoop.

It is indeed a pleasure to walk down Second street and otherwise go about our affairs without being criticized, and we certainly have enjoyed a great degree of freedom this week.

The dogs have discovered the absence of Scoop and since there is no danger of bologney in his column this week they have emerged from their hiding places.

We wish Scoop a happy adventure, even though it is for but a few days.

As the bride is a writer of some renown, we hope Scoop will get some new ideas and seek to profit thereby.

We wish Scoop and Mrs. Scoop a very happy wedded life and extend the key of the city to them.

HIZZONOR MAYOR G. C. STEMPLE

Any young man of Scoop's intelligence and good looks who, in these days of repression, hard times, scarcity of money who would go and git married (shot-gun wedding always excepted) should be forced to ride one of Charles Ream's donkeys at the head of the mammoth parade on the evening of July 4th.

LAWYER FISHER.

Alas! Poor Scoop!

Alas! Poor Scoop! We knew him well.

He's gone, but not forgotten.

Our tears of sorrow, our heartfelt sobs come unbidden as we ponder on his sudden passing from the realms of bachelorhood to the state of fettered bliss from which no mortal has yet returned with the smile of freedom which characterized Scoop's brow as he galloped with the Four Horsemen over hill and dale in quest of adventure.

Yes, Scoop will return, and when he does, well, we and all our friends want to be close to Harned's drug store where all that Betty Dawson can now say is "He! Haw!" But that will all be changed when that drug store crowd goes into action.

But we came not here to bury Scoop, but to praise him. He was a good chap, but heartless. The sad, sweet smile of blasted hopes on the classic features of Oakland's fair sex testifies to his once (but now almost forgotten) popularity. We dread the consequences of his plunge into the sea of matrimony, wherein he will possibly learn that the pen is not as mighty as the rolling pin! Peace be to his ashes.

Before Scoop's demise (that's not just the word, but let it go) his Oakland friends noticed that he was absent minded; had a dreamy look in his eyes; a smile of cherubic sweetness on his lips, flushed to the roots of his hair when "love" was mentioned, and altogether caused his friends much anxiety. He certainly acted as though he had bats in his garret. It was not until he was found one night on the bridge gazing with rapt attention at the full moon with his hand on his heart and a picture of a girl—his girl—held before his eyes, that we realized that, like measles, love had touched him at a vital spot. He was in love with love!

And now he's married!

THE STAFF.

Scoop may think he played a fine trick on his Oakland friends by leaving us out of the wedding festivities. We can't figure out why he treated us so shabbily unless he was ashamed of us or thought some of us handsome guys might fall too deeply in love with Polly, or maybe he hadn't figured on our wedding presents—rolling pins and sich—which is consoling to our pocket-books.

Well, he's got the worst of it, for very soon after the wedding bells stop jingling, Polly and Scoop each take their separate journeys—Polly back to the West to roll up her sleeves and work harder than ever to support Scoop as well as herself, while he will knuckle down to hard work in The Republican office with Archibaldson to make enough wherewithal to buy the many things he did not get in wedding presents with which to furnish his little love nest, yet an air castle.

We cannot refrain, however, from sending our congratulations, for Polly is sweet and you all know what Scoop is or is not. We feel sad for Scoop, for we can visualize him with pen in hand writing to wifey:

Once I jes' thought the world was great,
But now I'm sure it isn't;
Cause you has gone where I ain't,
And left me where you isn't.

A READER OF SCOOP.

Dear Boss Editor:

Don't you think is was terrible for Scoop to go and take unto himself a better half without first securing a referendum, and a writ of matrimony vinci. But after all, this might stop his brother from coming to visit Archibaldson. The only thing that got Scoop's goat then was that his brother had a longer reach at the table than he did. And we all thought Scoop would go to housekeeping right away, but the word leaked out that he will still occupy his suite at Archibaldson's so it looks to me that Archie will have to work from 6 a. m. to 6 a. m. to satisfy that athletic appetite of Scoop's. And, Mr. Boss, let it be understood now that Scoop's vacation for 1931 is over, but keep an eye on him for he has just the nerve to tell you in August that it is time for his annual two weeks, and if he does we will issue a fieri fracus, for the readers of The Republican want this column running full time and excuses will not do it. Make him keep his nose on the grindstone, if you have to get Mrs. Scop to help. Here's wishing Scoop all the happiness in the world, and that all his troubles may be little ones.

COLONEL BELL,
Official Photographer for Scoop.

P. S.—I am hiding in the bush until he gets over this.

Finally—

Sacred to the Memory of Scoop
Who left this life of single blessedness and contentment to enter the state of where he is not the boss at any time or under any circumstances. He is gone and he is not forgotten.

SPEED AND MORE SPEED!

EIGHT years ago it took nearly eight minutes, on the average, to make connections on out-of-town telephone calls. Today the average speed of connections on all out-of-town calls —no matter how great the distance—is sixty seconds— JUST ONE MINUTE!

Eight years ago it took from five days to a week from the time orders were received to install telephones. Today they are installed within an average of two days, or on the dates requested by customers in over 98% of the orders given.

These are but two of the many outstanding improvements in telephone operation which have been introduced during the past few years in the interest of furnishing better telephone service.

DEATHS IN STATE IN 1930 FROM MOTOR ACCIDENTS

During the Year the Total Number From This Cause Was 406

In 1930, with a total population in the State of 1,625,279, there were 331,648 licensed automobiles in Maryland, an average of one to ever five persons in the State. A report prepared by Dr. John Collinson, chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health, shows that during the year there were 406 deaths from motor vehicle accidents in Maryland—334 white and 72 colored—or 25 in each 100,000 of the total population of both white and colored.

What this signifies may be gathered by a comparison of these figures with the deaths from other causes. For instance, there was a serious flare-up of typhoid in 1930, causing 104 deaths —6.4 in each 100,000 of the total population. Whooping cough was responsible for 73 deaths, 4.5 in each 100,000 of the population. Diseases of the arteries caused 419 deaths—25.6 to each 100,000 of the population. Diabetes caused 349 deaths—21.3 to each 100,000 of the population. Comparing the 406 deaths from motor vehicle accidents, with the 1618 due to tuberculosis, of 98.9 to each 100,000 of the population, it will be seen that automobile accidents were responsible for one-fourth as many as tuberculosis.

Of the 406 deaths from motor vehicle accidents in Maryland last year, 160 occurred in Baltimore City and 246 in the counties. There was an apparent decrease of 20 per cent in Baltimore City, but not an actual decrease, as deaths that were due to hit-and-run accidents in the city were recorded as "homicides" and were not included among those listed as due to "automobile accidents." In the counties there was an increase of 29 per cent over the number recorded in 1929.

The total number of deaths each year from motor vehicle accidents in the State, for the last five years, has been as follows: In 1926, 178 in Baltimore City and 134 in the counties; in 1927, 168 in Baltimore City and 163 in the counties; in 1928, 181 in Baltimore City and 161 in the counties; in 1929, 192 in Baltimore City and 191 in the counties; in 1930, 160 in Baltimore City and 246 in the counties. The counties in which the greatest increases have occurred were Allegany, Frederick, Baltimore and Harford. In 1930 there were but two deaths reported from Garrett county as being due to motor vehicle accidents. Of the 406 deaths in the State last year, 15 were among babies and young children up to four years old; 40 among girls and boys from 5 to 14; 285 were in the age group from 15 to 64 and 66 in the group 65 years old or older.

"These figures speak for themselves," Dr. Collinson said. "They also show that the slogan of every automobile driver should be 'safety first.'"

EYE HEALTH ESSENTIAL TO HEALTH OF THE BODY

Their Comfort is Bound Up in Individual General Welfare

Since the eyes are integral parts of the organism as a whole, it follows that their comfort is bound up in its general welfare. On their participation in disease, it should be scarcely necessary to speak. Many diseases of the body have their first manifestation in the changes of eye tissue. The eye is the only organ into which we can look and see the changes in tissues and blood circulation, and it is not uncommon for an optometrist when using an ophthalmoscope to find early stages and refer the patient to his physician for the needed treatment. In this manner disease is often detected in its early stage and overcome.

The powers of accommodation and convergence of the eyes may be diminished by stages of general muscular weakness and there are certain maladies, especially of the brain, the spine and kidneys which affect the eyes in a more direct and special manner.

It is a common saying that the eye is the "mirror of the mind" and nothing is more remarkable than the rapidity with which the mental status affect the quantity of moisture supplying the eyes, causing them to look either dull, bright or dry, according to the temperament at the moment. Continued weeping is very injurious. It produces redness and irritation of the llde and chronic congestion of their tissues.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

Resident County Agent,
J. H. CARTER,

Handling Darwin Tulips

Strong growing tulips such as the Darwins deterioate after a few yars if left in the ground undisturbed. This type is a heavy feeder and yet the roots do not forage far from the bulb. Consequently, the soil is soon exhausted and the size of the blooms is reduced.

If, however, the bulbs are dug up each year after the foilage dies down, cured in a dry, cool room, the small offsets separated and the larger bulbs replanted, the quality can be maintained year after year, provided that fresh fertility is added to the soil. Some varieties multiply rapidly thru division of the bulb. If these offsets are planted in a bed by themselves, they will soon attain good blooming size. One can thus greatly increase the stock of bulbs.

Before digging up the bulbs the foliage should be allowed to die down naturally. All seed pods should be removed early, for if the seeds are allowed to mature this interferes seriously with the development of the bulb. Gardeners sometimes wish to plant the tulip beds with annuals or other flowers and do not care to wait for the foliage to die down. In this ease the tulips may be carefully taken up and heeled-in in an out-of-the-way place. This method is not so good as the first recommended but is sometimes used.

One of the best methods for planting tulips is to take off four or five inches of the top soil. A liberal application of bone meal is then made in the bottom of the hole and harrowed into the subsoil. After this the beds are raked level, the bulbs set in place and the top soil put back. In this way the bulbs can be accurately spaced and planted at a uniform depth.

If the soil is a heay clay, the physical condition will be greatly improved if a liberal amount of sand or sifted coal ashes are mixed with it. On sandy soil the bulbs need to be planted deeper than in loam soil. Well rotted manure, compost, leaf mold or peat will supply the needed organic matter. If the soil is at all acid, lime should be added to correct this condition, since tulips like neutral or alkaline soil.

Robinson, also of Oakland, who sung a selection from the hymnal of the church, which was well rendered and favorably commented upon by many of the congregation.

Rev. I. N. H. Beahm, of Virginia, is preaching a series of sermons from the pulpit of Bethesda German Baptist church and many from this village attened daily.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!*

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

The great Lord Tennyson in a beautiful poem refers to a woman's Adam's Apple as "The warm white apple of her throat." Consider your Adam's Apple. Touch it—your Adam's Apple—That is your larynx—your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. Protect the delicate tissues within your throat. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. Don't rasp your throat with horsh irritants! Reach for a LUCKY instead. Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette which brings you the added benefit of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process, which includes the use of modern Ultra Violet Rays. It is this exclusive process that expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

An Interesting Fact

THE BATTLE OF BALTIMORE

Because of the fact that from April 1, 1777, to March 14, 1783, Maryland privateers to the number of approximately 250 had been successfully launched and operated against the British, Baltimore, the chief city, had been designated by the enemy "that nest of privateers."

Believing a statement published in the London press to the effect that a major operation was about to be launched "against the seat of the American government, but more particularly Baltimore is to be the immediate object of attack," it is small wonder that preparations for the defense of the city were carefully made. It will be remembered that Baltimore had theretofore made a large loan to the Federal government (from which she received no direct benefit), yet, notwithstanding this drain on her resources, her citizens again contributed liberally to the National defense, albeit it was for the immediate defense of their own city. Their apprehension was magnified by the news of the capture and burning of Warshington and the arrival of the militia from the disastrous Battle of Bladensburg, which occurred a few weeks before, in which Maryland troops took a very prominent part.

On September 12, 1814, the main British army of invasion landed off North Point, at the mouth of the Patapsco River. Early in their march on Baltimore they encountered breastworks, incomplete it is true, but showing sufficient skill in position to create the feeling that the entire American army must be preparing nearby for a decisive conflict. With this though in mind, General Ross, of the English Army, ordered a halt and rode forward to survey the field. It was a disastrous ride, for an American sharpshooter proved that, while the British regulars were superior in discipline and training, the American citizens could outshoot any soldier of that day. General Ross fell mortally wounded almost before the battle began. According to one account the enemy forces were almost paralyzed by this loss, for Ross seems to have had no effective successor.

The engagement began in the afternoon and lasted until about a quarter of five o'clock. Shortly after the battle began, the enemy came in full view of the fortifications on Hampstead Hill (near to the present site of Johns Hopkins Hospital), when they met with a "dreadful discharge of grape and cannister shot, of old locks, pieces of broken muskets and everything" which the Americans "could ram into their guns."

A writer of the day says, "The whole country within cannon shot was cleared from wood and laid out in grass and cornfields, consequently there was no cover to shelter an attacking army from any part of the deadly fire which would be immediately poured upon it." Fearing a disastrous defeat, the enemy retreated.

It will be further remembered that the British fleet anchored off Fort McHenry, and on Tuesday morning, the 13th of September, at daylight, the bombardment of the fort commenced. During the twenty-four hour bombardment, Francis Scott Key wrote the immortal Star Spangled Banner.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

It was reported that the miners at Corinth, West Va., seven miles west of Oakland, who went on strike for an advance in pick mining, demanding 50 cents per ton, were still idle. The men involved in the strike claimed that wages could not be made at 40 cents a ton.

The erection of a telephone line between Oakland and Mountain Lake Park was contemplated by a group of business and professional men of Oakland.

At a meeting of the American Legion of Honor officers were elected as follows: Thomas J. Peddicord, C. Felty, E. H. Sincell, Dr. E. H. Bartlett, E. D. Kepner, Robert C. Townshend, E. Z. Tower and George D. White.

The laying of the cornerstone of the M. E. church in Oakland took place Monday in the presence of about 250 people. The cornerstone was to have been placed on Sunday but owing to rain the ceremony was postponed until Monday. In the cornerstone a metal box containing copies of The Republican, Mountain Democrat, a record of the church, a few old coins and the names of many who had contributed the sum of one dollar to the building fund was sealed and placed in the stone.

A local letter from Amish Center said: "Lewis Yoder received his new buggy, for which he had been waiting for so long, last week. We presume he will now make up for lost time."

Twenty Years Ago

The Terra Alta Woolen Mills was totally destroyed by fire entailing a loss of $20,000 above the insurance and throwing about fifty people out of employment.

Edward Smouse, Deer Park, received a new Maxwell car, it having been driven through from Philadelphia by State Senator Harvey J. Speicher.

The wedding of Lloyd Miller and Miss Cora Schlossnagle of Accident, took place at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turney, Oakland.

Miss Edna May Chance, Mt. Lake Park, and George Potter, Merchanville, N. J., were married in the Mountain Lake Park M. E. church.

Among those mentioned in personal items were Frank B. Ross, Charles Tower and children, Leo J. Rasche, Mrs. G. A. Bolden, Lieut. E. S. West, Rev. Fr. Thomas J. Stanton, Ross Durst, Judges Kamp and Moon, of the Orphans' Court, W. Hamill Spedden and Mrs. James Willison.

A Letter From One Who Favors the Incorporation of Mountain Lake Park.

To the Editor of The Republican:—

Inasmuch as I am deeply interested in the welfare and future of Mountain Lake Park, I can not refrain from asking the privilege of a little space to set forth my views on some of the questions involved in the matter of the incorporation of the Park, especially after reading some of the letters published in your columns concerning the matter.

I should like to point out at the outset that there seems to be considerable confusion in the minds of some concerning the existing laws and methods of governing this community. It must be kept in mind that the Mt. Lake Park Association is distinctly a private corporation and as such has absolutely no governmental authority. The authority of government is vested in "The Community of Mountain Lake Park", a quasi public corporation deriving its authority from a charter granted to it by the Legislature. Under the charter granted this latter entity, provision is made for the selection of an "Annual Committee' and in it is vested the executive authority of governing the affairs of the Community. Provision is made for the selection of this Annual Committee in the following manner: The Mt. Lake Park Association has the right to select two members, the lot owners, two members, and the four thus selected, select the fifth member. In event the four members are unable to agree on the fifth member, then the Mt. Lake Park Association has the right to name the fifth member. Thus you have a situation whereby a private corporation has the balance of power, in fact the absolute domination and control of any community, through the executive authority, whether that control is in the hands of an individual or of a corporation, is wrong, un-American and should not be tolerated any where at any time. The citizens of any State or of any political sub-division thereof should always have the right of self government and this doctrine is one of the fundamental principles of our entire system of government.

There has been considerable discussion as to the effect the incorporation of this community would have on the activities of the Mt. Lake Park Association. As one who has favored the incorporation of Mt. Lake Park and who has heard much discussion of the subject, I am convinced that there is no disposition whatever on the part of those who favor Incorporation to interfere in any manner or hamper in the slightest degree the activities of the Association any more than they would wish to interfere with the activities of any other individual or corporation. The desire of those wishing incorporation is solely the wish and desire of any intelligent, Christian people who want the right of self-government and the right to say how their tax money should be spent and I am sure the people of this community will desire the Association to continue their work freely and unrestricted in any degree.

In your Issue of June 18 there appears a statement over the signature of the Board of Directors of the Mt. Lake Park Association in which there appears the following: "* * * the Park, by reason of its short term of operation, has never met expenses. Formerly stock holders and friends furnished money to meet annual deficits. There has been no exception to this rule since the Park has been under the direction of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, except that the deficit has been carried by the Board of Foreign Missions rather than by subscriptions raised on the ground or from friends of the Association. This deficit with certain repair costs for upkeep, now amounts to $110,133.61." By what authority or on what theory do you suppose that the Board of Foreign Missions of the church would have the right to spend money that undoubtedly has been contributed or subscribed by the members of the church for the needs and purposes of Foreign Missions, to carry the deficit arising out of the operation of a private corporation in the State of Maryland? Do you suppose that the members of this church who contributed their money to the church for this purpose expected or intended that the funds would be spent in any such manner? Do you suppose that they have expended this huge sum on the theory that Mt. Lake Park is in some foreign mission field and that the money used to take care of this so-called deficit was used to educate and convert savages and non-Christians in some distant land? Do you suppose that an examination of their books would reveal entries showing this amount to have been expended in carrying on the great work of Foreign Missions? I think the statement is an insult to the intelligence of the contributing members of the church and to the residents of this community. Will they publish a statement in your columns in your next issue showing the items of expenditure going to make up this so-called deficit? I am no prophet, but I do not hesitate to venture the prediction that they will not.

In that statement also appears the following: "Thertfore we cannot assume that the Mission Board will continue operation of the Park even tho the incorporation act fails of passage. It is quite certain that if the referendum for incorporation passes, the Board of Foreign Missions will withdraw its support not later than the close of the present season." I take it from this statement that the Board of Foreign Missions is through with Mt. Lake Park in any event, therefore their wishes or desires in the premiscs need no further consideration, except that I assume that when they do withdraw, they will see to It that the citizens of this community who contributed some $20,000 or $25,000 to clear the Association of its indebtedness, will be refunded the amount so contributed.

I sincerely hope that the people who have the right to vote on this question will not be misled by false issues, silly propaganda and reckless statements.

I will discuss some other features of this question In your issue next week, If I may be permitted the space.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL HAS 85 PUPILS ENROLLED

Extreme Heat and Prevalence of Measles Deterring Factors

Thus far eighty-five pupils are enrolled in the daily vacation Bible school, which opened its sessions in the Grammar school building on Monday morning.

The faculty is composed of seven members. The kindergarten is in charge of Miss Elizabeth West, who is assisted by Miss Jane Robinson; first grade has as its head Miss Lucille Mitchell; second and third grades are being taught by Miss Esperance Ashby; fourth grade, Mrs. Mabel Sollars; fifth grade, Miss Mildred Stemple, sixth, seventh and high school grades, Rev. D. C. Trimble. The boys of the sixth and seventh grades are being instructed in manual training by Mr. O. T. Graser in the agriculture room at the high school. Mrs. Sollars is acting superintendent.

Members of the school will picnic at The Pines on Thursday afternoon of next week.

It is said that those who have the school in charge are well pleased with the progress being made and are of the opinion that it is the best school yet attempted.

The prevalence of measles among the children and the extremely hot weather are responsible for the small attendance, but which is expected to reach over one hundred before the close of the school on Friday of next week.

The closing service of the school will be held on Sunday evening, July 12, when a special exercise will be presented, setting forth the things taught in the school and also the work done in the two weeks will be on display.

The public is invited to this closing service which will be held at a place yet to be announced.

MT. LAKE SUMMER SCHOOL OF MISSIONS PROGRAM

Interdenominational Group To Meet July 31 and Continue In Session Until August 6th

An interdenominational School of Missions (home and foreign) will be held at Mountain Lake Park, Maryland, beginning on the evening of July 31 and continuing until and including August 6th, when three schools, senor, junior and young people, will be held in one.

This year a most interesting program is offered. The leader, Mrs. F. I. Johnson, President of the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions, landed in New York City last Saturday from a trip around the world in which she visited the different nations where missions had been established and she will bring to the Park school a store of information respecting the foreign mission work as well as many thing of interest to be exhibited. Mrs. Johnson will present the Foreign Text Beek in the school. This alone insures a very rare treat. Mrs. Johnson's lectures will be based on "Christ Comes to the Village."

Other teachers will include Mrs. Dan B. Brummit, with the Home Text Book, "God and the Census." Mrs. Lippard, Philadelphia, a missonary in Japan for many years, will present Missionary Methods, "Open Windows." Mrs. Lippard is superintendent of the Light Brigade of the United Lutheran Church in America. Dr. Harriett B. Jones, foremost woman in West Virginia, will have charge of the Bible study based on the book, "The Christ Life." These instructors teach both books for seniors, young people and juniors, but at different hours each day.

Other teachers include Miss Edyth Lowery, New York City, on immigrant work; William M. Danner, secretary of American Missions to lepers; storytelling and thecnique, Mrs. Wm. W. Grant, of Oakland, whose ability is recognized locally as being a most excellent teacher. Besides the above there will be lectures by missionaries and by noted speakers on topics of vital interest, including prohibition, lawlessness, citizenship and problems of youth.

Camp Gleam, for young people, will have as its superintendent Miss Anna Shaw, of near Baltimore. Miss Shaw is intensely interested in girls. The camp is a delightful home for the girls where plenty of good, home-cooked food is served. Last year more than thirty girls enjoyed the advantages presented by the camp. The aims are educational. Each morning classes in Bible study, missions, pageantry and teaching are conducted, which help those who attend to give better service in their homes and communities. Recreation each afternoon is provided in boating, swimming, hiking, motoring, tennis, and then the camp is inspirational, giving the individual girl a truer knowledge of the things uplifting.

Nowhere in America can one find any grounds that will equal Mountain Lake Park. It is situated on the main line of the B. & O. R. R., on top of the Alleghenies, containing 800 acres in one park, covered with fine groves of virgin white oak timber, with its improved roads and driveways, making it the most attractive meeting place that can be found.

Rates for board and room are as low as $2.00 per day.

Any additional information may be secured by addressing Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, local chairman, Oakland, or Miss Anna Shaw, leader of Camp Gleam, Severna, Anne Arundel county, Maryland.

Camp Algajoy

Camp Algajoy, the 4-H Girls' camp for both Garrett and Allegany counies, will be held July 17, 18, 19 and on through to the 25th. The fee for the 9 days ls $5.00. Camp proper for all 4-H giris will be July 20-25, and the fee ls $3.50. Each girl will be required to provide her own transportation, bed and bedding.

Since there will probably be no agent in Garrett county during the month of July Miss Benthien does not encourage younger club members to attend although that would be left to the decision of the parents. Miss Maude Bean, home demonstration agent in Allegany county says, however, she will be glad to have 4-H campers from Garrett county to attend. Miss Bean will send detailed information which will be put in the paper for those who plan to camp at Algajoy in July.

In the old days they accused the shifty politician of carrying water on both shoulders. Now they accuse him of carrying water on one and booze on the other.

When lt comes to matrimony it is still better to pick a girl who ls handy with a gas range rather than one who ls an expert with a gas buggy.

MT. LAKE PARK

If the voters of Mountain Lake Park are not informed as to the issues involved and the views of those who are "for" and those who are "against" the adoption of the municipal form of government, it is because they do not read the local papers.

Trusty and rusty typewriters and the old family pen have certainly been strutting their stuff and doing their daily dozen. And it ls a good thing that this is so, for every voter should inform himself or herself of the facts and then vote as their conscience and good judgment dictate. There is only one question to be considered, and that is, "What form of government is the best for Mountain Lake Park?"

Personal prejudices, likes and dislikes of persons, should not be a determining factor in the coming election. Simply because one voter is diametrically opposed to another in his views as to what form of government will be of the greatest good to the greatest number is no good reason to "get mad" and "stop speaking." That is just playing the game like children. The one who is "for" and the one who is "against" should not be branded as an undesirable citizen. All who are sincere and honest have a right to their convictions and the right to voice their sentiments. This column has not, nor will it be used on either side of this controversy, and our only hope is that in the heat of battle nothing will be said or done that will engender permanent animosities and be harmful to the future of the Park. Whichever side wins let the other side forget it and abide by one of the underlying principles of a democratic form of government—majority rule.

Camp Meeting in Full Swing

Interest in the daily sessions of the camp meeting continues unabated. Despite the depression the number of visitors here, especially for this meeting, is about as large as usual. The sermons of Dr. Joseph Owen, University Park, Iowa, as well as those of other ministers on the regular program and a number of volunteer talks by visiting ministers not scheduled to speak, have been factors in increasing the attendance. Both President Hood and Secretary Castle deserve great credit for the manner in which each annual meeting is handled. The program is well balanced, each day bringing its own message in an interesting and impressive manner.

Rev. H. D. Vestal, of Winston-Salem, N. C., a typical Southern evangelist, arrived yesterday and will take part in the meetings. He, together with Dr. Owens, will be the principal speakers for the remainder of the meetings.

Much praise has been heard as to the music and singing under the leadership of Prof. John E. Moore. The rendition of the old gospel songs has been an inspiration.

Personal Mention.

F. and the late Mrs. White, of near Oakland, was married in the Lutheran parsonage, Oakland, Sunday evening, June 28, at 5:30 o'clock, to Mr. Russell Bliss Shaffer, of Keyser, W. UNIDENTIFIED MAN FOUND IN LITTLE YOUGH RIVER

Coronor's Jury Returns Verdict of Death From Unknown Cause

The body of an unidentified man, presumably of an age between forty-five and fifty-five years, was found floating in Little Yough River Monday afternoon, after having been in the water for several weeks, according to statements made by members of a coroner's jury, who examined the body before it was removed to the Oakland cemetery and interred in the county lot.

Swimming at what was known several years ago as the "pen stock" swimming hole, a short distance from the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks near Weber crossing, five boys who had left several companions and had gone up stream found the body floating on the water. They later notified the coroner and State's Attorney, who in company with a jury made an inquest into his death and returned a verdict of death in an unknown manner. The man's head was badly crushed, leading the jury to believe that the man had been struck by a train while walking along the tracks and hurled into the river above the point where he was found.

A watch, a pair of eye glasses and a purse containing a little more than a dollar was found on the body, but no letters or other means of identifying the body were found.

The body was found by Pat Turney, Leo Wolf, Pat Ricc, Lewis Walter and Regis Kerins. The jury was composed of Charles F. White, foreman, Theodore Mason, L. M. Fraley, William Glotfelty, John Stevenson, Leo Helbig, James Kerins, Wm. Browning, Bruce Collins, Fred. Peddicord, Arthur Warnick and J. Frank Browning. W. W. Dawson, State's Attorney, and W. A. Gonder, Coroner.

Sentence was pronounced on DeWitt Friday after several witnesses from Rosedale appeared against him in the Magistrate's court and stated that DeWitt was an habitual disturber of the peace in that locality. It was said at the hearing that DeWitt had worked but eight days in the past four years.

Lesson for July 5

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

LESSON TEXT—Acts 1:6-14; 2:1-8.
GOLDEN TEXT—But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Friends Carrying on His Work.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Friends Carrying on His Work.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Coming of New Power.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Empowered for a World Task.

I. The Holy Spirit Promised (Acts 1:6-8).

1. The disciples' question (v. 6). They said, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" They were right in their expectation of the kingdom, for it had been covenanted to David (II Sam. 7:8-16), predicted by the prophets, and declared to be at hand by John the Baptist and Christ himself. However, they were in darkness as to the calling and establishing of the church.

2. Times and seasons in God's hands (v. 7). Christ turned their attention from the desire to know times and seasons, which belong alone to God, to their supreme duty. The Christian's supreme obligation is to preach repentance and remission of sins through the shed blood of Jesus Christ to all the world (Luke 24:46-49) in the power of the Holy Spirit (Acts 1:8).

3. The missionary program (v. 8). The Holy Spirit came to empower them to preach the gospel to the world.

a. In Jerusalem. This witnessing was done by the twelve immediately following Pentecost.

b. In Judea and Samaria after the hands of wicked persecutors were laid upon them.

c. Unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Beginning with the first foreign missionary enterprise this work has been carried on with varying degrees of success till the present time.

II. The Holy Spirit Given (Acts 2:1-8).

1. The time of (v. 1). It was on the "Day of Pentecost." Pentecost means fifty. It meant, therefore, the feast that was held fifty days after the wave sheaf was offered (Lev. 23:15, 16). It was observed by presenting two loaves made of new wheat (Lev. 23:17). These loaves were baked with leaven while leaven was excluded from the Passover Feast (Lev. 23:6). The reason for this was that the Passover Feast typified Christ's sacrificial death, while Pentecost represented the Church, composed of Jews and Gentiles—the two loaves.

2. Upon whom the Spirit came (v. 1 Cf. 1:13-15). The twelve and others to the number of 120. The gift of the Spirit was not merely for the twelve but for all believers.

3. Marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-8).

a. The sound of a mighty wind (v. 2). This suggests the all pervasive life-giving power of the Holy Spirit.

b. Tongues of flame (v. 3). Each of the 120 was crowned with such a tongue. "Tongues" show the practical purpose of the Spirit's gifts, and "fire" indicates his purifying energy.

c. Speaking in other tongues (vv. 4, 8). Men of every nation heard the gospel in their own tongue.

III. The Holy Spirit Working (Acts 2:14-47).

1. Peter's sermon (vv. 14-40). This sermon is as wonderful as the gift of tongues. It demonstrates the presence and power of the Spirit, because Peter was a Galilean fisherman without literary training. His analysis is perfect. He begins with a brief defense and scriptural explanation of the phenomenon of tongues (vv. 14-21), and follows by a threefold argument proving the messiahship of Jesus. In his conclusion he appealed to them to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus.

2. Three thousand converted (v.24). Many people were convicted of their sins.

3. The abiding fellowship (vv. 42-47. The evidence that the Spirit had really come and that his work was real was that

a. The converts continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine (v. 42).

b. They continued in fellowship with the apostles (v. 42). The surest way to grow is to keep in fellowship with Christians.

c. In using the means of grace (v. 42). They continued in the breaking of bread. God has instituted ordinances in his house.

d. In prayer (v. 42). The apostolic church was a praying church.

e. In praising God (v. 47). The experience of the indwelling Spirit issues in praise to God.

Everlasting Arms

Christ beareth me good company; he hath eased me, when I saw it not, lifting the cross off my shoulders, so that I think it to be but a feather, because underneath are everlasting arms.—Samuel Rutherford.

Swords Into Plowshares

If swords are to be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning-hooks, where must that work begin? It must begin in the individual heart.—J. H. Jowett.

That all of said parties are of full age, the plaintiffs being residents and citizens of the State of Maryland, and that the defendants reside in the State of Ohio.

CHAPTER XXVII

Every one in authority realized that all resources the allies could muster would be required to meet successfully the great offensive of the central powers expected in the spring, but to use them effectively close co-operation among commanders would be imperntive. With this in mind I proposed to Premier Clemenceau that the commanders in chief and chiefs of staff get together to examine the situation and, if possible, determine a general program of combined action.

M. Clemenceau nt once approved the suggestion. It was also favorably received by General Foch, who, it will he recalled, was chief of the French general staff. I proposed that the meeting be held at my headquarters, hut the French selected Compiegne, Petain's G. H. Q.

At the meeting, January 24, 1918, Robertson, for the British, spoke first, and suggested a general statement as to: (1) Mutual support between allied armies, (2) Situation as to reserves, (3) Question of troops in Italy, (4) Situation as to the transportation of the American army and facilities given it in Frunce.

Petain Favored Defensive.

General Petain thought that for the present the allies would be forced to remain on the defensive because of lack of men. He said the French army had ninety-seven divisions with nn infantry streagth of from 5,000 to 6,000 men each, some thirty-odd of these divisions being in reserve and the rest in the treaches, besides eight cavalry divisions, two of which were dismounted and six mounted.

All divisions he thought could be kept up until April if there should be no fighting, but later on, even without a battle, he would have to break up five divisions to maintain the others, the six mounted cavalry divisions would have to be reduced to four, and before the end of the year the total force would have to be reduced by twenty divisions.

Foch Was for Counteroffensive.

General Foch declared that the best means of halting a strong and persistent offensive was a powerful counteroffensive.

"The German offensive at Verdun was stopped not by our resistance there but by our offensive on the Somme in 1916," said General Foch. "Such an operation is possible only when foreseen nnd prepared beforehand. In planning the counteroffensive I think that the entire front must be considered ns a whole and not the French as one part and the British as another. The plan must envisage them together preparing for offensive action on a common hattlefield with all the forces at their disposal."

General Robertson expressed accord with Foch, but he did not see where or with what means such an offensive could be executed, and stated that the war could not he won by remaining on the defensive.

"Give us hnck the troops from Salonika and we will commence offensives," said General Haig.

"We were not speaking of offensives, but of counteroffensives," General Foch replied.

General Robertson remarked that of course the French and British could reinforce ench other and make counterattacks, and then asked: "Could they do more than that?"

"Not without the Americans," General Petain answered him.

Dependent Upon U. S.

General Robertson then said: "I think our only hope lies in American reserves," and he wanted to hear from me.

I stated that but few of the allied authorities seemed to realize that American participation would depend upon the amount of shipping svailable for the transportation of onr troops, and that the time when they would be needed was near at hand. As there had been some reference to amalgamation, I also took occasion to emphasize the point that we expected as a matter of course that the American nrmy wonld have its own front as an independent force and not be used merely as a reserve to be sent here and there. One insuperable reason, I said, why we could not amalgamate with the Frnech was the difference in language, and I added that we would not use our troops in that way at all unless it became absolutely necessary.

I then discussed our problems, calling attention to the delays at the French ports and our shortage of rail transportation, and touched on the backward state of procurement of of equipment, munitions and airplanes. They all appeared surprised to learn of our difficulties, especially General Foch, although, even as chief of the general staff, he apparently could not interfere in matters handled directly by the ministry. It was astonishing to find how little comprehension any of them had of the enormons task that confronted the Americans.

Foch said: "None of these questions has been referred to me," whereupon Petain retorted that "one should not wait nntil such things are brought to his attention, but should look around and find them." Petain added at once that he would send nn official to study our situation, and Haig later sent one of his officers, who offered many suggestions out . . his own experience.

It was the sense of the conference that every assistance shonld be given us in getting our troops across, and all seemed fully to realize that no successful offensive could be undertaken without them.

Bliss Favors British Plan.

Conversntions with General Robertson contin ed the next day at the Crillon hotel in Paris, with General Bliss present. The same arguments were repeated in favor of incorporating Americnn units into British divisions, and General Bliss expressed himself in favor of the Robertson plan. I was forced to declare myself then and there. My stand was not quite what Robertson had expected, and the meeting adjourned with the position of all concerned no longer in doubt.

General Bliss and I met later by appointment to talk the matter over between ourselves and, if possible, come to an understnnding. After some discussion he suggested that each of us cable his views to Washington and ask for a decision. It was not my policy then or at any other time to put anything up to Washington that I could possibly decide myself.

This would have been the last thing to do in this case, especially as the secretary had left in my haads the determination as to how our troops shonld be employed. For two men in our positions to have appealed in this way would have indicated n clash, nnd Wnshington had enough trouble; besides, the secretary could not possibly have been sufficiently in touch with the undercurrent of these negotiations to make a wise decision.

So I said, "Well, Bliss, do you know wlnt would happen if we should do that? We would both be relieved from further duty in France, and that is exactly what we should deserve."

We then spent some time examining the question from all angles, until finally he came around to my view and said: "I think you are right, and I shall back you up in the position you bave taken."

CHAPTER XXVIII

Once General Bliss and I had reached an understanding as to onr nttitude toward amalgamation of our troops with the British he gave me his support in later conferences. When we saw the British representatives for further talks at Versailles January 20, 1918, all their nrguments were met frankly and squarely. After they had presented their case Prime Minister Lloyd George asked Bliss for his views, to which he replied:

"Pershing will speak for us and whatever he says with regard to the disposition of the American troops will have my approval."

An agreement was then signed by Mr. Lloyd George, General Maurice and myself as set forth in the following copy of the memorandum submitted and lated cabled to Washington:

"In order to meet the situation as presented by Sir William Robertson and hasten the arrival and training of troops, it is proposed that the British government use the available sea transportation in question for bringing over the personnel of entire divisions under the following conditions:

"1. That the infantry and auxiliary troops of these divisions be trained with British divisions by battalions, under such plan ns may be agreed upon.

"2. That the artillery be trained under American direction in the use of French material as at present.

"3. That the higher commanders and staff officers be assigned for training and experience with corresponding nnits of the British army.

"4. That when sufficiently trained, these battalions be reformed into regiments and that when the artillery is fully trained all the units comprising each division be united under their own officers for service.

"5. That the above plan be carried out without interference with the plans now in operation for bringing over American forces.

"6. That question of supply be arranged by agreement between the British nnd American commanders in chief.

"7. That question of arms and equipment be settled in similar manner."

War Council Mnets Again.

The supreme war council hegan its third session January 30. At the opening session Mr. Lloyd George made a statement in some detail of the situation on the allied fronts. He then spoke of the large number of casualties the nilies had suffered during 1917 and in a very pointed manner declared that the costly offensives had produced no tangible results. But instead, he said, the allies now found themselves short of man power at a critical period of the war. His sharp criticism was evidently directed at Sir Douglas Haig and General Robertson, hut neither was given an opportunity to reply.

The military representatives presented a joint note with reference to military policy, as directed at the December meeting, and the opinion given was identical with that of the conference at Compiegne January 24 and also in August at the meeting in Paris, except that the campaign under General Allenby, then in progress in Palestine, should continue. It will be recalled that these two informal conferences of commanders in chief had concluded that the allies should remain on the defensive on all fronts until the Americans should arrive in sufficient force to warrant the offensive.

Sse No End of War Until 1919.

The joint note was approved as the decision of the council, with the understanding, as suggested by the French, that no white troops should be sent from France to Palestine. It was decidedly the opinion of M. Clemenceau and of all others present who expressed themselves that the war could not be ended until 1919, when the American army, it was thought, would reach its maximum strength.

The allied forces at the moment were superior in all active fronts, except in the Balkans, but the Greek mobilization, when completed, would add sufficient strength to give the allies the advantage there also. The American strength was then negligible, but the prospect was that we should have a few divisions ready for service by June, and by September possibly seventeen or the equivnlent of thirty-four French divisions.

The danger on the western front lay in the continuous increase of the German forces and in their ability to concentrate in turn against the French and British, and as neither had sufficient reserves of their own it was clear that unless some arrangement could be made between them for better co-ordination and support the war might easily be lost before the Americans should arrive.

Plan Allied Reserve.

The study of this problem by the military representatives led to nnother joint note which proposed a plan for the organization of a general allied reserve. It provided that the British, French nnd Italian armies should each set apart a certain number of divisions to constitute this reserve, which would be called into action only in a great emergency. The discussion of this question became acrimonious. Haig and Petain both pointed out that they would be short of divisions very soon in case of severe fighting and presented figures on the subject that were very disturbing.

But the council's scheme was cut and dried. The recommendations set forth in the note were adopted then and there by the council. The general reserve was created and its control was placed under nn executive war board to consist of Generals Foch, representing the French, chairman; Bliss, the Americans; Cadorna, the Italians, and a British general officer to be named.

At this meeting Mr. Lloyd George designated Gen. Sir Henry Wilson as the British representative, to the very evident disappointment of General Robertson, who was present at the session. The selection of Wilson was regarded by the British high command and the war office as open disapproval of their conduct of the war.

Winter of 1917-18 Most Severe.

It has been said that the winter of 1917-18 was the most severe of the war. The cold was at times so intense as to make the generally unheated houses, harns nnd lofts used as billets nearly uninhabitable. The gloom of short days and long nights in the isolated and largely depopulated French villages can hardly be described.

Then, as we have seen, there was also a shortage of heavy winter clothing, although frequent cables early in the fall had called attention to the prohahility of a deficiency. No douht the demands were greater than the quartermnster department could meet, but the relatively small number of troops in France going through the winter under actual war conditions should have been given first consideration.

Much of the clothing that we received for our troops looked to he shoddy, and, being light and thin, of course offered insufficient protection.

The deficiencies were met in part by purchases from the British, although our men did not take kindly to the idea of wearing the uniform of another nation, and it was with considerable protest and chagrin that they did so until our own could be supplied.

To the credit of our officers and men be it said that they generally ignored adverse conditions, and, barring some irritation at French methods and occasionally at our own, they kept at their tasks with commendable determination. Looking hnck over the different phases of the war I regard that winter, with its difficulties, anxieties and apprehension for the future, as the most trying period of them all.

CHAPTER XXIX

At the ports in France the amount of freight discharged in January, 1918, was more encouraging, being about two-fifths as much as during the preceding seven months. The rate of discharge was accelerated to some extent by the better distribution of our transports by the navy. More construction material was being delivered where it was needed for port works and the future was somewhat clarified in this respect hy the arrival of additional logging machinery.

During the month there was also an increase in troop shipments, including some elements of the Thirty-second (Haan's) division, with 20,000 men for the service of supply. By the end of Jannary approximately 120,000 combat troops, 34,000 engineer troops and 61,000 others for the service of supply were in France. Although promising, this was only the merest start, as we were still far hehind onr schedule.

It must be added, however, that the increase in the arrivals of men and materials remained haphazard and not at all in the proportions needed.

It contiaued apparent that my recommendations were not accepted in an altogether unhesitating spirit of helpfulness and that the serious need for executive leadership hack home had not been met.

My diary notes the following:

Chaumont, Monday, February 18, 1918.—General Foch and Major General Weygand visited headquarters Thursday, had luncheon with us and examined the general staff organization. Cnptain Todd, director of naval construction, came to confer regarding wireless stations nt Bordeaux.

Left Friday, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting First division in Ansauville sector; inspected infantry in front-line trenches and the artillery. Called on General Debeney, French First army.

Returned this morning, stopping at nviation park, Colombey-les-Belles, Mnj. Arthur Page commanding. Camouflage work exceptionally well done. Passed through Miracourt to see General de Castelnau, who speaks highly of our troops.

Foch Cold to U. S. Problems.

As General Foch, then chief of the French general staff, had shown some surprise when at the allied meeting at Compiegne in January I told of the delays and difficulties we were having at the ports and in the operation of railways, I invited him to nmke a visit to my headquarters, hoping to put him in touch with our activities.

We had already reached a state of development that confirmed the soundness of our organization and could forecast its ability to meet all requirements. I went with him to the various sections of the general staff and while he expressed no opinion nbout what he saw, his aide and spokesman, General Weygand, a staff officer of experience, was very complimentnry.

Foch never seemed interested when I talked with him of our problems and I doubt whether he ever thought, knew or cared much about organization or questions of transportation and supply. He was essentially a student and a teacher of history and strategy.

"Treated Like Mendicants."

There contlaued to be considerable cause to find fault with the attitude and methods of French hureau officials.

Apropos the experience of many of our officers, I recall tlnt one of the most efficient on duty at a very important port once said to me:

"General, the trouble is that these subordinate French officials in immediate charge nre either so hide-bound or else so conceited that it would be as easy to convince a Greek statue as to mnke one of them understand. How in the world it happens, sir, that we do so well I do not see.

"Here we bave come 3,000 miles to help them and yet we are treated like mendicants on the street corner holding a tin cup for passing pennies.

"I know, sir, that co-operation is necessary if we hope to win the war but it requires an excessive effort on our part, with more failures than otherwise to our credit."

This was harsh comment, but there were times in the experience of most officers when it seemed to fit the case fairly well.

Officers Found Lax.

With reference to the inspection trip noted in my diary, I had recently inspected several stntions like Vittel and Bourbonne-les-Bains, which were commanded by regular officers, of whom, naturally, much was expected, but before the World war our army had always been more or less careless in dress and none too strict when in the field, and these men were no exception to the rule. Even higher commanders were often found neglectful of their appearance and lax in the enforcement of disciplines.

But the conditions of service in France demanded more serious attention to these essentials, not only as a matter of pride but because of the general effect upon morale and efficiency. Good discipline is the first requisite to successful military effort, and the degree of its enforcement in a command is an almost certain index to the character of performance to be expected in battle.

Likewise, an officer or soldier who takes no pride in his personal appearance is usually found careless in other respects and to that extent less reliable in time of stress. It need hardly be added that those of this class who came under my observation and did not immediately respond to correction were very soon replaced.

old step-mother of the accused woman, last month, and that the aged woman had declared "Rosa killed her husband and I'll see to it that she gets all that's coming to her."

Most of the morning was taken up in securing a jury. The list of the petit jurors of the April term, recalled last week was soon exhausted, and it was necessary to summon fifty extra talismen before a jury was completed. The court granted a motion by the State to have all witnesses excluded when testimony was started.

Mrs. Felda, when arraigned, entered a plea of not guilty, through her attorneys, Albert A. Doub, Jr., Cumberland; William R. Offutt and A. T. Matthews, this city. Frederick A. Thayer, counsel for Mrs. Carrie Harvey, jointly indicted with Mrs. Felda, made a motion for a severance, which was granted by the court. Mrs. Harvey's trial will probably follow that of Mrs. Felda. She entered a plea of not guilty, and her council asked for a trial before the court.

State's Attornty Walter W. Dawson is being assisted by State's Attorney William A. Huster, of Allegany county, and Ernest Ray Jones.

Doctor Became Suspicious

Dr. E. E. Sollars, of Deer Park, was the first State witness. He testified that he was called to the Felda home on February 8 and found Felda dead in bed, with his tonguc swollen and other circumstances which aroused his suspicion. Dr. Sollars said he notified Garrett county authoritics and asked that an investigation be made. He also said he assisted Dr. H. W. McComas in the post-mortem examination of Felda's body.

Dr. W. B. Penniman, of the firm of Penniman and Brown, Baltimore chemists testified that Felda's viscera was sent to him by Garrett county authorities and that he found traces of strychninc in the stomach. Two bottles of liquor, found in the Felda home, were also sent to Dr. Penniman for analysis. He said one half-pint bottle of liquor contained strychninc, but another half-pint bottle did not contain poison. Both bottles were partly filled with moonshine, he said.

"Aunt Janc" McRobie, stepmother of the accused woman, said she lived at the Felda home, occupying an upstairs room. She said Felda worked about the house on the afternoon of February 7 and had chopped kindling wood for her. The aged woman testified that Felda complained of feeling ill that evening and said he had been poisoned. She quoted Felda as saying "Rosa and Carrie did this." Mrs. McRobie, under cross-examination by defense counsel, denied that she had any ill-feeling toward Mrs. Felda, prior to Felda's death.

Talked About Divorce

R. L. Wolfe, an Oakland barber, declared that Mrs. Felda camc to his shop on February 6, two days before Felda's death, and had her hair cut. Wolfe said the woman asked him if he knew of a good lawyer "who could get her a divorce".

W. A. Sturgiss testified that Mrs. Felda came to his pharmacy on February 6 and purchased some strychninc, saying she wanted the poison to kill rats and squirrels. Sturgiss said the woman gave her name as Rosa McRobie, her maiden name.

Sheriff Testifies

Sheriff W. H. Haenftling testified that he was called to the Felda home on February 8 and found Felda dead in bed. He said the body was rigid and that the man's mouth was open and his tongue badly swollen, while his mouth contained dark matter that looked like blood.

The officer said he placed Mrs. Felda under arrest and that during the ride to the Oakland jail the woman remarked, "I guess you'll hang me for this. Go ahead, I'm ready for my oats." Mrs. Harvey, who was at the Felda home at the time, was also arrested and brought to the Oakland jail. Following an inquest, a coroner's jury recommended that both women be held for actlon of the grand jury, which indicted them.

At the time of the investigation into Felda's death, Garrett county officers reported that a brother of Mrs. Felda, F. Luther McRobie, was found dead in bed about a year ago. A coroner's jury at that time found he had died of acute alcoholism.

Another member of the family, Mrs. Felda's sister, also died under pecular circumstances about two years ago, authorities said. She succumbed on a train while traveling between New York City and Philadelphia. Authorities said she was a drug addict and that her death was attributed to an over dose of a drug.

The State, in its closing argument, demanded a verdict of first degree murder, declaring that the crime was premeditated and that Mrs. Felda bought strychnine and put it in a bottle of moonshine which Felda drank. Defense counsel reiterated the woman's statements that she put the poison in the liquor, with the intention of ending her own life, and that Felda obtained the bottle without her knowledge and drank the deadly potion before she could warn him.

Former State's Attorney Ernest Ray Jones opened the closing argument for the prosecution. He was followed by Albert A. Doub, Jr., one of the accused woman's attorneys, after which State's Attorney William A. Huster, Allegany county, urged the conviction of Mrs. Felda. A. T. Matthews and William R. Offutt followed with a summing up of the defense, asking for an acquittal. State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson closed for the prosecution.

Defense Motion Overruled

At the close of testimony yesterday morning, W. R. Offutt, senior counsel for Mrs. Felda, argued the motion to strike out that part of the testimony of "Aunt Jane" McRobie, in which sho quoted Felda as making a death-bed accusation against Mrs. Felda and Mrs. Carrie Harvey, jointly indicted with Felda's wife. The aged woman said Felda exclaimed "Carrie and Rosa did this. They poisoned me." Defense counsel said this was flimsy testimony and was not borne out or supported by any other testimony in the case. The motion was overruled by the court.

Mrs. Carrio Harvey, who was granted a separate trial when arraigned Tuesday, testified yesterday morning that she lived a short distance from the Felda home, near Wilson's station, and had known Mrs. Felda since girlhood. She said she knew Mrs. Felda was a drug addict because of her actions when she did not have any "dope", and that Rosa was hysterical and screamed and cried then.

Admits Supplying Liquor

Mrs. Harvey, who is the wife of "Western Bill' Harvey, admitted that she supplied the liquor in which Mrs. Felda put the poison. She said she lied about the quantity when she was first questioned, declaring at that time that she sent over a half pint, as she feared prosecution under the Garrett county liquor laws. She admitted yesterday that she sent a pint and a half of liquor to the Felda home.

She said "Aunt Jane" McRobie had complained to her of the living conditions at the Felda home, where the aged woman lived in a room on the second floor. Mrs. Harvey denied that she knew anything about poison being bought by Mrs. Felda, or that she knew it had been put in the liquor. She said she went to the Felda home and found Mike Felda very ill, but believed he had indigestion. Mrs. Harvey also denied putting the liquor in Felda's coat pocket.

Gives Jealousy as Motive

The State, in cross-examination of the witnesses, sought to prove jealousy as a possible motive, attempting to bring out that Mrs. Felda suspected her husband was intimate with a girl in the neighborhood. Sheriff W. H. Haenftling was called in rebuttal by the State and testified that Mrs. Felda had made such complaints to him of her suspicions. Defense counsel made frequent objections to this line of questionlng.

Mrs. Anna Hayes, a young married daughter of Mrs. Felda, said she obtained the liquor from Mrs. Harvey. She said she was away part of the afternoon of February 7, and came back shortly before her father died. Mrs. Hayes said her mother was a drug addict.

Frank Felda, a son of the accused woman, corroborated his sister's testimony that his mother used drugs. He said he knew nothing about the poisoned liquor. He said he was married and had been livlng away from home, while employed as a miner, but had returned to the Felda farm prior to the death of his father.

2-DAY CELEBRATION HERE DRAWS CROWD OF PEOPLE

Colorful Parade Held Saturday Received Favorable Comment From Visitors

GOLD STAR MOTHER LEADS

A colorful parade Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock was probably the biggest feature of the two-day celebration held in Oakland last week, and when the celebration grounds were closed at 12 o'clock midnight, July 4, another Legion and Firemen's celebration was brought to a close. The affair was marked as a splendid success socially and a fair success financially.

Friday, July 3, was Fireman's Day, when with a parade composed of visiting fire companies from the Tri-Towns, Friendsville, Grantsville, Terra Alta and the Oakland organization, augmented by several beautifully decorated floats, traversed the streets and disbanded at the celebration grounds, formally opening the two days' festivities.

The crowd was slow in gathering into Oakland on the morning of the Fourth, hundreds of the number that finally reached here having spent the greater part of the morning and the early afternoon on Deep Creek Lake, but before the parade, which is said to have been one of Oakland's best, the people started to pour into town and by 6:30 o'clock thousands lined the streets along the route of the parade.

With A. R. Martin and Wade H. Hinebaugh, marshals, the parade was formed on the east end of Alder street and made its way down Sixth street to Oak, thence west on Oak to Third where it turned west to Crook street; to Second, down Second to Alder, up Alder to Third and thence to the celebration grounds.

Following the marshals the parade was headed by the Gilbert-Brown Boys Band. An automobile bearing Major George Henderson, State Commander American Legion, Department of Maryland, in company with Rudolph Nickel, general chairman of the State Legion convention committee, Frostburg, and Mayor Grover C. Stemple was immediately in the rear of the musical organization. The Grafton drum and bugle corps of the Legion followed and this organization was awarded second honors by the judges.

Gold Star Mother In Parade

A feature of the parade was the very beautifully decorated float of the Legion auxiliary and in this rode Mrs. Wm. Kildow, gold star mother for whose son, Procter Kildow, killed at Chauteau Thierry in the early days of the war, the post was named.

Mrs. Kildow has recently recovered from a fracture of her hip, which she suffered on shipboard about a year ago when she was returning from a visit to the grave of her son in France, the accident occurring when the vessel was but a day or two outside New York harbor.

The float of the local Legion post depicting a machine gun nest on the battlefield was next in line. Two machine guns, one a French type and the other American, were operated by ex-service men in uniform.

Potomac Volunteer fire department, Keyser, W. Va., with a well organized drill team performed as its members executed a number of movements on the march.

Oakland's Civic Club float, representing Washington spring and the newly acquired park in the old Oakland Hotel grounds, was next in line and this was also favorably commented upon by large groups of people.

Meyersdale drum and bugle corps, winner of first honors in the parade, followed the Civic Club float, which was in turn followed by a health float, depicting a pre-school clinic, and a float prepared by A. R. Martin Furniture Company. Both these floats were well arranged and added beauty and attractiveness to the affair.

Piedmont drum and bugle corps, a newly organized musical company of men, wearing blue coats and white trousers, received applause on their appearance and ability as musicians.

The Oakland Rotary Club with a float was next in line and this was followed by Proctor Kildow Post drum and bugle corps.

The Oakland Volunteer fire department with trucks and equipment, followed by decorated automobiles and later by the boys drum and bugle corps of Oakland completed the parade disbanded on Third street near the celebration grounds.

Probably the second feature of the parade was two musical organizations of Oakland which recently acquired new uniforms—Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band and the Legion drum and bugle corps. Both organizations made a splendid showing and received much applause and favorable comment upon their appearance.

The crowd at the grounds following the parade on the 4th was enormous, but was well taken care of and no accidents of a serious nature were reported during the two days, but this fortunate circumstance was due to the good horsemanship of one of the marshals of the parade, Mr. W. H. Hinebaugh, who narrowly escaped serious injury when some thoughtless person exploded a giant torpedo immediately beneath his horse in the most congested portion of the town. The animal reared straight up and it was only the rider's nerve and good management of his mount that he prevented it from bolting through the crowd of men, women and children, which is another argument in favor of prohibiting the sale and firing of explosives within the limits of the town which fact will likely be brought to the attention of the City Council at an early meeting of that body.

Lieut. N. I. Fooks, 1st Tank Regiment, U. S. Army, and William A. Thorn, Midshipman 1st class, were the judges of the drum and bugle corps in the line of parade.

Mrs. Howard Reinhardt, Oakland, awarded the $100 in the cash contest. contest.

FOURTH MAN IN QUARTET OF ROBBERS IS ARRESTED

Are Wanted In Allegany County for Offences Committed There

"Bill" Brady, Vindex, was the fourth man to be added to a list of three others, who were apprehended during the past week and held in the Oakland jail on charges of having burglarized stores at Loch Lynn, Deer Park, and Steyer.

George L. Beeman, near Frostburg, Dennis Long and Branson Brady, of Deer Park, were taken into custody on Sunday and Monday of last week, while Bill Brady was arrested Thursday evening, and shortly after joining his companions in the Oakland jail the quartet was taken to Cumberland and placed in the Allegany county jail where they were wanted for alleged robberies in Frostburg and Mt. Savage.

The four men will undoubtedly be returned to Oakland to answer to the Court at the September term.

Eleven Pre-School Clinics Held in County

With one hundred twenty-seven children examined in 11 pre-school clinics conducted throughout the county during the past two weeks, Mrs. J. F. Fahey, R. N., county health nurse, stated that the general health habits and conditions among the children had improved at least 70 percent during the past eight years.

In the entire number examined by county and state physicians in the clinics, only two children who expected to enter school this coming year will be prevented from doing so on account of being physically unfit. In these two cases as well as a number of other cases where children were found to be under weight, recommendations were made by the physician in charge of that particular clinic, and instructions were given for the care of the child.

The clinics were conducted by Drs. N. I. Broadwater and H. W. McComas, Oakland; Dr. N. R. Davis, Grantsville, and Dr. Jos. P. Franklin, deputy health officer, Cumberland.

Alleged "Shiner" Gives Self Up

Nearly two weeks after Prohibition Officers Harold Hall and William R. Harvey, and Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear and Charles Piper, special officer, had raided his home and found four and one-half gallons of liquor and a still on his farm in operation, William H. Lower, near Bayard, came into Oakland on Monday and gave himself up to the sheriff.

Lower was seen running from the still by the officers when they made their approach, it was said, but the officers were unable to apprehend him at that time, and it was not until Monday when he gave himself up that any of the officers were able to locate him.

He was held under bond for his appearance before the Grand Jury at the September term of Court.

LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS MAY JOIN IN FAIR PROGRAM

Mr. Speicher is Certain of Success if Plans Can be Made With Local Fraternities

MANAGER IS ENTHUSIASTIC

With a determination to lay plans for a successful Agricultural Fair for 1931, Henry M. Speicher, manager of the association, was in Oakland yesterday for the purpose of working out plans whereby the Annual Knights of Pythias picnic, held for many years on Labor Day, would be postponed this year to September 17, when on the third day of the fair the Knights would be in charge of the program as well as the grounds, and would stage their annual affair at that time.

In connection with the program for the Fair, Mr. Speicher pointed out that it was his desire to make the 1931 attractions the greatest success financially and socially of any held in Garrett county, and continuing he stated that if an agreement could be reached with the local Lodge of Knights of Pythias, wherein they would agree to hold their annual celebration on a regular fair day, he felt positive that everyone concerned would be materially benefitted.

Mr. Speicher has already had some discussion with Neil Fraley, manager of Proctor Kildow Post American Legion Drum and Bugle corps concerning a Legion Day at the fair, which is expected to bring at least fifteen drum and bugle corps to Oakland on the last day of the agricultural exhibition. However, detailed arrangements for the Legion Day hinges on the decision made by the K. of P.'s and the Legion, it was stated.

It is the opinion of Mr. Speicher, that providing a program is worked out by the three organizations in connection with the 1931 Fair, and using the second day of the entertainment as School Day, the largest and greatest Fair in the history of the Association will be brought to a close on the night of September 18, when the Knights of Pythias would award their usual prize and the association would pay their premiums.

Nothing definite can be arranged until tomorrow night, when at a regular meeting of the Knights of Pythias, the proposition made by Mr. Speicher will be taken up for discussion, it was stated this morning.

Pointing out that Garrett county is expected to have one of the largest crops raised on the mountain top for a number of years, the manager was enthusiastic in his remarks concerning the promised success of the 1931 Fair.

Friendsville Youth Injured In the Act of Diving From Bridge

Paul Kesner, 16 year-old youth of Friendsville, was seriously injured at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon when in the act of diving from a bridge into the Youghiogheny River at Friendsville, lost his footing and in doing so he struck with his chest a steel projection on the bridge as he plunged downward. Other bathers pulled the injured boy from the water and he was immediately sent to Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, where he is under the care of Drs. Zimmerman and Gracie. His condition remains quite critical.

BODY FOUND IN THE YOUGH IDENTIFIED AS OAKLANDER

Disappearance From Home of Franklin Griffith Leads Son to Drag River for Shotgun

LAST SEEN HERE JUNE 21

The finding of his shotgun, which he was known to have taken with him when he left home more than two weeks ago, was responsible for the identification of the body which was found in Little Yough River last week as that of Frank Griffith, aged 68, of near Oakland.

The body, in a badly decomposed state, was found on Monday afternoon, June 29, by several boys who were swimming at what is known as the "pen-stock" swimming hole east of Oakland near the Baltimore and Ohio railway tracks. Venturing a little distance up stream from the swimming hole several members of the party discovered the body and immediately notified the State's officers. As stated in last Thursday's issue of The Republican a coroner's jury was summoned and the jury after viewing the body, which was so badly decomposed that identification could not be established, rendered a verdict to the effect that death was due to the infliction of a blow on the head of the man by some manner to the jury then unknown. While is was the opinion of a number of the members of the jury that the man had been struck by a train and his body hurled into the river, yet State's Attorney Dawson and Sheriff W. H. Haenftling were of the opinion that the man had come to his death as the result of a shotgun charge fired at close range.

Last Seen Sunday Night, June 21

Mr Griffith was last seen alive on Sunday night, June 21, by J. W. McCue, at whose residence on Oak street Mr. Griffith had spent the entire day, leaving the McCue home at about 8:30 o'clock that evening. According to Mr. McCue, Mr. Griffith had been in the habit of visiting him every Sunday, arriving at his home usually on Sunday morning and remaining all day, and while at the time of his last visit Mr. McCue stated, he noticed no particular difference in his humor or manner as on other occasions, yet since the finding of the body he realizes that he was more or less melancholy on that occasion.

The disappearance of Mr. Griffith from his home became alarming to his family a week ago, but search had not been made in a general way until Saturday when his son Joy Griffith went to the river where the body of the then unidentified man had been found, and after searching the banks of the stream for the gun his father was known to have had, and meeting with no success, he returned to the spot on Sunday in company with several young men and after dragging the river bed with hooks for a short time the firearm was found on the river's bottom near the spot where the body had been discovered nearly a week before.

Mr. Griffith is survived by the following sons and daughters, his wife having died several years ago: Joy C. Griffith, former deputy sheriff of Garrett county; Mrs. Charles Reckard and Mrs. Porter DeWitt, all of Oakland; Mrs. W. J. Cole, Elmira, N. Y.; Webster Griffith, Morgantown, W. Va.; Cletis Griffith, Cleveland, O., and Ralph Griffith, Jersey City, N. J.

The body of the dead man, which had been interred in the county lot at the Oakland cemetery, will be moved to the family lot in the same burying ground in a few days.

Legion Elects Delegates to State Convention

Commander Alex, Hesen, Stanley Stahl, adjutant; E. P. Kahl, service officer, and F. D. Bittle were elected as delegates to the State convention, American Legion Department of Maryland, to be held in Frostburg on August 20, 21, and 22.

The cabins are being erected on Lots Nos. 10 and 4, on Sunset Terrace, which belong to Mr. H. R. Hernley, of Scottdale, Pa., and Mrs. Flora S. Black, of Somerset, Pa., respctively. R. C. McComas completed his cabin during the past week, and it is said to be very attractive and comfortable.

Baltimore Sun Auto Wrecks at Deer Park

The Boss Editor, as Scoop would call him, went to Deer Park early Saturday morning to bring the Fourth of July edition of the Baltimore Sun to Oakland, following an accident experienced by the field agent of the Sun who was delivering the papers in this section of the State.

The Boss Editor accompanied by Harry Stemple, arrived in Deer Park shortly after a telephone call came from the driver of the automobile announcing that he had run down a cow on the road and had doubled up the radiator on his machine. The cow was the property of Mr. N. E. McNemar, a farmer living near Deep Creek, and it was instantly killed.

The Automobile had left Baltimore late Friday evening with papers for Frederick, Hagerstown, Cumberland, and Oakland, and the driver had expected to return to Baltimore by noon Saturday.

Annual Meeting of Tableland Association May Be Held at Brookside

The Allegheny Tableland Association was organized at Addison, Pa., on October 15, 1930, and according to Bushrod Grimes, secretary of the Association, there is now a movement in progress, sponsored by a number of interested parties, to hold the first annual meeting of the organization at Brookside, West Va., eleven miles southwest of Oakland, on Route 50. Few places, if any, offer better advantages for the meeting, it is said, and the spot would prove a popular one for such an occasion.

MAY BUILD SWIMMING POOL ON CITY PROPERTY

Matter To Be Discussed Before Council At An Adjourned Session Tomorrow Evening

STREETS TO BE SURFACED

What may terminate in the conversion of the city's old water works site into a place for the enjoyment of the citizens and guests of Oakland, was discussed at length in the city hall Monday night at a regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council.

The discussion was the outgrowth of recent activities by several prominent business and professional men of Oakland regarding the installation of a public swimming pool and play ground, and according to Mayor G. C. Stemple the city officials will offer the use of the ground, located on north Third street, above the Houck garage, and will furnish the water for the pool providing these citizens work out a plan whereby the building of the pool and otherwise beautifying the property can be done without expense to the government.

At an adjourned meeting of the Council to be held tomorrow evening it is understood those interested citizens will be prepared to present their plans for adoption.

Second Annual Goodwill Tour

Grantsville will be the first of the incorporated towns of Garrett county to be visited on a good will tour which will be made by the Mayor and Council this year, following a most successful tour of the incorporated towns of the county last year. The date set for the visit at Grantsville is Wednesday, July 15. All incorporated towns will be visited before the tour ends sometime in August.

Monthly Bills are Paid

Approximately $1,900 was used by the Mayor and Council to pay the regular monthly bills, after the same had been gone over carefully. This amount includes the bills for labor which were paid to the town employes on July 3, giving them some cash for the two-day celebration held here last week.

Streets to be Hardsurfaced

A square of Pennington street, between Wilson and Proctor, and two squares on Water street, between First and Third streets were ordered to be hardsurfaced by the town fathers at the Monday night meeting, and construction will begin immediately.

Stone and Pipe Bids are Opened

Bids were opened and read for the furnishing of stone for the 1931 street building program in the city, and Blaine Giessman being the low bidder was awarded the contract.

Bids submitted by a number of firms for pipe to be used in conditioning No. 4 well were read and A. D. Naylor and company, low bidders, were awarded the contract. No. 4 well is located on the city water farm, and has been a flowing well ever since it was drilled last summer, during the drought. The well is being put in condition for emergency purposes. However it was stated that the water supply from the other wells is abundant, and there is no immediate need of more water.

A report from Dr. Franklin, deputy health officer, regarding the city water, was read which stated that the supply was pure.

Taken to State Hospital for Treatment

Miss Etta Aronhalt, near Gormania, on the Garrett county side of the State line, was accompanied to the Springfield State hospital at Sykesville, Monday by Sheriff W. H. Haenftling, where the woman will be confined for treatment of a mental disorder.

Colored Man Slightly Injured in Fall at Jail

W. H. Jones, colored, and said to be a barber at Frostburg and Cumberland, fell in the Oakland jail Monday night, striking his head on the concrete floor.

It is said that Jones came to the jail Monday evening and asked permission to spend the night, and while talking in the corridor to several of the inmates, he, without warning, collapsed on the floor. He later stated that he had been afflicted with epilepsy but that he had had little trouble for a year or more.

THE PREACHING OF THE APOSTLES

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3:11-4:31.
GOLDEN TEXT—And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Preaches a Sermon.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Preaching in Jerusalem.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Preachers.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Apostolic Preaching.

I. Peter Preaching Before the Multitude (Acts 3:11-26).

1. The audience secured (v. 11). In appreciation of his healing the cured cripple took hold of Peter and John, calling attention to these men as his healers.

2. Disclaimed miracle-working power (v. 12). Though the miraculous healing of the cripple focused attention upon Peter and John, Peter immediately turned attention from himself to Christ.

3. Proclaimed Jesus as the Messiah vv. 13-18). Pointing to the healed man, Peter declared that it was through faith in Jesus that this man was given "perfect soundness." He declared that the very one whom they had "delivered up," "denied in the presence of Pilate," "and killed," God had raised from the dead.

4. A call to repentance (vv. 19-21). Despite their aggravated crime in murdering the "Just and Holy One," Peter called upon them to repent, assuring them that their sins would be blotted out and that they would enjoy refreshing seasons.

5. Appeal to the Scriptures (vv. 22-26). The warnings and promises are based upon the words of Moses and the prophets.

II. Peter Preaching to the Sanhedrin (Acts 4:1-21).

1. Peter and John arrested (vv. 1-4). The healing of the lame man caused such a stir that the people flocked to see the man. Advantage was taken of this occasion to preach Jesus Christ to them. As a result of this preaching, five thousand believed. Such a following caused great alarm. The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their ministerial functions. The Sadducees were angered to be told that the One whom they crucified had arisen from the dead and would appear again.

2. Peter and John on trial (vv. 5-12). This trial was before the Sanhedrin, the supreme court of the nation.

a. The inquiry (vv. 5-7). They asked, "By what power and what name have ye done this?" This inquiry admitted the reality of the miracle.

b. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). Filled with the Holy Spirit, he replied to their question, showing them that he and John were not being tried as evildoers but for doing good to the needy man. He boldly declared that it was by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, and God had raised from the dead, that this man stood before them whole. He further declared that there was no salvation save in the name of Jesus Christ.

3. The impression upon the Sanhedrin (vv. 13-22).

a. They marveled (v. 13). They saw that the behavior and words of Peter were as unusual as the miracle. They were made to feel that instead of sitting as judges they themselves were on trial.

b. They took knowledge that the apostles had been with Jesus (v. 13).

c. Commanded not to speak in Christ's name (v. 18). Not being able to deny the miracle or gainsay the accusation which Peter brought against them, they attempted to intimidate him.

d. The reply of Peter and John (vv. 19, 20). They openly defied the Sanhedrin and expressed determination to disobey their command. Thus they repudiated the authority of the rulers of Israel and set the Church in a place of independence from the Jewish state.

e. Their release (v. 21). Having further threatened them, they let them go.

III. The Church at Prayer (Acts 4:23-31).

As soon as Peter and John were set free they hastened to their fellow disciples and rehearsed their experience. They turned to the Holy Scriptures for comfort and strength. They praised God for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak his Word and that their testimony might be confirmed by signs. Their prayers were answered by the shaking of the place where they were assembled, and they were filled with the Holy Spirit.

Mercy

We had mercy shown us at the beginning of our Christian course. We have had mercy shown us today, and shall need mercy, if Jesus tarry, in our dying hour. Well, the way to enjoy it is to be merciful, to deal in grace with others.—W. Lincoln.

FRENCH-INDIAN BATTLE GROUND TO BE MADE PARK

Fort Necessity Park Bill Signed By Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania on June 25th.

47 MILES FROM OAKLAND

George Washington's first battle, the encounter with the French and Indians at Fort Necessity on July 3, 1754, is to be commemorated through action by the Federal Government, the State of Pennsylvania and private subscription.

Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, signed a bill Thursday, June 25, appropriating $25,000 for the purchase of the site of Fort Necessity and the establishment there of a State park. The site includes 234 acres in Fayette county, Pa., between the Maryland-Pensylvania line and Uniontown, Pa. The location is 47 miles from Oakland over Routes 37 and 40. The U. S. Congress has appropriated $25,000 to erect a suitable monument, and a campaign for $150,000 in private subscriptions is being conducted by Rev. Dr. William Blake Hindman, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Uniontown, Pa.

Headquarters in Cumberland

It was from Fort Cumberland in Cumberland, that Washington started his march westward resulting in the battle at Fort Necessity, and it was to Cumberland that the future commander-in-chief of the Continental Army retreated when the fortunes of war went against him in his first battle.

In 1753 a force of 8,000 French regulars had been sent to this country to garrison the chain of forts built and being built to connect the French possessions in Louisiana with those in Canada. One chain of these forts extended along the Allegheny River northward.

Washington was sent by Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia on a mission to the French commander at Fort Le-Boeuf to ascertain the intention of the French with respect to encroaching upon territory claimed by the British. Following his return from this mission, which carried him past the future site of Fort Necessity and across the Youghiogheny River at Connellsville, Captain William Trent was dispatched with a force to seize and fortify the forks of the Ohio River at Pittsburgh. Taking part of his men he went on a search of the country round about and left Ensign Ward to build the fort. On the day he began operations the French appeared in force and Ward was obliged to retire in the direction whence he came, up the Monongahela to the mouth of Redstone creek, thence by Gist's plantation and over the mountains, following the Nemacolin trail.

Replaced Colonel Fry

At Will's Creek, now Cumberland, he was met by Colonel Fry's troops which had been sent to drive the French out of the disputed territory. Colonel Fry being injured by a fall from a horse the command devolved upon Major Washington, then but 22 years of age. He marched through the forests west from Cumberland, widening the trail into a road to permit passage of cannon and supply wagons. At the Great Meadows he was met by Half King, the friendly Indian chief who warned him of the presence of French in the near vicinity.

Taking a small force of Indians and Virginia militia Washington, in personal command, made a night march in the direction indicated by the Indian guides. At the break of day they encountered the French who fired on the approaching force. A skirmish ensued during which several of the French were killed, among them their commander, Jumonville, who received a deathblow from Half King's tomahawk. The remainder of the French, 21 in number, surrendered, and were conducted back to Cumberland by a detail from Washington's force.

Several days elapsed when it was suggested by Christopher Gist that a better defense against the French could be provided on his plantation. Washington accordingly moved his force forward, spent some time in the construction of a defense at Gist's and penetrated some distance toward the mouth of Redstone creek, by which the French were presumed to be approaching.

Battle On July Third

Upon receiving definite information that the French were on their way, Washington called a council of war and it was decided to return to Great Meadows. Construction of Fort Necessity was completed, and on the morning of July 3, 1754, the French approached for an attack. They were about 600 yards distant when the first volley was discharged. Washington had informed his men outside the fort and had instructed them to reserve their fire until they could "see something to shoot at." The French approached closed and continued a galling fire through the greater part of the day, the Colonial forces following Washington's instructions as to time of firing.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the French asked for a parley, which was refused by Washington, having determined to carry the action to a finish. After a third request for a parley was received, Washington sent officers to the French commander, but refused to permit any of the enemy to enter his fortification, fearing they would learn the sad plight he was in with 30 men killed, 70 wounded, 100 sick and provisions low.

Retired to Cumberland

After the parley was concluded articles were drawn up by which each party was to retire from the field, "they to the Monongahela, we to Will's Creek."

To Washington this was understood as an "agreement to retire," which he was permitted to do with colors flying, his men retaining their arms and with other honors of war.

"Washington was much criticised in the north for the misunderstanding, due to the bungling of his interpreter, Van Braam, who could speak neither French nor English," as to the admission that he had murdered Jumonville, whom the French claimed was approaching on a peaceful errand. Washington controverted this claim by pointing out that the French had been in the vicinity for several days, had concealed their whereabouts and were traveling as an armed party.

"The battle of Great Meadows was Washington's first battle, but it was a real engagement. His force consisted of 293 men, the French had practically three times as many. The Colonial casualties were 100, the French estimated at 300, and were required to spend the night in burial of their dead. The relative losses show the superior markmanship and intrepidity of the Colonials."

Birth of the United States

"The movement terminating in the Great Meadows campaign was the first effort on the part of the colonies toward unity of action. North Carolina troops had joined with Virginians in forming the expeditionary force; South Carolina and Maryland had troops enroute to join the army as Washington began his retreat to Will's Creek. The battle was the first of the French and Indian War and started the Seven Years' War in Europe. It affected three continents and set the stream of history in a new course. It won the territory west of the Alleghanies from the French and the taxes imposed on the Colonies by England to pay for this war led to the American War for Independence. Historians have pointed to the battle of Great Meadows as the 'first blow for American Independence,' and have called the battle site 'The Fountain Head of American Independence.'"

GLASSES HELP NEUTRALIZE MANY OPTICAL DEFECTS

Normal Eye Is Rare Among Human Beings, Optometrist Says

By Dr. J. Fred Andreae,

The normal eye is one without optical defect and thus can see without strain except when age or illness weakens it so that optical aid for reading and other close work is required. But there is no such thing as a normal eye, at least, they are as rare as the proverbial "hen's tooth."

Many eyes have small defects which when the owner has sufficient reserve strength, represent so little strain that glasses are of little or no benefit. Other eyes have defects so great as to cause much strain upon the nervous strength of the individual because it is the habit of nature, in an effort to bring about clear vision, to strain the eyes to overcome the defect.

The service which glasses perform is merely to neutralize the optical defect of the eye by making up the deficiency with lenses worn before the eye. Thus, with the correcting lenses, the eyes are enabled to work without strain. In many instances this relief builds up the strength of the individual so that glasses may later be dispensed with. Especially is this true of young people who have not yet reached maturity.

Thus it will be seen that glasses serve to conserve the nerve energy of the individual and to promote the strength and welfare of the eyes. They do not "weaken" the eyes and the discomfort felt when glasses are laid aside is due to the fact that without them the eyestrain promptly starts the fatigue symptoms for which the glasses were originally obtained.

"ALL THESE HELPERS FOR Only $4.56 A MONTH"

MY electric servants are absolutely indispensable. Washer, iron, sweeper, refrigerator, ironer, fan . . . I just couldn't keep house without them! And we all enjoy cozy little meals prepared at the table with our electric percolator, toaster and waffle iron.

In addition, we have two electric clocks to assure us accurate time. And we like an abundance of well-shaded electric light at all times.

Yet, as much as we use electricity, it costs us only $4.56 for a typical month. That is for about 93 kilowatt hours of current.—Mrs. B. B. N. (a Monongahela customer—Parkersburg.)

In addition to these electrical conveniences, Mrs. B. B. N. could enjoy also that of electric cooking by using approximately 130 more kilowatt hours. Since she is using 93 kilowatt hours, the additional 130 would cost her $3.00. In 1924, this total of 223 kilowatt hours (which now cost $7.56) would have cost her $13.77.

It is our policy not only to decrease the cost of current, step by step, with increased consumption, but to study constantly how to improve our service.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!★

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden—A story we have all heard since childhood—Consider your Adam's Apple—the possession of each one of us, man or woman—your voice box—containing your vocal chords—your larynx—Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants—Reach for a LUCKY instead—Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" Process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple."

SAVING THE EYES AT GOLF

By Dr. J. Fred Andreae

Golfers will be pleased to learn another good feature about the game, and that is that while on the course they are probably using their eyes as nearly as possible in the manner in which nature intended them to be used. Man was originally an out-of-doors creature with eyes adapted to the verdure of nature and to long-distance seeing. The demands of modern life have progressed much more rapidly than the evolution of the eyes and thus, while golf may prove a recreation for the body, it is a splendid rest for tired eyes as well.

Care must be exercised that the eyes are properly shaded with a broad rim hat or visor. Man no longer grows bushy eye-brows of his out-of-doors ancestors; generations of indoor life have deprived him of these natural protections. A man should no more go on the course bare-headed than he would wear his dress suit when greasing up the family car.

Music Festival Plans Nearing Completion

Plans for the regional music festival at Somerset, Pa., which is being sponsored by the Allegheny Tableland Association, are going forward rapidly. The site selected for this event could not be improved upon, it is said, and the committee in charge will lack nothing in the way of natural advantages to assure success.

Mr. Nat T. Frame, Director of the West Virginia Extension Service, with Miss Huff, who will direct the festival, visited the spot with a committee the past week and pronounced it perfect. It is situated just beyond the Duppstadt Airport in Somerset where the flat land pitches steeply for several rods toward another flat spot, backed by a forest which provides a beautiful background or setting, as well as a sounding board for the stage.

The date for the music festival is tentatively scheduled for the last of August or the first part of September, and will probably be for this year a morning and evening affair. The completed plans will be published as soon as ready, so that groups from every part of the tableland region will understand what to do and how to prepare to be represented at this unusual and popular song fest which is expected to attract many people to Somerset for that day.

TWO BUSINESS HOUSES TO OCCUPY NEW QUARTERS

G. A. Fraley & Son Have Moved, and Coffman-Fisher will Move July 24

Moving across the street, the G. A. Fraley & Son merchandising establishment, has opened what is known as Fraley's Market, and while the new store room is being used now it will be several days before the stock is completely arranged and the store operating in an efficient manner.

L. M. Fraley manager of the market states that the new location is better adapted for his business, and that within a few days he will be able to care for his customers with more efficient service and with a line of high grade merchandise including fresh and cured meats, green and staple groceries, etc.

By an advertisement appearing in this issue of The Republican, a large stock of merchandise will be disposed of at prices below cost.

After extensive alterations are made, which will require about two weeks more time, the Coffman-Fisher company will move their stock of goods from the Miller building into the store rooms vacated by the G. A. Fraley & Son company, in the Offutt building. According to I. R. Rudy, manager of the local store, a larger stock of merchandise will be carried in the new location and better service will be possible for the buying public.

Several dressing rooms are being equipped, and a comfortable corner is being arranged for the convenience of the public, in which a writing desk, stationery, etc., will always be on hand. The manager expects to move the present stock of goods into the new rooms before July 24, which has been set as the opening day.

OAKLAND MAN ACQUITTED IN ELKINS FEDERAL COURT

An Unusual Case Tried On Tuesday Reveals Methods Used by Prohibition Agents

The second acquittal in two terms of federal court at Elkins in a liquor case was returned by a jury Tuesday after deliberating for 15 minutes the transportation charge against Howard E. "Peg" Shahan, of Oakland.

The government alleged that Shahan had been supplying liquor for many bootleggers in Fairmont and Grafton, and its agents had spent much time, it is said, in attempting to get evidence against him.

The trial also marked the introduction in federal court of the first government informer to be disclosed during the presentation of evidence. "Red" Torrant, a Fairmont negro, was named as the man who arranged with Shahan for the delivery of liquor to two undercover agents, L. M. Swick and Leroy Gates, for whom Torrant was said in testimony to have been working.

Marked Money Used

Another unusual angle of the case was the admission by federal witnesses that $57.50 in marked money given to the informer to pay Shahan for a 10-gallon keg of moonshine, was taken by Dr. William A. Welton at Fairmont Hospital No. 3 to pay for two weeks and two days of treatment given the negro when he was hurt in an automobile wreck. The government is still without the money.

Testimony introduced by the government was that Torrant went to a garage in Oakland where Shahan worked, and under the guise of buying a used automobile, made Shahan's acquaintance. Later Torrant and Swick visited Shahan, and after spending an evening unsuccessfully trying to obtain liquor, returned to Fairmont.

A telephone call to Oakland, answered presumably by Shahan, was made by the agents. They were informed, they said, that Shahan would deliver the liquor in Fairmont. Torrant went to Oakland to accompany Shahan on the trip, and used the car he had purchased there.

Car Was Wrecked

Near Watson, where Swick, Gates and others were lying in wait for the car, driven by the informant, the machine wrecked. The mishap occurred some distance from where the officers were in hiding. Shahan hailed a passing car and put the negro, severely injured, in it. When the car approached the officers, they recognized the negro but learned from him that Shahan was at the scene of the wreck.

Equipped with a flood light and accompanied by other officers, the raiders scarched the neighborhood of the wreck for the keg of liquor, but testified they did not find it. Nor was it ever found, evidence disclosed.

Shahan and witnesses testifying for him, denied that there was any liquor in the car or that he had made arrangements to sell any moonshine in Fairmont.

Russell L. Furbee, assistant district attorney, in summing up the unusual case, asked the jury whether it would believe the testimony of "officers sworn to do their duty and with several years good record behind them" or the testimony of the defendant and his witnesses. Fifteen minutes later the question was answered.

GRANTSVILLE NOW HAS SUPPLY OF NATURAL GAS

Long Looked For Convenience Turned Into Mains Tuesday

Grantsville-on-the-Pike (Route 40), had added another convenience to its civic attractions within the past week, the latest innovation being the introduction of a long-looked for convenience enjoyed by comparatively few Maryland towns of the size of Grantsville—natural gas.

This convenience, which is only appreciated by the housewife and those engaged in various trades where a heat unit is utilized, was turned into the town mains on Tuesday by the Manufacturers' Heat and Light Company, which had been engaged for the past three weeks in laying its pipe lines from the Pennsylvania State line, a few miles north of Grantsville, to the town where mains are installed and those who are prepared to use the product are already enjoying the conveniences it affords. Others who have not yet completed the necessary piping from the street lines to their homes and places of business are hurrying the work forward as fast as possible.

With an electric service day and night, the early installation of a water and sewerage system in the town, Grantsville will soon become ultra-modern and will rival any town in the country for its beauty, the conveniences afforded and the hospitality of its residents.

Damages in the Sum of $11,600 Awarded Auto Accident Victim

Damages in the sum of $11,600 have recently been awarded Miss Gertrude I. Conrad in the Circuit Court of Kanawha county, W. Va., for the injuries sustained by her in an automobile accident at Red House, Garrett county, early last November.

Miss Conrad and Alva Williams, of Ohio, were driving to Oakland to be married when their automobile collided with a truck owned by the Mathews Storage Company of Charleston, W. Va., at a point on Route 50 immediately west of Red House. Williams was instantly killed and Miss Conrad so badly hurt that for a long time it was thought she would not recover.

Suit was instituted against the storage company by U. Grant Williams, brother and administrator of the deceased man, for himself in his capacity of administrator, as well as for Miss Conrad, and on May 26 Myron B. Hymes, of Buckhannon, and Judge J. M. Woods and Thomas Jackson, of Charleston, attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant company, came to Oakland to take the depositions of Oakland and Garrett county people who were familiar with some of the details of the accident.

The depositions were taken before Frederick A. Thayer, Jr., notary public, and Misses Coral E. McRobie and Nelle Nethkin, and were returned to the Circuit Court at Charleston where the case was tried in June, resulting in a verdict as above stated for Miss Conrad, and a compromise verdict of $5,000 for the administrator of the deceased.

According to attorneys for the plaintiffs this is one of the largest awards of damages made in Kanawha county for several years past.

Wool Stolen From Barn of Accident Farmer

When Lewis Beitzel, farmer, residing on Bear Creek, four miles east of Accident, Garrett county, went to his barn a few days ago for the purpose of loading his season's clip of wool for market he found that it had mysteriously disappeared.

Mr. Beitzell stated that he had stored in the barn fleeces from his sheep that weighed approximately two hundred pounds and its disappearance sometime between dark and daylight a few morning ago is laid at the door of a gang of thieves that have been operating in the northern section of the county for several months.

An effort is being made by the State officers to locate and apprehend the parties responsible for the loss sustained by Mr. Beitzell. —

CHAPTER XXX

Frequent German raids and renewed activity all along the front by March 1, 1918, indicated the great German offensive might start at any time. The French general staff thought the allies would be able to hold without serious difficulty until we could help, but it was doubtful enough to cause grave apprehension.

It was depressing to think that ten months had elapsed since our entry into the war and that we were just barely ready with one division of 25,000 men.

My diary shows the following notations:

Chaumont, Wednesday, March 6, 1918.—Heavy German raid repulsed by First division Friday morning. The enemy also raided the Twenty-sixth division lines and were driven off.

Went to Ligny-en-Barrios Sunday to meet M. Clemenceau, who came to congratulate the First division on success repulsing raid. Met General Debeney, who was enthusiastic over conduct of our men. Spent the night at First division headquarters.

Motored to Langres with Harbord Monday to speak at opening of second session of general staff college. Germans made raid on Forty-second division that morning.

Upon conclusion of this inspection of the First division I considered it ready to take the offensive at any time. It had been eight months in France, with varied experiences in training, had occupied an independent position in the St. Mihiel sector and had made several successful trench raids. Generals Duncan and Buck had their infantry brigades in efficient shape and Summerall had carried the training of the artillery brigade to a high degree.

Finds Wounded Cheerful.

The front occupied by the One Hundred Sixty-eighth regiment, near Badonviliers, had been under a severe artillery attack on the fourth and a trench mortar platoon had been almost completely destroyed. The French army commander congratulated General Menohier on the way in which our troops repulsed this raid. After an inspection of the different regiments of the division and a visit to the scene of this action, I went to the hospital to see the wounded.

They were all very cheerful, especially a young officer, Lieut. A. W. Terrel, Fifty-first artillery regiment, who had lost a leg. He said that he wanted to stay through to the end of the war, and hoped he could find something to do as a clerk. All these first contacts with the enemy were relatively small affairs, of course, but they furnished many examples of what we could expect of the American soldier:

My diary notes this:

Paris, Sunday, March 10, 1918.—Spent Thursday morning with Kernan, Langfitt and Atterbury and made adjustments in port and railway construction and management. Visited Camp de Mailly, where seacoast artillery is having splendid training under General Coe.

On Friday visited Edwards' Twenty-sixth division serving on Chemin des Dames under General Maud'huy, the French corps commander. Arrived in Paris late at night during airplane attack. Branch of judge advocate general's office established at my headquarters.

Upon Colonel Bradley's report of thirty-day medical supplies on hand, sent urgent cable requesting immediate shipments. Cabled disapproval of suggestion by Mr. Paderewski for organization of division of men with Polish antecedents. Secretary of War Baker landed at Brest today.

French Train U. S. Cooks.

Major General Maud'huy spoke with considerable enthusiasm of the men and of the officers of the Twenty-sixth division, below regimental commanders, and especially praised their conduct of trench raids. He complimented General Traub, one of the brigade commanders, but was of the opinion that the higher officers, generally, needed more experience to make them efficient. American troops that served with General Maud'huy held him in high esteem. He was scrupulous regarding their instruction, to which he gave special attention.

He was very solicitous of the welfare of our troops, even going so far as to interest himself in the preparation of their food by detailing French cooks to teach ours the art. When I expressed my appreciation of his action, he said: "You know, we are a nation of cooks and we delight in preparing good things to eat." After their instruction the cooks in these units did better, thanks to the initiative of this fine old French general.

Many of the cooks of the old army became experts and the men in early days in the West fared better as a rule than our men in France, where the cooks lacked experience. Personal supervision by officers and the establishment of cooking schools brought improvement in due course. However, there is little doubt that much of the intestinal trouble in our divisions during the early part of their service abroad was caused by poorly cooked food.

Secretary Baker Arrives.

Secretary Baker arrived at Brest March 10, as my diary showed, and I met him and his party in Paris the next morning. The secretary's party consisted of Maj. Gen. W. M. Black, chief of engineers; Lieut. Col. M. L. Brett, Commander R. D. White of the navy, and Ralph Hayes, his secretary.

It was essential that the secretary receive every opportunity to inspect our whole layout, from the front areas to the services of supply, that he might become familiar with plans, observe the progress made toward their completion, and obtain first-hand information of our requirements, all of which he was especially anxious to do. Leaving Paris March 12 we inspected our most important ports, depots, hospitals, regulating stations, motor parks and schools, and returned March 17 to my headquarters at Chaumont.

The main air service school at Issoudun, which we visited, was a hive of activity, being one of the fifteen schools where early instruction in flying was given. General Foulois and Colonel Kilner went with us through the school, the shops and the Red Cross and "Y" buildings. I think the secretary was surprised to see here the really expert flying considered necessary to prepare aviators for their hazardous life at the front.

Moving Supplies to Troops.

At Gievres, about 125 miles directly south of Paris, on our main line of supply, running to the front, were 20,000 men employed under Col. Charles J. Symmonds, managing our largest interior depot.

To illustrate the celerity with which the system operated we need take but one example, which occurred when everything in the depot was in full swing.

At 8:15 one morning in August a telegram was received ordering exactly 4,596 tons of supplies, including 1,250,000 cans of tomatoes, 1,000,000 pounds of sugar, 000,000 cans of corned beef, 750,000 pounds of tinned hash and 150,000 pounds of dry beans. At 6:15 o'clock in the evening, or just ten hours later, this colossal requisition, which required 457 cars for transport, was loaded and on its way to the advance depot.

No other place gave such an impression of the tremendous task of supplying our armies and the perfection of organization necessary to do it efficiently.

The secretary got a bird's eye view of the general plan which would provide the supplies for an army of 2,000,000 and which, with additional construction, would be able to meet the demands of an army twice that size.

Back at Chaumont I received word that arrangements had been made for the shipment of six divisions for training with the British—the Seventy-seventh, Eighty-second, Twenty-eighth, Seventy-eighth, Eightieth and Thirtieth.

CHAPTER XXXI

March 21 the great German offensive began against the British armies between the Oise and the Scarpe, near the junction of the French and British lines, on a front about fifty miles in length, extending from near La Fere to Arras. Near the center of the attack was General Gough's Fifth army, with the Third army under General Byng on its left.

The artillery bombardment preceding the infantry advance was of short duration, but of great intensity, with excessive use of gas shells. Following a heavy barrage the German infantry, using the same tactical methods that had been so successful at Riga and Carporetto, delivered its blow. The weather favored the enemy as a heavy fog continued intermittently for three days, much to the disadvantage of the defense. The overwhelming force of sixty-four especially trained German divisions out of their one hundred ninety-two then on the western front compelled the British lines to yield. Although at the end of the first day the Fifth army had not entirely given away, its losses had reached several thousand, and there was no question that the Germans were making a serious attempt to separate the British and French armies.

British Pushed Back 37 Miles.

The last one of Gough's reserves was put in on the second day, yet he received no support to stop the widening gap in the British front until the following day, when one French infantry division and one French dismounted cavalry division arrived. On the 24th four others got into position. These divisions and others that came in the next two or three days were put into battle by General Fayolle without regard to the integrity of units or the order of their entry, some of them being very short of ammunition.

The British Fifth army was evidently overwhelmed from the start, yet no British reinforcements were sent to Gough until the 24th, and then only one division, no others arriving during the first week. By the fifth day the German forces had driven a salient into the British front some thirty-seven miles deep and were threatening the important railway center of Amiens, the capture of which would probably have made a complete breach between the French and British armies.

In the moment of greatest stress, when it seemed very doubtful whether the German advance could be stopped, General Petain sent the following order to his armies:

"The enemy has hurled himself upon us in a supreme effort.

"He wants to separate us from the English so as to open the way to Paris. Cost what it may, he must be stopped.

"Hold your ground! Stand firm! Our (American) comrades are arriving. All together you will throw yourselves upon the invader.

"The battle is on. Soldiers of the Marne, of the Yser and of Verdun, I call upon you. The fate of France hangs in the balance."

The reports from the front gave an extremely dark picture of disaster, and I felt we should do everything possible to render assistance. It was to offer General Petain such of our troops as could be used that I went to Compiegne March 25.

The general's customary confident and nonchalant attitude was entirely gone and he wore a very worried expression. I told him that for the moment I should waive the idea of forming the I corps and that any of our divisions that could be of service were at his disposal, but with the qualifying remark that of course we should look forward eventually to their assembly under their own commander.

March 24 it developed that the French divisions had received orders that if the enemy continued his drive in the direction of Amiens they were to fall back so as to cover Paris. Marshal Haig, fearing that this would result in separating the two armies, at once communicated the situation to his government. This brought about an important conference at Doullens March 26 between members of the British and French governments, in which it was decided that some authority should be designated to co-ordinate the action of the two armies, and General Foch was selected.

I was not present at the Doullens conference, but upon learning of its action it seemed essential that General Foch himself should know our desire to do what we could to strengthen the allies. The British loss was then estimated at not less than 150,000. I recall meeting Lord Northcliffe March 24 and found him almost unable to speak of it, so many of his friends had lost relatives. The depression among their people was probably worse than at any other period of the war.

Among the French there was much anxiety as to the safety of Paris and there was talk of the government having to move to Bordeaux again, as it had done in 1914. The allied lines had not been stabilized and although I had offered our troops to Petain it seemed to me that it might be well to make it emphatic that I was ready to put into battle everything we could muster. I had often thought of the possibility of having to do this, and I went to find out the situation and let General Foch know our attitude.

Gives Word to Foch.

As we entered General Foch's farmhouse headquarters near Clermont-sur-Oise, Clemenceau, Foch, Petain and Loucheur were intently studying a map spread out on the table. The situation was pointed out to me, showing that already the British had used thirty divisions and the French seventeen against the Germans' seventy-eight. It seemed to be the opinion that the British Fifth army was getting back on its feet and that the lines would hold for the time being.

I intimated that I had come to see General Foch and the others withdrew into the yard, leaving us alone. I told him that the Americans were ready and anxious to do their part in this crisis, that I was willing to send him any troops we had, and asked for suggestions as to how we might help. He was evidently very much touched and in his enthusiasm took me by the arm and without hesitation rushed me out across the lawn to where the others stood, and asked me to repeat what I had said to him.

They, of course, showed keen interest, especially M. Clemenceau, as I told them what I had said to General Foch. Colonel Boyd, my aid, was kind enough to say that, under the inspiration of the moment, my French was spoken with a fluency that I could not have mastered ten minutes before or after.

Pershing's Offer of Troops.

It appeared in the French papers the next morning, although I feel certain that it was written up in much better French than I actually used.

The English translation follows:

"I have come to tell you that the American people would consider it a great honor for our troops to be engaged in the present battle; I ask you for this in their name and my own.

"At this moment there are no other questions but of fighting.

"Infantry, artillery, aviation, all that we have are yours; use them as you wish. More will come, in numbers equal to requirements.

"I have come especially to tell you that the American people will be proud to take part in the greatest battle of history."

If the responsibility had been mine I should not have hesitated a moment to put into the battle any or all of our five divisions then in France. The First was the only one used for the time being, the others being placed in quiet sectors, each to relieve two French divisions. As our divisions were more than twice as large as theirs it amounted to almost immediate reinforcement of ten divisions.

At the time of the German attack a battalion of the American Sixth regiment of engineers was on duty behind the British Fifth army, engaged in railway construction and repairs. These troops were given arms and participated with the British forces in the defensive operations until after the lines were stabilized.

CHAPTER XXXII

Secretary of War Baker went to London to discuss with the British authorities the prospects for additional shipping and also the general subject of munitions. While there he sent me the following telegram March 25, 1918, embodying suggestions from the prime minister which showed the deep anxiety of the British:

"I have just had a long talk with the prime minister. He urges three proposals for your consideration, first, that our divisions in France be placed immediately in line to relieve French divisions for service elsewhere, quiet sectors being chosen for troops with least training.

"Second, that all available engineer troops be taken from lines of communication work and sent to aid of British engineers preparing positions back of present lines. It is urged that suspension of our work would be but temporary and that the work suggested is imperative.

"Third, that infantry be sent first of the entire six divisions to be transported by British in view of present acute needs of that army. No answer to the foregoing is necessary until I see you tomorrow when we can discuss the suggestions fully."

First Division Ordered Into Line.

My diary notes the following:

Chaumont, Friday, March 29, 1918.—Held conference with the secretary of war and General Bliss yesterday on joint recommendation of military representatives of the war council.

Left Paris this morning for Chaumont.

At Petain's request, the First division ordered to battle line, which Mr. Baker said people at home would enthusiastically approve.

Mr. Paul Cravath dined with us this evening, and speaking of unity, favored placing control in the hands of a committee composed of Marshal Haig, General Petain and myself.

Council Asks Change in Plans.

The situation had become so serious that the military representatives seemed to think it necessary to recommend that all previous plans for the shipment of American troops be disregarded and that nothing but infantry and machine gun units be shipped until otherwise directed by the supreme war council. This they did in the form of a joint (or unanimous) note, which was, of course, approved by the supreme war council.

I was very much surprised at the attitude of General Bliss, our military representative with the council, as without his consent the joint note could not have been submitted to the council.

When the joint note was presented to Secretary Baker I pointed out to him and General Bliss that the proposal, if approved by the President, would place the disposition of American units entirely in the hands of the supreme war council and take them quite out of our control, even for training, and would without doubt destroy all possibility of our forming an American army.

The secretary was as strongly opposed to any such outcome as I, and after some discussion he dictated his views in a cable to President Wilson explicitly recommending that the control of our forces should be retained by our commander in chief and that the note be approved only in that sense.

Reply From Wilson.

The message forwarding the joint note with Mr. Baker's comment was answered by a cable from Washington dated March 30, which stated:

"The President concurs in the joint note of the permanent military representatives of the supreme war council in the sense formulated in your No. 67 March 28, and wishes you to regard yourself authorized to decide questions of immediate co-operation or replacement."

It was thought that this statement, coming from the President, would check, at least for the time being, the demands of the allies that we provide units for building up their divisions, but their insistence continued.

The President's message was followed March 30 by a cable from the department, which stated:

"The recommendations of secretary of war to President . . . that preferential transportation be given to American infantry and machine-gun units in present emergency understood and will be followed."

It went on to say that these units pertaining to three divisions, the Third, Fifth and Seventy-seventh, would be sent at once, and those of three other divisions about May 1.

Replying April 3 to the department's cable, I emphasized that it was "not intended that our units should replace the losses of British or French organizations, and therefore our artillery should be held in readiness to follow when called for," although it was possible that the situation might become "so serious that some of our infantry units will be forced to serve with British temporarily."

My intentions were further indicated by saying: "Americans must not lose sight of the purpose to build up divisions and corps of their own," and also, "we must avoid the tendency to incorporate our infantry into British divisions where it will be used up and never relieved."

My cable recommended that the infantry of two divisions be sent by British shipping and two by our own, but that present plans should go no further than this. It was my purpose not to become too deeply involved in an agreement that would make it impossible later to form our own independent force under our own officers.

MT. LAKE PARK

As the time draws near for the voice of the people to be heard at the polls on the 14th inst., when it will be decided whether or not the Park will in the future function under a municipal form of government, nearly all other topics of conversation are submerged. Plans are being perfected to hold the referendum election in accordance with the provisions of the Act authorizing it. The following notices have been posted at various places in the Park:

"To the property owners and residents of Mt. Lake Park: In accordance with Chapter 507 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1831, notice is hereby given that a referendum election for voting on the incorporation of Mt. Lake Park, Md., will be held Tuesday, July 14, 1931, between the hours of 1 and 7 o'clock p. m., in the Public School House, in Mt. Lake Park, Md. This election is to be held for the purpose of deciding whether or not to adopt the proposed charter and form an incorporated town. Sections 6 of the foregoing Act provides that all persons who are entitled to vote for members of the General Assembly of Maryland and who have resided in Mt. Lake Park, Md., for a period of six months or longer, are entitled to vote in this election.

This section also provides that all persons who are bona fide owners of real estate in Mt. Lake Park and who have owned same for 12 months or longer preceding the above date, are also entitled to vote.

The Act also provides that the husbands, if the wives own said real estate, or the wives, if the husbands are the owners, shall have the right to vote, and all the children of such owners 21 years of age or over are entitled to vote. This applies to all children of real estate owners, whether they are residents of Mt. Lake Park, or non-residents."

A meeting of those who are opposed to the adoption of the charter, at the invitation of the Mt. Lake Park Association, held a mecing Tuesday afternoon, at which the views of several of those present were given, and a committee appointed to canvass the Park and formulate plans to defeat the proposition. A meeting of the committee so appointed was held last evening, but we are not advised what action was taken.

The proponents of the new charter have called a meeting of the citizens and property owners of the Park for Saturday evening, July 11, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Hall of Philosophy. We are advised that able speakers will be present and a full discussion of the proposed charter, and its effect, will be had, and any obscure provisions will be clarified, according to the views of the proponents. The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

There are those who decry the intense interest in this situation, while others hold that "open covenants openly arrived at" should tend to obliterate the antagonisms which seem to have grown between the Association and the Community. Let us trust that this result will follow, whichever way the majority vote may be cast. Whichever side wins, should not gloat over its victory, and the one that is defeated should be a good loser, and "double team" to make Mountain Lake Park attain the position, which owing to its natural beauty, natural advantages and location, it is entitled. Our gratutitious and perhaps unwelcome advice is that all personalities be cast aside so that when we go to the polls next Tuesday, our vote wil answer the question "What is best for the Park?" according to our knowledge of the facts and the dictates of our conscience.

While there are a number of "For Sale" signs on properties in the Park, in one of our walks the other day we noticed one which, to us, was more or less depressing. That one was posted on a cottage property of a man who has the love and respect of all who know him—a pioneer of the Park, who, with his family, has graced this community with his presence for the past forty years—one who preaches what he thinks and practices what he preaches—Dr. C. W. Baldwin.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Fleming and Mrs. Levi B. Harr, Fairmont, have opened their cottage for the season.

Dr. and Mrs. Hood, Clarksburg, are occupying their cottage for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Devney II, and son, Fairmont, are the guests of the former's mother at her cottage.

Mrs. William E. Landon and daughter, who have been in Pittsburgh since the death of the husband of Mrs. Landon, are spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Harvey.

Miss Ada Armstrong and brother-in-law, Mr. Ludington, have opened the Armstrong cottage for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Benton Mitchell and family, Fairmont, and Mrs. Katherine Bannister and children, Huntington, W. Va., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Morgan.

Mr. Edward Hart, Charleston, is spending the week with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hagans, Uniontown, spent Tuesday in the Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Warder Cressin, of Fairmont, and a party of Pennsylvania friends are occupying the Fike cottage.

Mrs. Simpson, Cincinnati, has opened her cottage and has as her guest Mrs. R. E. Sliger, of Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harvey, Ellicott City; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Heckman, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jernigan, and Mr. Arthur Humbertson, of Richmond, were guests over the Fourth of Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Harvey and Mrs. Humbertson.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Richey, Uniontown, Pa., spent the week-end at the Rodeheaver cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rodeheaver and Mr. and Mrs. Matthews, of Confluence, Pa., were guests over the week-end at the Rodeheaver cottage.

On Incorporation of Mountain Lake Park.

To the Editor of The Republican.

As one having property in Mountain Lake Park and hoping to occupy it somewhat permanently, I have common interest in the Park with those who are residents here, and as a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, temporarily assisting the Association in some of its work, I can but have a sympathetic attitude toward the Association. I am prompted, therefore, after reading some things in your paper and hearing the matter of incorporation discussed since coming here last week, to submit to your readers some reflections of mine on the subject.

In two things, it seems to me, the thinking of some who discuss this matter is not clear. First, they think of and treat the Association as not having the rights of a person. Second, they do not see what may result from treating the Association in this manner.

As I understand it, the plea for incorporation is based on giving everyone a share in the control of the Park with an advantage to those who reside here, in that there are no proxy votes. It being claimed that control should be with those on the ground rather than with those far away.

Now let us think of the Association as being one person, which under the law, it is, and that person yourself. You bought the original tract and the State gave you a charter to conduct a religious, educational and recreational resort. You sold off your land to others who cared to come here under certain understandings and restrictions. In due time, you changed your charter by an act of the Legislature to permit the Community to choose two, you to choose two and the four to select a fifth, who should administer the affairs of the corporation. But since you were responsible for programs and deficits, should they occur, you retained the right in case the four failed to name the fifth, you should be permitted to name him.

For many years you carried on what you thought a worthy work of the religious and educational kind, always with deficits, which you met. But because you instructed those having charge for you to use all care in making the sum you must pay out as small as possible, persons who thought you had too great power, appealed to the Legislature to permit them to determine by their vote whether your charter should be revoked, you not being permitted to cast a vote in protest, and to authorize them to set up a form of civil and political government which your charter definitely forbids in order to eliminate all political consideration and influence, under which government you are not even permitted to cast a vote for those chosen to conduct its affairs, although you pay more than one-tenth of all the taxes paid.

And should you appeal to the courts to sustain your rights and the courts should deny that you had any rights, how long do you think you would continue to spend your time and pay your money out to conduct programs there? And with these conditions, to whom do you think you could sell your property and they would take your place? And if those of us who are residents here are going to treat those who are at a distance as though they were intruders into our affairs, how are we going to enlarge and build up the place unless we have large money to spend ourselves?

E. T. MOWBRAY.

One Who Thinks It Would Be a Great Mistake To Incorporate Mountain Lake Park Expresses His Views.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Inasmuch as I am deeply interested in the welfare of Mountain Lake Park and have been for many years, I want to say why I think it would be a great mistake to incorporate the Park.

The object of the Association was to establish a summer resort, founded upon Christian principles, and to afford opportunities for religious and literary instruction and recreation. The Association has tried to carry out, and I think all will agree, has carried out this program from the beginning to the present time. To incorporate the town would defeat the very object for which the Association was established. Their rights and privileges would be taken from them, and their operations would be subject to the will of a mayor and council. Is it not easy to see why the Board of Foreign Missions (which now controls the Association) will withdraw its support if the town is incorporated?

So far as governing the affairs of the community is concerned, I cannot see where it will improve matters if the town is incorporated. As it is, the Association appoints two members of the Annual Committee, the lot owners two members and these four elect the fifth man. In the event that the four members cannot agree upon a fifth, the Association has the right to name him.

I was a member of the Annual Committee, having been appointed by the Association, for a good many years, and I never knew the four members to have any trouble in selecting the fifth member, nor did I ever know the Association to appoint him nor to interfere in any way.

I live in an incorporated town, governed by a mayor and councilmen—all fine, capable men—but no better than those governing the affairs of the Mt. Lake Park Community.

So far as the Association is concerned, it pays its taxes to the Community, just the same as any other taxpayer. The Association has no voice in determining how these taxes shall be spent. The Annual Committee looks after the working of the alleys and streets, taking care of the sewers, lights, etc., all of these things being attended to as in any municipality.

I am not criticising anyone for not thinking just as I do. We all have a right to our opinion—the readers of this letter the same right as I. Hence we should be more charitable to one another. Surely we are all interested in the Park—the people of Oakland as well as those living in the Park. It means much to us all. The only difference of opinion seems to be as to the best way to govern Mountain Lake Park: whether it is to continue as it is, or whether it should be incorporated. I do not think we should form a hasty or biased judgment. I think we should take time to consider this matter seriously, whether it is best to incorporate Mountain Lake Park and have the Association withdraw its support, or to allow it to continue as it is and lend our good will and support to the Association in building up a better program each year.

Some people think that if the Park is incorporated the Association will continue to carry on its yearly program as it has been doing. But the Association says it will withdraw its support, and I believe it will. Some think the Park will be as well off without the Association. I think not. Look elsewhere. Is Deer Park, for example, as well off with the Deer Park Hotel closed as when it was full of guests? We can name any number of villages, which, despite natural advantages, do not attract as many people as does Mountain Lake Park through the efforts of the Association and practically all at its own expense. The Association maintains its buildings, advertises the Park, puts on the different programs, employs its superintendent, keeps its own grounds in order, principally at its own expense. Look at the number of people who attend the camp meeting alone. Consider all the other conventions at the Park during the year. Do they mean anything to the hotels, the farmers, the dairymen, the merchants in the Park and in Oakland? We all must admit we would miss them very materially if the Association should withdraw its support from the Park.

I want to say a few words about the fact—for it is a fact—that the Forcign Mission Board operates at Mountain Lake Park at a loss. So far as dollars and cents are concerned, the Association always lost money in its operations at the Park. I was one of the directors of the Mountain Lake Park Association, with some of the best business men in the county: such men as John M. Davis, D. E. Offutt, G. S. Hamill, all of Oakland; and Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, of Baltimore—men who made a success of their own business but could not possibly run the affairs of the Association without loss.

The older residents of the Park and of Oakland will remember what great chautauquas Dr. Davidson had at the Park, and they will remember how he would stand on the platform and plead with us to come to his assistance to help meet the financial deficit. The Association continued operations until it was over $20,000 in debt, when its burden became so heavy that it turned the property over to the Foreign Mission Board, thinking that organization could manage the affairs to better advantage. Sufficient money was subscribed to pay the indebtedness and the Association gave the Board its stock, in addition to the money subscribed. That this amounted to something will be seen from the fact that taxes are now being paid on a valuation of $52,000. If the Mission Board was operating from a motive of gain, it would have withdrawn long ago.

You maintain your churches; would you call that money thrown away? No company, no matter who composes it, can put on a program and conduct affairs in the fine manner in which the Association has done it for these years without a loss. So my suggestion would be for all of us to get together and see if we cannot help the Association to put on a larger and better program and keep Mountain Lake Park on the map as a summer resort, founded upon Christian principles; a place where one may have opportunity for religious and literary instruction and recreation in the best sense.

No more beautiful spot can be found than Mountain Lake Park.

Yours very truly,

A. D. NAYLOR.

Oakland, Md., July 8, 1931.

Why Not Permit Mountain Lake Park to Continue as a Religious and Recreational Center, as Was Intended it Should Be By the Founders.

To the Editor of The Republican.

What Mountain Lake Park needs more than anything else just at this crucial time in its history is cooperation between the Association and the property owners, for their interests are mutual. When either the Association or the residents prosper both share in the prosperity; when a backward step is taken the harm is done to both.

As a property owner I desire to say that the contract between myself and the Association with respect to ownership of the lot upon which my cottage stands is mutually binding and no act of the Legislature can invalidate a contract between parties where its conditions are understood, hence the uproar and the back-biting, the ill feeling that is being engendered between neighbors and friends at the Park will leave sore spots that cannot be healed in years to come. Let us all stand together and work for the rejuvenation of the Park, an asset to any community, for that is the only solution of the problem so far as I can see in view of the present state of affairs.

Let us have the Park continue as a religious and literary center, headed by the Board of Missions of the great Methodist Episcopal church, at whose helm the brainiest men of the church guide the ship to its destiny.

Of course everyone has a right to their own opinion, but I cannot understand why the fight against the Mission Board is being carried on with such vigor by the members of that denomination when it will be the one to lose in the end.

WHEN you set out to buy tires, don't you really want the most miles and the utmost in safety at the lowest possible price.

That being your objective, which tire should you buy?

If the experience of 20,000,000 motorists means anything, you should certainly buy Goodyears.

But if you try to puzzle through the welter of statistics on thicknesses, weights and diameters you lose the main issue and are as much at sea as ever.

The one and only reliable guide for you to follow is the seasoned preference of the public.

And that preference is overwhelmingly for Goodyear.

This fact expressed year after year by Goodyear's great leadership is concretely told again in the findings of an impartial investigation made by an unbiased dependable institution that asked 205,000 car owners this simple question:

QUESTION: "Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what make of tire do you consider the BEST tire made?"

There's the only buying guide that means anything to you car owners.

VOLUME 55. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, JULY 16, 1931. NUMBER 22.

MRS. ROSA FELDA IS GIVEN FIVE YEARS IN INSTITUTION

Garrett County Woman, Convicted of Manslaughter, Sent To House of Correction

CALM WHEN SENTENCED

Mrs. Rosa Felda, 52, of Wilson Station, Garrett county, who was tried and convicted of manslaughter by a jury in the Circuit Curt at Cumberland, on July 2; to which county the trial of the woman was removed from Oakland, in connection with the death of her husband, Michael Felda, from drinking poisoned moonshine whiskey at the Felda home last February, was sentenced Saturday morning to serve five years in the Maryland House of Correction by Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan. Associate Judge Albert A. Doub, who also sat on the bench during the trial, concurred in the sentence imposed.

The prisoner took her sentence calmly and was unmoved and appeared relieved that the penalty was not for a longer duration of time in a penal institution.

Mrs. Felda was taken to the House of Correction Sunday morning by Deputies George Kemp and John Powers, of Allegany county, to begin her term.

Plea for Clemency and Parole

Albert A. Doub, Jr., onc of the attorneys for the defense, when the prisoner was brought into court for sentence, made a plea for clemency and urged a parole that she might be committed to a state mental institution for treatment, citing that she was in need of both physical and mental care, from indulgence in the use of a narcotic drug and alcoholism.

Judge Sloan in passing sentence stated that he and Judge Doub had given the case much consideration to arrive at a decision as to the penalty and indicated that the court could not overlook the fact that a man had lost his life from apparent negligence in the handling of a deadly poison.

He stated that the court would write the State Prison Welfare Association to look after Mrs. Felda and if any treatment was needed for a physical or mental ailment that the prisoner would receive it.

William A. Huster, State's Attorney for Allegany county, who assisted Walter W. Dawson, the Garrett county prosecuting attorney in the case, represented the State.

Motion is Dismissed.

When court convened Saturday the motion for a new trial in the case, made after the prisoner's conviction, was dismissed by the defense.

In this case it appeared from the testimony, that there was considerable drinking in the Felda home, a farm house on the Kitzmiller road, on the afternoon and night of Felda's illness and death. The State contended that the murder was premeditated and that Rose Felda, the wife, purchased the poison in Oakland several days before, and that she was jealous of Felda's attention to another woman in the neighborhood.

The defense admitted that she purchased the poison and that she put some of it in moonshine whiskey for the purpose of ending her own life that night because she was addicted to the use of morphine and had become despondent because she could not break herself of the habit.

The defense further contended that Felda got hold of the bottle that had been hidden away containing the poison and drank it, without Mrs. Felda's knowledge.

Local Author Receiving Recognition In Nationally Known Magazines.

In the current number of The Parents' Magazine, a publication devoted on "Rearing Children from the Crib to College and Home Management," an article appears from the pen of Mrs. Frances Frisbie O'Donnell, of Oakland, under the caption "Educating for Peace," in which the author analyses the tendency of children to engage in games and play which develops the war-like fecling of the individual child instead of the peace-loving tendency. The article in qucstion has been purchased by "The Readers' Digest" and will appear in the August number of that magazine which chooses the articles considered most interesting of those published in all the magazines current the previous month.

RUSHING IMPROVEMENTS ON HIGHWAY IN GARRETT

Fifty Per Cent of Curves Being Eliminated and 10.65 Miles Being Shouldered With Cement

Without a single detour or without halting traffic 10.65 miles of the National Road in Garrett county, west of Frostburg, beginning at the foot of Big Savage Mountain, is undergoing extensive improvements and will be completed by August 25 at a cost of approximately $100,000. Work was started about April 1 and will be completed about ten days ahead of scheduled time which, according to terms of the contract, is September 1.

District Engineer Leo T. Downey and Assistant District Engineer J. Carter Shryock, are looking after the State's part of the work. The Cumberland Contracting Company is the contractor.

Beginning at the foot of Big Savage Mountain, five dangerous curves have been eliminated and straight-of-ways make a fine grade up the mountain. Prior to the improvements there were ten curves between the foot of Big Savage Mountain and the top at Mountain View Inn. The grade does not exceed an average of nine percent. From the top of Big Savage to the top of Little Savage and thence on to Meodaw Mountain there are fills and excavations in the roadway with the eliminations of knolls and knobs and allowance for 500 foot vision on vertical curves and a 350 foot vision on curved roadway.

"Death Curve" Removed

The extremely dangerous curve at the foot of Big Savage Mountain has been widened to a fifty foot limit. At this point four fatal accidents have occurred in the past two years.

Work of grading and the construction of concrete shoulders is being done by the Cumberland Contracting Co., while the work of the State Roads Commission is confined to filling in the road base between the shoulders and surfacing with bituminous macadam. All new roadway has a solid rock base. Rock is taken from the mountain side, crushed by machinery without manual labor and hauled to the point where needed by twenty-two trucks, eleven of which are owned by Enoch Price, Cumberland transferman.

Over two hundred men are employed on the work. There is one central proportioning plant, moved at discretion to the most advantageous point for distribution of rock and cement. To date the highest number of feet of concrete shoulder laid in a single day is 3800. The total excavation, according to engineers, will be 100,000 cubic yards.

Fifty per cent of the curves on the 10.65 miles stretch which comes to a halt west of the Stone House, three miles east of Grantsville, have been eliminated, making the roadway safer for speedy travel.

Girls' 4-H Camp Opens at Camp Algajoy Near Grantsville

Thus far the following girls are expecting to attend the camp: Virginia Davis, Beatrice Schnopp, Pauline Wolf, Alice Marion Whorton, Regina Compton and Mabel Hinebaugh, all of Oakland. It is expected that others belonging to various Garrett county clubs, will also attend.

State Officer Thomas E. Currie, who was transferred from this community to a point east of Oakland 18 months ago, and who was seriously injured soon thereafter, has returned to work with the State police force after having visited relatives and friends in Scotland for several months. It has been reported that Officer Currie will be returned to duty here within a short time. At present his arm is not sufficiently strong to operate a motorcycle and a few more weeks of rest is required before he becomes actively engaged in his work.

COST OF SWIMMING POOL IS BEING WORKED OUT

Will Be Presented To Mayor and Council at August Meeting

Plans whereby it would be possible to erect a swimming pool on the city proprety located near North Third street, at the rear of Houck's garage, which were to have been presented to the Mayor and City Council at an adjourned meeting last Thursday evening, were not completely prepared at that time, but will be placed before the town officials at their next meeting, which will be held on August 3, those backing the proposition have stated.

Estimates are being obtained from contractors for cement and carpenter work, and it is thought that it will be possible to erect a swimming pool and purchase the necessary accessories for $4,500. The money would be raised by selling seasoh tickets and general admissions. Other suggestions will be worked out and presented to the officials at the August meeting.

At present the plans call for a pool which would be only partially below the surface, with showers and bathhouses built on a platform on one side of the structure. It was thought that an elevated pool would be much easier to keep clean.

The city officials have already promised the use of the ground and the water for the pool, providing the citizens of Oakland work out a plan whereby the building of the pool and beautification of the property can be done without expense to the municipal government.

Scout Benefit Picture to Raise Funds for Annal Outing

In order to finance the summer outing of the Oakland Troop of Boy Scouts of America, to be held the first two weeks in August, a benefit picture will be shown in the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, on Monday and Tuesday, July 27 and 28.

The picture to be presented has been nationally advertised as a headline attraction and will be "Big Boy," starring Al Jolson. Admission will be 25 and 50 cents.

"Big Boy," said to be Al Jolson's greatest stage hit, and Warner Bros. and Vitaphone have made it into one of the best pictures of the year and Jolson's latest production. As Gus, a colored jockey, Al Jolson plays his funniest role. "Big Bog" is a comedy drama of the race-track, flavored with Jolson's songs.

"It is necessary to raise approximately $350 each year to defray expenses of camp," the scoutmaster pointed out. Each boy, in past years, if he is able, pays $5 for the two weeks' outing, but this is not sufficient for all expenses and it is necessary that $200 be raised in some other manner. It is hoped that everybody will respond by attending.

E. church of that city, performed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Oakland High School, class of 1927, and for the past year or more has been employed by the Potomac-Edison Company at Keyser, W. Va. The groom is employed by the same company at Cumberland. The couple will reside in Cumberland.

MT. LAKE PARK VOTERS FAVOR THE NEW CHARTER

Decide at Tuesday's Election By Margin of Fifty-Seven Votes To Incorproate The Town

AROUSED MUCH INTEREST

By a margin of 57 votes it was decided Tuesday to incorporate the community of Mountain Lake Park and to adopt a municipal form of government, following a heated campaign during the past sixty days.

The last General Assembly authorized that the election be held to determine whether or not the town should be incorporated. There were 330 votes cast of which 187 were in favor of adopting the new charter, and 130 against its adoption. Thirteen ballots were spoiled and were therefore not counted in the tabulation.

At the election Wilson L. Camden, MacClellan Clayton, H. L. Bittner, T. O. Schooley and F. R. Utterback presided as judges, and Joseph Turney and D. B. Martin acted as clerks. The polls were opened by proclamation at one o'clock and closed at seven.

Addresses Made For and Against

The election aroused much interest in this section and there were opportunitics for presenting views both for and against the incorporation in public meetings, circular letters and by personal contact. On Saturday evening a large gathering was addressed by Neil Fraley, Oakland attorney, who marshaled his facts and presented the issue from the standpoint of the proponents of the charter. On Monday evening the citizens were addressed by Rev. Dr. E. T. Mowbray, a member of the Methodist church in Maryland. Mr. Fraley acted as attorney for those favoring the incorporation.

The incorporation was opposed by the Mountain Lake Park association and the Board of Foreign Missions of the M. E. church, contending that this would defeat the object for which the association was founded—to establish a summer resort founded upon Christian principles and to afford opportunity for religious and literary instruction and education. It was stated that the board would withdraw its support from the community, and it was also understood that the constitutionality of the election would be contested by the Mission board.

Those favoring the incorporation were many citizens of the community who felt that they had a right in the government of their local affairs. A mayor and other town officers will be elected during the secnd week in August.

Mt. Lake Park is known as a religious community and conferences are held every summer by the various church groups which have been active in the affairs of the Park. The annual committee, composed of two members from Mt. Lake Park, and two members of the Mt. Lake Park association, and a members picked by consent of the four, has had charge of the community's affairs during past years.

Kitzmiller Residence Destroyed By Fire Sunday Evening

The residence of Thomas Davis, at Kitzmiller, Garrett county, was totally destroyed by fire about 9 o'clock Sunday evening, along with the furniture and personal belongings of members of the family valued at several thousand dollars. The origin of the fire is unkonwn.

Mr. Davis' family was absent from the home at the time and the blaze had gained such headway when discovered that nothing of consequence was saved. In addition to the furniture a pocketbook belonging to Mr. Davis' daughter, containing a considerable sum of money, was also destroyed. The dwelling was situated on the highway leading to Oakland.

A building located on the property, which escaped the flames, has been turned into a dwelling for Mr. Davis and his family until the home is rebuilt.

It is said that an insurance policy of $2,000 was in force on the dwelling.

Inspecting Potatoes

Dr. R. A. Jehie, potato specialist from the University of Maryland Extension Service, is in Garrett county this week inspecting potatoes for certification. This is Dr. Jehle's first inspection among the potato growers this year and other inspections will be made before any crop receives the grade of certified seed.

SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 4:32-35; 6:1-4; 9:36-39; II Cor. 9:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT—I have shewed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sharing With Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Sharing With Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christians Sharing With Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Generosity of the Early Christians.

Social service as such was not a department of church activity. However, the early church was most ready to discharge its social obligations. Members of the body of Christ are sympathetically related.

I. Characteristics of the Early Church (Acts 4:31-35).

1. It was a praying church (v. 31). These early Christians for every need betook themselves to God in prayer.

2. It was a Spirit-filled church (v. 31). When they prayed, the place wherein they were gathered together was shaken and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit.

3. It was a church with a bold testimony (v. 31). The ministers of the early church did not offer any apology for the Bible, but expended their energy in fearlessly preaching it.

4. It was a united church (v. 32). They were all of one heart and soul.

5. It was a generous church (v. 32). They held nothing back from those who had need.

6. Its ministers had a powerful testimony (v. 33).

7. Its members had an unblemished character (v. 33).

II. Appointment of Deacons (Acts 6:1-4).

1. The occasion (v. 1). The church was threatened with disruption over suspected partiality in the distribution of alms. The Grecians felt discriminated against in that their widows were neglected in the "daily ministrations."

2. The issue met (vv. 2-6). A congregational meeting was called, the case placed before the church, and the church instructed to select seven men of good report, filled with the Holy Spirit and wisdom to administer the temporalities of the church, leaving the apostles freedom for prayer and the ministry of God's Word.

3. The ministry of the deacons (v. 7). They looked after the poor, but while distributing alms, they were witnessing for Christ. Social service is a by-product of Christianity and not Christianity itself.

III. The Raising of Dorcas (Acts 9:36-39).

1. Her ministry (v. 36 Cf. v. 39). Her life was full of good works, such as making coats and garments for the poor. Her noble ministry has set in motion countless numbers of needles, and has given incentive to many noble women to follow her example. The good deeds were not merely those which she intended to do, but "which she did."

2. Her death (v. 37). In the midst of a life full of good works she was overtaken by death.

3. Peter sent for (v. 38). In their distress the disciples sent two men urgently to request Peter to come to them. Having heard of the healing of Aeneas at Lydda, which was near, they no doubt believed that he could restore Dorcas to life.

4. Dorcas raised (vv. 39-41). In answer to Peter's prayer Dorcas was "presented alive to the saints and widows."

5. The effect (v. 42). So astounding was this miracle that "many believed in the Lord."

IV. Ministering to the Saints (II Cor. 9:1-7).

The saints in need were Christians at Jerusalem. Many were impoverished because of embracing Christianity. Sending money to the saints at Jerusalem was an expression of affection on the part of these Gentile Christians for the Jews. As an incentive to giving Paul shows:

1. That the volume of reaping is based upon the volume of sowing (v. 6).

2. There should be a heart purpose (v. 7). This calls for intelligence as to the object in giving.

3. Giving should not be of necessity (v. 7). No particular value accrues to the giver who only responds under pressure.

4. God loves a cheerful giver (v. 7). Right understanding of responsibility toward God with reference to temporal possessions will make giving a glorious privilege.

All Who Come

Christ saveth unto the uttermost all who come unto God by him; and it is best to leave Christ to determine where the uttermost lies. What is impossible with men is easy to omnipotent grace.—W. L. Watkinson.

As the Angels Give

If instead of a gem or even a flower, we could cast the gift of a lovely thought in the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give.—George MacDonald.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Well, Scoop has returned to Oakland, The Republican, Archie's house, the lake, and his work, but he isn't quite sure whether he has come down to earth or not. Being up in the clouds for two weeks and then to be left dangling in mid-air, where gravity has no power, it is impossible to say what the outcome will be.

I appreciate all the honors which Archibaldson, Carl Frame, Hizzonor Mayor Stemple, Lawyer Fisher Fraley, the staff, including the Boss Editor, Colonel Bell and the admirers and readers of Scoop bestowed upon me (and Mrs. Scoop) in their write-ups of two weeks ago. It must be because somebody forgot to cover their heads the night of the big frost that made them so free with their compliments, etc.,—mostly etc.

Anyway, they were very good, and Scoop will be glad to turn over the reigns of this column to anyone of them without a referendum, fiat fracus of corpus dilectii, at any time, when the spirit moves them.

Maybe I should tell you something of my (and Mrs. Scoop's) trip, excluding, of course, the minor details.

First, I have never seen so many State highways turned into cow pastures. How the animals can get sufficient nourishment from gravel, macadam and cement to furnish the necessary quarts of milk each evening is beyond me, but whenever a cow gets her mind set on a bunch of tar barrels on the opposite side of the road, a Lincoln or an Austin doesn't mean a thing to her. We never saw a cow or a bull that didn't think it had the right-of-way, and we have seen some of 'em sitting behind steering-wheels, too.

What we saw in New York would empty a blank page. While we were just two blocks from Broadway they had a noisy welcome to the round-the-world fliers and a parade up the main drag that would have equalled the Fourth of July parade here, according to those who saw it. We knew about it when we read of it the next day in a newspaper at Easton, Pa., the first paper we had seen since The Republican of a week before.

We saw where Icabod Crane went horseback riding in Sleepy Hollow, and where the bear went over the mountain.

We didn't have a chance to sunburn our tonsils or what have you looking at the tall buildings in the big city, but those inside gills did get tired from flapping so much at the taxi drivers, who seemed to be on all sides.

The best things we saw on our trip were the mountains of Garrett county and West Virginia and Deep Creek Lake.

And the two-day celebration arranged for us upon our return to Oakland stirred us to our inner depths. Never was such a celebration given even to our senators or assemblymen upon their return from Ritchie's prison at Annapolis. The fact that it fell on the Fourth of July made it all the better for those who wanted to do a little celebrating of their own.

We want to thank the firemen and the Legion for all the trouble they had in getting up this party for us. Although the expenses must have been heavy and burdensome to some, we won't spoil the spirit in which it was arranged by offering any money to the two organizations. We shall long remember this sacrifice.

Just when I thought I was beginning to look normal again, somebody in the Court House on Monday, while I was in the Clerk's office getting the marriage licenses for the week, asked me if I was an attorney. Have I changed for the worse that much? You know, the lawyers' standing in this respect was above the average until Lawyer Fisher Fraley passed the bar examination.

I could say a lot about Nell "Cusser" Fraley this week, because he was the head oratorio at the "pro-charter mass meeting on Saturday night in the Hall of Archaelogy and Physiology at Mountain Lake Park, but there will be enough about Mountain Lake Park this week.

Reports from the election at the Park on Tuesday:

Police were unable to keep order.. two are shot down in cold blood in the 55th ward by booth watchers—"Vote as you please, but vote my way" was the slogan used by both sides—Polls and machine guns are jammed..Ballot boxes are hidden under the bowling alley, it is reported..Cozy Row still remains solid for Abraham Lincoln and the Union..A question asked each one was "how many times did you vote?"

A "Charter-question-day" has been suggested each year to be known as the annual homecoming day. This is expected to draw more people than three conventions.

Echoes From the Fourth

An expression that cannot be copied—exhibited by I. Romanus Rudy of the drum corps one the morning of the third. He was under the awning in front of his store during a shower congratulating himself that his woolens wouldn't shrink and put him in danger of being choked to death, when he suddenly remembered that the coat to his best suit was hanging on a nail, out in the open, over at the celebration grounds.

Albert L. Lee was consoled the other morning as he was struggling with a lawn mower in front of his home.

"I'll be the owners of that house won't give you your breakfast until you finish your job, the mean skimps," some passer-by remarked.

AS TO BUSINESS CONFIDENCE

With the advent of spring it is cheering to note signs of restored business confidence in various industries and in many parts of the country. It is rather hazardous to predict just when we are going to return to normalcy; but there is no reasonable doubt that we are headed in that direction. The greatest obstacle is the large number of the unemployed. Yet in time that must also yield to the gradual improvement in certain lines of trade.

Mr. H. Morton Bodfish, executive manager of the United States Building and Loan League, is one who believes that we shall experience more favorable conditions in the summer and fall, although he feels that full prosperity will have to wait until 1932. He has been conferring with leading economists and financiers, and they agree with him that business men have a more cheerful outlook on the future than at any time since the beginning of the depression.

It is interseting to note the reasons they give for the faith that is in them. They believe basic industries must soon operate at a higher rate in order to take care of increased demands and large consumption. Other reasons for optimism are that the stocks of commodities in the hands of retailers and wholesalers are not large and must be replenished; that the bond market indicates cheaper long-time money, which is essential to the revival of business; that the bank failures are becoming less and that some suspended institutions are resuming operations; that cheaper credit and plentiful money will help trade; that empolyment is slightly better; that building and loan association receipts are increasing, and finally that confidence is being restored.

It is true that this is the conclusion of one man; but it is based upon talks with leaders in trade and industry. There is unquestionably an upward trend, and the fact that it is slight may be all the better for the health of the patient, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. It took the country a long time to get into the condition in which it now finds itself, and it seems only reasonable to believe that time will be required for its recovery. An over-night recovery would have been dangerous, because it would have meant risking a relapse.

One thing we may be sure of is that the cheerful, optimistic man is going to gain more than the confirmed pessimist. It is as true now as it has always been that the darkest hour is often just before the dawn. There are opportunities ahead, and the one who is preparing to grasp them is he who is prepared to grasp them who will have the fewest regrets. What is true of the individual is true of the country as a whole. The confident man usually manages to get out of the rut, and it is the confident business leaders who are rendering the best service to their country in this hour of need.

Reforestation Progresses in this State

During the past ten years due to the agricultural depression many thousands of acres of land have been abandoned for field crops and are now a liability so far as contributing to the farm income is concerned, according to the Forestry Department News Letter of the week. It is land that will grow good tree crops if planted with suitable species, and, for much of it, this is the only practicable use.

The State Forest Nursey is furnishing at very low cost trees for reclaiming this waste land and putting it in shape to grow a profitable crop.

There is an increasing interest in forest planting as attested by the greater demand for planting stock. During the past spring 498,400 trees for forest planting were distributed from the Forest Nursery to nearly 200 applicants. Most of the plantings were of small acreage but with the large number of plantings in many different parts of the State they constitute demonstrations of practical value which will be a decided stimulus in planting up waste lands.

The half million trees distributed this spring were without special solicitation and represent a normal increase in forest planting. The capacity of the nursery is being gradually enlarged to take care of the increased demand which in five years is expected to be two million trees annually. Only standard species are grown, but the variety is sufficient to satisfy any particular condition or requirement of the planting site and the needs of the landowner. Ninety-five per cent of the trees are evergreens—the pines largely predominating. Loblolly pine is the leading species for forest planting in the Eastern Shore section and in Southern Maryland, while red pine and white pine are best adapted for Central and Western Maryland.

Of the hardwoods or deciduous species, black locust and tulip poplar are the only two grown in quantities at the nursery.

You Remember,
Don't You ?

The little red schoolhouse with the battered wooden benches and the old round stove. When the teacher was sick school closed and the lazy spring days were spent on the banks of the creek with a pole and a bent pin.

This is only a happy memory now—the isolated schoolhouse has bowed to economy and efficiency and the modern central school with its innumerable advantages has taken its place. One absent teacher no longer delays the progress of education.

So it is with your electric service. The small isolated power plant has for efficiency and economy given way to the large interconnected central station. Reliable service is guaranteed. If trouble occurs at one station power is brought to your home from the others.

HOOVER TRIUMPHS

President Hoover's moratorium on reparations and war debts is a reality. With remarkable precision and swiftness the President has brought the whole world into accord with his proposal. Formidable obstacles have been met and overcome. The achievement is all the more significant because the American Government made no sacrifice of principle to bring France into harmony with the plan.

Technical details of the agreement, including reparations in kind, which were the last hurdle, will be left for a committee of experts to decide. But those experts will have no authority to negotiate and question outside of the "broad spirit of the President's proposal." The details which they will settle are relatively unimportant. What the world has been waiting to hear is that reparations and war debts would be actually suspended for one year. For millions of people in the United States and abroad this agreement marks the turn from depression and despair to hope, renewed activity and ultimate prosperity.

One paragraph of President Hoover's statement is especially significant:

> While the plan is particularly aimed to economic relief, yet economic relief means the swinging of men's minds from fear to confidence, the swinging of nations from apprehension of disorder and governmental collapse to hope and confidence in the future. It means tangible aid to unemployment and agriculture.

This agreement can be interpreted in no other way than as a great victory for President Hoover. He is responsible for the original proposal and for the successful completion of negotiations with France. Tempering firmness with an understanding of the problems of France, he won every substantial point in the negotiations without deviating from his original purpose. Yet the whole agreement has been concluded in an atmosphere of confidence and good will that contribute to the more hopeful economic outlook.

President Hoover worked indefatigably to iron out the differences that arose between the United States and France. In Paris, Secretary Mellon kept the negotiations keyed up to a high pitch. No stone was left unturned that might aid in bringing the two governments into complete accord. Seldom, if ever, have international negotiations of this character been pursued so relentlessly. Disagreement has never been contemplated. President Hoover, having set his face grimly toward the goal of reparations relief, has allowed nothing to interfere with the successful completion of his task.

Where no changes in the spirit of the original offer were involved the United States compromised. For the sake of keeping the Young plan intact the Americon Government agreed that Germany should continue to pay unconditional annuities, but those payments are to be made available to Germany in the form of loans. Another compromise was reached on the length of time that Germany and the debtor nations shall be allowed to make up the suspended payments. But the President has insisted that Germany be relieved, in effect, of all reparations for one year. In that position he now has the support of all interested parties.

The refusal of Mr. Hoover to be drawn into European controversies over reparation payments is highly commendable. The question of guarantee payments was one of the most serious snags struck in the entire negotiations. That matter is to be dealt with by the signatories of the Young plan, of which the United States is not one. Had the United States been drawn into this controversy endless complications might have ensued. President Hoover had no intention of disturbing the international obligations of Germany, or of the allies to the United States. That he was able to keep the negotiations of this moratorium free from entangling and embarrassing agreements is a high tribute to his statesmanship.

At no time did the President allow leadership in the movement to get out of his hands. The French government tried repeatedly to turn the negotiations off into channels that would be particularly advantageous to France. But Mr. Hoover remained firm in his demand that Germany be allowed the full measure of relief contemplated in his original suggestion.

Other interested governments must, of course, accept the terms of the French-American agreement, but there is no doubt that they will do so. Every country has come to the support of Mr. Hoover in this effort to turn back the forces of depression. The approval of Congress too must be secured, but President Hoover has assurance of support from large majorities in both the Senate and House, irrespective of political affiliations.

Since the proposal was first made there have been no serious doubts that a debt holiday would be declared. Nevertheless, the world could not receive the full benefits of the agreement until it was actually completed. The moratorium carries with it such a powerful stimulus that it may well mark a definite turning point toward prosperity.

THE EVIL PRIMARY SYSTEM

The deterioration of public service and of public political conscience which have followed the advent of the primary have had so profoundly evil effect upon the country that our free institutions actually are trembling in the balance. So far as Congress is concerned, the neutral danger ahead if the present condition persists and grows, is repudiation of the body by the nation, which will presage the end of the republic.

In local and state governments the general situation is even worse than it is in Washington, because the dissatisfaction and suspicion extends to the executive and judicial branches of government and every year the difficulties in the way of getting competent officers for the commonwealths and their subdivisions increase. Some times it seems impossible to find even honest ones, except now and then almost by accident. Good men generally are reluctant to run for office and when they do run there is no longer any reliable representative body to examine the qualifications of candidates and tell the voters which are fit and which are unfit.

Of late there has been considerable contention that palliation may be found through resort to the so-called short ballot system, under which only a few principal officials would be elected and those few given wide appointive powers. Such a move was urged recently with respect to general Michigan state officers.

Under the short ballot plan governors, mayors and so forth, who might or might not be honest and trustworthy, and in the majority of cases would be irresponsible or mediocre, would be given the nominating power formerly enjoyed by responsible party conventions, and in addition would be accorded the elective privilege still maintained by the voters.

We fail to see any particuler advantage in that sort of thing, in the long run. In the working out it would be one more step along the road to substitution of autocracy for free government.

Unquestionably there is a way of escape for the nation, but it is going to be a hard one to travel, and the sooner a serious effort is made to find it the better for these United States.

LOOKING SOME FACTS IN THE FACE

In asking that the National Democratic party declare itself on the prohibition question, and require Democratic candidates for Congress in all the districts of the country to stand by this declaration, Chairman Raskob in his zeal for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, is askmg what every person of common sense knows is impossible.

National party committees and conventions lack this authority. In face of the fact, especially that nominations are made by primary in most states, they are in no position to control the platforms of local candidates.

Therein lies the ineffectiveness, and even the hypocrisy of much of the discussion of prohibition as a party issue. It is not a matter of fact an issue between the parties. The Democrats and Republicans have wet constituencies in many districts of the East and North, and dry constituencies in the West and South. Any national platform declaration by either party on the question of prohibition is meaningless, because candidates for the House and Senate in dry states and districts are not going to run counter to what they know to be public sentiment, and vice versa. If they do, thcy are not going to be elected, and getting elected is one of the objectives of a candidate.

If the Democrats in their next national convention declare against prohibition, still they will send to Congress enough dry members of the House and Senate to prevent congressional action. If the Republicans declare for prohibition, nevertheless they will send to Congress from wet districts in the big cities, Republicans who will declaim against prohibition.

Prohibition is now, and is going to remain, a local issue. Action upon it will depend upon the attitude of individual senators and representatives and their attitude will reflect majority sentiment among their own constituents.

SUNRISE IN GARRETT COUNTY

Dawn sweeps across the Garrett hills, in magic silence, breaking
Across the trees, o'er well kept lawns and fields, all wet with dew;
Through Oakland speeds the early trains, the passengers, just waking,
Behold in awe, that golden ball, just bursting into view.
A vision so inspiring, so magnificent in beauty,
'Twould seem a special gift and not a matutinal duty.

Across the shimmering Deep Creek Lake the mists are softly shifting,
Then disappear like magic as the golden orb holds sway;
The matchless matin song of birds is through the silence lifting;
Each village, wrapped in Morpheus' arms awakes to greet the day.
Bright, daily gift that never fails, both rich and poor may share it;
The benediction of the morn in those old hills of Garrett.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

An editorial copied from the Baltimore American on the advantages of good roads cited Hagerstown as an example. It stated: "On account of the seven roads leading into her limits it has become one of the great meeting places of bicyclers and her name and reputation are known to every section of the United States."

The fine residence that was being erected by Mrs. Crook, widow of the late General George Crook, was expected to be completed during the week.

The Oakland Independent Band was reorganized at the city hall on Friday evening when a large number of the old members were present.

The Garrett Guards left on Wednesday for the camp ground near Baltimore. The company expected to be gone about ten days.

Work at the Oakland Woolen Mills was suspended for more than a week owing to a breakdown in the machinery.

Will Sturgiss, an enthusiastic bicycle rider, had his thumb badly mashed when it was caught in the propelling chain and spocket wheel.

Mrs. Kenny, of Cincinnati, who was a guest at the Oakland Hotel, had her five horses, three carriages, a coachman and a footman brought to Oakland from her home by express for use during her stay.

Calvin Crim, Cincinnati police force, was here on a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Crim.

Twenty Years Ago

John A. Delawder, Oakland, suffered a stroke of paralysis while sitting on the veranda at his home.

At the parsonage of St. Paul's M. E. church, Miss Sarah Long, Mountain Lake Park, became the bride of Mr. Harry Stemple, of Oakland.

Harry West, who had purchased a lot on Third street, was preparing to erect an eight-room dwelling.

Lee Mason, who had been in charge of the city pumping station and water system, resigned and entered the employ of the local dairy association in erecting an ice making plant. John Compton succeded Mr. Mason in the city's employ.

Prof. Leo J. Rasche, editor of the Grafton Sentinel, spent the Fourth in Oakland with relatives and friends.

The stonework on the enlargement and improvement of the Garrett National Bank building was completed.

Sunday was probably the hottest day to be experienced by Oakland people in a number of years. The mercury at two o'clock registered above the ninety mark with the absence of the usual cool breeze.

An Interesting Fact

BATTLE OF FRONT ROYAL

Marylander vs. Marylander

Civil war has ever been deplorable and has brought the nation involved face to face with heartrending and depressing situations. No better exampule could be cited than the one treated herein.

In May, 1862, the Federal Government at Washington was confident that the end of the rebellion was near. Even the recruiting offices were closed in anticipation of a crushing defeat of the Confederate forces, and President Lincoln had journeyed to Fredericksburg to witness what was hoped to be the final supreme struggle.

To Colonel John R. Kenly and his men had been assigned the task of holding the post at Front Royal, counted as strategic. General Banks was at Strasburg. Encamped within a few miles of these two positions was a small band of Confederates. General Banks was lulled into a sense of security by the belief that Jackson was retreating.

May 23, 1862, was intensely hot and camp routine only was being maintained. About three o'clock in the afternoon the dull and almost silent post was snapped into activity by the sight of a line of gray that burst from the adjacent dense woods, giving the terrifying "Rebel yell," and firing as they came. Colonel Bradley T. Johnson had been given charge of the First Confederate Regiment, the Southern contingent of the "Old Maryland Line," now advancing on the First Federal Regiment, the Northern contingent of that famous line, from which Maryland gets one of her sobriquets, commanded by General Kenly. Like a bolt from a clear sky the line of gray charged the pickets and the companies in Front Royal, forcing them back upon the main body of Kenly's command.

The Confederate attack was for a time checked as they crossed an open space in front of a ridge. Their ranks were supported by the famous Louisiana "Tigers" and the Maryland Federals by a squadron of New York Cavalry. But the advance was not permanently halted, for after making a gallant stand, Kenley was advised that Confederate cavalry had made its appearance on his right and rear. In the face of this almost sure defeat he gave the command to retire. In the retirement, Marylanders were pursued by Marylanders, each reinforced by the other regiments. The camp supplies of the Federals were given over to the flames and crossed bridges were attempted to be destroyed with partial failure.

General Jackson himself now appeared upon the scene and took charge. Soon a fording place was found and the stream swarmed with Confederate cavalry. Kenly retreated to Cedarville, some five miles to the east and ordered the pursuit checked. A withering fire was turned upon the advancing squadron, which temporarily checked the pursuit. But to no avail. The courageous and gallant Kenly was not given time to fix bayonets and form a front.

In the midst of the fight, calling upon his men to rally around the colors, he was badly cut about the head by a Confederate private and was forced to surrender.

The result of the battle brought no disgrace or censure on Kenly, but the result of the battle was owing to the impetuosity of the Confederate charge and the genius of Jackson.

Kenly was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general on the following August 22 for his gallant conduct at Front Royal.

In this fight father was arrayed against son, brother against brother, not knowing but that a bullet fired would find lodgment in the body of one whom he loved.

THE FLAME

I'd like to visit you,
But when I'd have gone,
I'd like to have left behind
A happiness,
Because of my presence
With you.

And tbus, wheresoever I'd go
Throughout the journey of life,
I would carry this flame
Of pleasantness
From door to door
To light a little fire
At each portal
That would keep on burning
After I'd gone away.

Bloomington Getting Water Cheap

The city of Piedmont is furnishing water to the people of Bloomington for less than cost, it is said, and has served notice on the Bloomington Water Works Co. that an increase in the charges will be necessary, it was brought out at a meeting of the Piedmont City Council Wednesday of last week.

At the present time Piedmont is supplying water to the Bloomington Water Co. at rates established years ago. The revenue received by the Piedmont city government from the Bloomington people now amounts to from $58 to $61 per quarter. This is sixty per cent of the amount collected by the Bloomington Water Works Co., the forty per cent retained by the latter company to cover billing and collecting the water rent and other incidental expenses.

The city officials have determined that 10 cents per 1000 gallons would be a fair charge to the Bloomington Water Co. for water, and recent meter tests show that Bloomington at this rate consumes each month about $45 worth of water.

At the meeting of the Piedmont council a delegation from Bloomington appeared to discuss the matter of rates. In the delegation were Carroll Pattison, Grant Hershberger and J. H. Miller. Mayor Campbell of Piedmont, told the delegation that the city of Piedmont did not want to work a hardship upon the citizens of Bloomington but wanted to cooperate with them and to serve them in so far as possible.

Mr. Pattison stated that the Bloomington Water Co. is at the mercy of the city of Piedmont as they have no written agreement.

Mr. Hershberger asked for another month in which to consider ways and means to meet the conditions, which was granted by the council.

FORT NECESSITY, ON ROUTE 40, IS TO BE RECONSTUCTED

Restored Historic Structure To Stand As A Memorial to Gen. George Washington

Reconstruction of Fort Necessity, near Uniontown, Pa., and 47 miles northwest of Oakland on Route 40, the scene of General Washington's only capitulation, will be one of the features of the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration, by the State of Pennsylvania in 1932, according to the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

A total of $50,000 has been appropriated for the rebuilding of the fort and making it a national memorial. The British Government has expressed great interest in the project and is expected to send an official delegation to the exercises dedicating the memorial. Officers of the famous Coldstream Guards, of which Braddock was once commander, attended the dedication of the Braddock momument near the site of Fort Necessity some years ago.

It was the capture of Fort Necessity by the French on July 3, 1754, which brought on the seven years' war, our French and Indian War, fought here and in Europe, and which finally resulted in English domination.

Washington was only 22 years old when he commanded this expedition against the French On March 15, 1754, he had been commissioned a lieutenant-colonel of the Virginia regiment whose colonel, Joshua Fry, was ordered to march to the fort of the Ohio Company situated where the Monongahela and Allegheny unite to from the Ohio River.

Washington began his advance thru the wilderness and at Great Meadows fortified a position which he named Fort Necessity. Presently he learned that the French were advancing against him. He did not wait for the attack. Instead, he "set out in a heavy rain, and, in a night as dark as pitch," attacked a party of French and Indians, killed ten, including the French commander, Jumonville, and captured 21 prisoners.

He continued his advance until he learned that a large force was moving against him. He returned to Great Meadows and resumed work at Fort Necessity. Meanwhile Colonel Fry died at Will's Creek, and thus Washington came to command the Virginia regiment. The enemy appeared before the fort on July 3. After fighting all day the French called a parley. They proposed that the Virginians should march out with their arms, on condition that they would not return to the Ohio for one year. As Washington was short of ammunition he agred to these terms, and returned to Virginia with his troops.

For his services he received the thanks of the House of Burgesses. Despite the defeat, the youthful Washington learned a principle at Fort Necessity, which was of decisive importance in the Revolution—he never again allowed himself to be surrounded and beseiged.

While it is not generally remembered, Washington, on December 6, 1770, acquired a tract of land of about 240 acres in Great Meadows on the site of Fort Necessity. This tract of land was the land in Pennsylvania retained by Washington until his death and is listed in the schedule attached to his will, at $6 per acre, or at a value of $1,404.

MANY AUTO MISHAPS DUE TO DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT

Fifty Percent of Accidents Laid To Poor Vision of Drivers

If, in some book of ancient history, you should come across the statement that each year thirty-three thousand human beings were fed to wild beasts in the amphitheatre, you probably would be horrified. It would be diffieult for you to understand such brutal torture of innocent persons and you would thank your stars that you were living in a more civllized day and age. Yet, that many people and even more, are each year needlessly sacrificed in traffic accidents in the United States. Those pagan ancestors of ours and those uncivilized tribes still on earth that make a practice of offering up human sacrifice to propitiate their god never dreamed of the wholesale slaughter which we permit each year as the natural right of our modern god of steel, the automoblle.

The seriousness of this problem of traffic aceidents is well understood by leaders in public life and strenuous efforts are being made to solve them. Commissions have been appointed to study the subject and conferences have been held to diseuss ways and means of minimizing this menace. One State association for public safety which made an exhaustlve survey of the cause of automobile aceidents, eame to the conclusion that fifty per cent of them are due to defectlve eyesight. The present day automobile has been brought to sueh mechanical perefction that less than five pereent of traffic accidents can be laid to mechanical defects.

It should be a simule matter to require every applicant for a driver's license to take a visual test in order to be sure that he or she can drive with safety on the public highways. At present only ten states, New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Vermont, Connecticut and California, safeguard their citizens by such a test.

Accidents are increasing to such an alarming extent that it seems pretty certain the day is not far distant when the driver of a motor car will be subjected to just as rigid an examination on his ability to drive and see as is the locomotive engineer today.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Secretary Baker and I had frequently discussed the question of a supreme allied commander, and we were both ready to accept it in principle when proposed.

In response to a notice from Premier Clemencenu I went, April 3, to Beauvais to meet with the supreme war council. Arriving early, Colonel Boyd and I had to wait an hour at the hotel de ville before M. Clemenceau and Lloyd George came into the conference room. Marshal Haig, General Foch, Petain, Sir Henry Wilson, Bliss, Weygnud and myself were the others participating.

Brigadier General Spiers acted as interpreter, and Lieut. Col. Sir Maurice Hankey, who usually accompanied Mr. Lloyd George, as recorder. The meeting was finally called to order by M. Clemenceau, who stated its purpose, saying in substance:

"We have come together to settle a very simple question regarding the functions of General Foch. I think we are all in agreement as to the co-ordination of allied action, but there is some difference in the understanding of General Foch's powers as conferred upon him at the Doullens conference of March 26. General Foch will explain his difficulties."

Foch Calls for Action.

General Foch then set forth briefly his situation, as follows:

"The powers conferred by the Doullens conference were limited to the co-ordination of action between the allies. They were conferred while the action was on. The power to co-ordinate has been construed to be limited to the time the allies were in action. That was March 26 at Doullens. Now we are at April 3.

"Now that the two opposing armies are no longer in action but have stopped and are facing each other, there is nothing to co-ordinate. There should be authority to prepare for action and direct it. So we are right back where we were, and nothing can be done until an action starts again."

Lloyd George Pleads for Unity.

Mr. Lloyd George then entered the discussion, saying substantially:

"We have had more than three years of this war and we have not had unity of action during that time. During the last year we have had two kinds of strategy, one by Haig and another by Petain, both different, and nothing has been gained. The only thing that was accomplished was by General Nivelle, when he was in supreme command.

"General Foch is now empowered to co-ordinate the action of the allied armies, but this does not go far enough, as he has no authority to control except by conferring with the respective commanders in chief. He wants authority to prepare for action. I think the resolution made at Doullens should be modified so that we may have a better understanding. I should like to hear what General Bliss and General Pershing have to say."

Pershing Gives His Views.

I then gave my view, which was set forth in a brief memorandum prepared in pencil after the discussion began, as follows:

"The principle of unity of command is undoubtedly the correct one for the allies to follow. I do not believe it is possible to have unity of action without a supreme commander. We have already had experience enough in trying to co-ordinate the operations of the allied armies, without success. There has never been real unity of action.

"Such co-ordination between two or three armies is impossible no matter who the commander in chief may be. Each commander in chief is interested in his own army and cannot get the other commander's point of view nor grasp the problem as a whole. I am in favor of a supreme commander and believe that the success of the allied cause depends upon it.

"I think the necessary action should be taken by this council at once. I am in favor of conferring the supreme command upon General Foch."

When I had finished Mr. Lloyd George came over to where I sat, took me by the hand and said:

"I agree fully with General Pershing. This is well put."

After some further informal discussion, a draft of the resolution was submitted which omitted reference to the American army. Whereupon I called attention to the oversight, saying:

"I think this resolution should include the American army. The arrangement is to be in force, as I understand it, from now on, and the American army will soon be ready to function as such and should be included as an entity like the British and French armies."

"There is no American army yet as such," General Petain interjected, "as its units are either in training or are amalgamated with the British and French."

Pershing Has U. S. Included.

"There may not be an American army in force functioning now," I replied, "but there soon will be, and I want this resolution to apply to it when it becomes a fact. The American government is represented here at this conference and in the war, and any action as to the supreme command that includes the British and French armies should also include the American army."

The foregoing account of the conference may not be an exact record of the language used, but it is given as my aid took it down.

The following resolution was then read and adopted:

"General Foch is charged by the British, French and American governments with the co-ordination of the action of the allied armies on the western front; to this end there is conferred on him all the power necessary for its effective realization. To the same end the British, French and American governments confide in General Foch the strategic direction of military operations.

"The commanders in chief of the British, French and American armies will exercise to the fullest extent the tactical direction of their armies. Each commander in chief will have the right to appeal to his government if in his opinion his army is placed in danger by the instructions received from General Foch."

Allied Commander in Chief.

The idea of an allied commander in chief had been suggested and discussed many times unofficially, but for various reasons, political and otherwise, it had never been definitely adopted by the supreme war council. With the distrust that existed among the allies, it was not easy to bring about the decision in favor of a supreme commander, and it was made possible only by the extreme emergency of the situation.

The designation of General Foch as commander in chief of the allied armies in France was proposed by the French. April 15 I received a letter from M. Clemenceau advising me that Mr. Lloyd George had approved the suggestion, and asked if I agreed. I replied in a personal note expressing my agreement subject to the confirmation of President Wilson, which came April 17.

Once the question of supreme command was settled the co-ordinated energies of the allied armies could be directed with maximum effect toward a common end. While dark days were still ahead, we were spared the chagrin of inefficiency through lack of teamwork.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Now that the supreme effort must be made on our part and when units were sorely needed for immediate active service it was found, much to my surprise, that, although the divisions then coming to France had been under training for six months or even more, they still contained a large percentage of untrained men.

As already pointed out, the general staff, when called upon to provide men for special services, had relied upon taking them from combat divisions instead of anticipating such requirements and segregating these specialists from the start and training them as such.

This was a most vicious application in time of war of a very objectionable practice that had grown up in our army in time of peace. It appears that during the preparation of our armies in the World war no other plan was followed and the practice was carried to such an extent that divisions with, say, 25,000 men, which should have been held intact and each one perfected as an organized team, were constantly called upon to send large groups of their trained soldiers to other duties.

Inspects Available Divisions.

In view of their possible early employment I wanted especially to look into the general state of efficiency of our available divisions and give some personal instructions about training. Going the rounds, I met General Hirschauer, who was one of the able French generals, and found him very enthusiastic about the Second, which had been in line at Sommedieu under his command, confirming my own opinion formed from observation and reports. He said that without doubt it was then as efficient as any of his French divisions. The First was further advanced than any of the others and its morale was high at the prospect of going into the battle line.

Recent developments had brought the question of the employment of American troops into immediate consideration. The President's qualified approval of the recommendation of the supreme war council, as embodied in joint note No. 18, was seized upon by the allies and construed as a concession for the unlimited absorption of our troops in their armies.

No doubt my offer to General Foch lent encouragement to the allied view.

On the day of Secretary Baker's departure General Wickham and General Hutchinson came over from the British war office to discuss arrangements for transportation of American troops in accordance with the provisions of joint note No. 18. The conversation indicated that the British understood we were to send 60,000 men per month to train with them and that they were bringing over the same number, making a total of 120,000 per month, beginning with April. They held that the approval of note No. 18 had superseded agreements previously made, including the six-division plan.

Baker Speaks Plainly.

The British conferees entirely ignored the specific condition that the final arrangements as to training and disposition of all our units were to be left in my hands. Their error was pointed out and Mr. Baker then said:

"What is pertinent to the present discussion is that American troops are going to the British for training. I don't want the British public or army or the French public or army to get an exaggerated idea that this scheme provides or will provide a means by which their losses will be made up in the future.

"I want no feeling of disillusionment when General Pershing calls for the troops intrusted to them for training."

Mr. Baker's visit to our armies during this critical period was fortuitous, as the problems that confronted us could then be seen in their true perspective. He had an opportunity to meet the allied leaders, both civil and military, and get in touch with conditions in the different countries.

Of still greater importance, he saw with his own eyes the building of our organization. He was a keen observer, with clear understanding and a logical mind, and obtained in a short time an accurate conception of our task and its difficulties.

As to our relations, he gave me from the start that strong and sympathetic support which means so much to a military commander in the field.

Feared British Were Lagging.

Before Mr. Baker sailed for home I had sent him the letter quoted below, and, although we later discussed its contents briefly, it is given as showing the reaction of at least part of the British press at the time:

"April 5, 1918.—Dear Mr. Secretary: I noticed the other day that one of the British papers, in referring to the fact that plans had been made to send American troops to the assistance of the allies, stated that this would relieve the British of the necessity of depleting the strength of the forces kept at home for defensive purposes.

"This suggests to my mind a certain political phase of the British situation which may give us additional explanation as to why Mr. Lloyd George and British representatives are so urgent in their appeals for assistance from America.

"Following this further, may I suggest that you give the matter serious thought? There is so very much at stake for us that it seems to me very frank representations should be made to the British government as to the urgency of their putting into the army every possible man that can be mustered to meet the immediate emergency. . . .

"It may be that you would think it advisable to go to London, or else to intimate to the President by cable the urgency of Great Britain's putting into the ranks every possible man to withstand the present German onslaught, even if they have to promise to withdraw them in six months, and of their doing so without waiting on us or counting on us in the slightest degree. There will be few enough men even with the best we all can do. It will be time enough for Great Britain to consider the defense of England after she has put forth every possible energy on the continent. Here is the place to beat Germany, and not on British soil. In writing this I have in mind what you told me regarding available men in England."

CHAPTER XXXV

On April 12, 1918, Washington reported a 140,000 increase in cargo tonnage by the use of Dutch ships. Infantry and machine-gun personnel of four divisions were promised for that month.

The allies were at last thoroughly alive to the necessity of an extraordinary effort to provide tonnage for transporting our troops. After months of delay and discussion they realized fully that the superiority of forces vitally necessary to avert defeat must come from across the Atlantic.

America had become their sole reliance, not only for the forces necessary to save them from defeat but for unlimited financial aid as well.

Mr. Baker's first-hand knowledge of the situation in France enabled him to give a fresh impetus to the efforts of the War department. With Gen. Peyton C. March as chief of staff, the general staff and the supply departments began to exert more energy. The war industries board, reorganized under the leadership of B. M. Baruch, had taken definite control and direction of the nation's industries with the sole aim of aiding us to win the war. In the face of the crisis, activity at home had at last replaced the apparent deliberation of our first year in the war. Our hope for an improvement in methods and a more competent co-ordination of effort seemed about to be realized.

First Division Moves Up.

At Petain's request the First division was withdrawn from the line near Toul and sent to Chaumont-en-Vexin, northwest of Paris, to go into an active sector. I visited the division April 16 to witness the division's final maneuver in open warfare before taking its place on the front. Both officers and men were in splendid condition, notwithstanding their long rail journey, and all were ready for the test of actual battle.

General Michelier, who commanded the French Fifth army, to which the First had been assigned, came along to witness the maneuver, and spoke highly of the troops and their efficiency. The weather was clear, but still rather sharp. The countryside was radiant with its green meadows and early flowers, and one could not help thinking how different would be those other fields on which this unit would soon be engaged.

Lack of Regular Officers.

It is a comparatively simple matter to absorb partly trained recruits in veteran organizations, but it is an enormous and difficult task to create organizations entirely of new material. There was a serious lack of regular officers in our organization in both staff and line. The I corps had only 7 per cent of officers from the regular army. Less than 1 per cent of all captains of the line in the A. E. F. at that time had been in the service a year, and the thought of possible immediate activity with such inexperienced leaders was not reassuring.

It was a source of real regret to me not to command the First division in person, and this, coupled with the fact that its entry into the battle was of considerable moment, led me to speak a word of confidence and encouragement. When the officers, about 900 in all, were assembled in the grounds of the chateau occupied as division headquarters they formed a rare group.

These splendid-looking men, hardened by the strenuous work of the fall and by two months in winter trenches, fairly radiated the spirit of courage and gave promise that America's effort would prove her sons the equals of their forefathers.

The First division saw its first major offensive some six weeks later, a brilliant counterattack at Cantigny, in the Amiens sector.

Wanted the A. E. F. United.

That afternoon I motored to Sarcus to see General Foch and sound him out regarding the prospects of uniting our divisions in a sector of our own. I told him that the secretary of war when in France had expressed an earnest desire to hasten the formation of an American army and that this was also the wish of the President.

It was my opinion, I said, that early action would be of great importance in stimulating the morale of our troops and of our people. Now that the First division was to go into line the people at home would expect soon to hear that an American army was engaged on its own front. I suggested the possibility that the corps might be assembled near the First division as a beginning.

General Foch agreed in principle to the suggestion, but was uncertain when the other divisions could be spared, which I, of course, fully appreciated. He pointed out that the enemy was very aggressive and referred to the severe attack against the British on the Lys between Lens and Ypres, which began on the 9th and was still in progress. But looking beyond, I insisted that the Twenty-sixth and Forty-second divisions might be withdrawn at any time from quiet sectors, to be followed by the Second and the Thirty-second and also the Third a few days later.

I pointed out that this force of six divisions, including the First, would equal twelve French divisions, and gave it as my opinion that it would be better to use this American group for active operations than to detain the units in quiet sectors and send French divisions to the battle front.

My understanding after this discussion was very definite that the plan would soon be carried out, leaving the exact time and place to be determined. It was immaterial to me just where it should occur, the point being to get it done.

Hard Fighting on the Lys.

The German offensive on the Lys was another formidable effort to break the British line. The attack was made to the north and south of Armentieres on a front of 24 miles by 27 German divisions. The exhausted British, though they fought with most commendable courage and skill, were forced again to yield with heavy losses to themselves and the Portuguese, consisting of two divisions, who were with them.

Several French divisions were hurried to the Lys front, but it was a week after the attack began before they were put into the line. They then relieved British divisions at the famous Kemmel hill, only to be surprised and defeated themselves April 25, much to their chagrin. The battle was practically ended by the last of the month, with a gain by the Germans of ten or eleven miles and the capture of important territory from the British, but with failure to take Hazebrouck.

IN BEHALF OF THE CHILDREN OF THE NATION

The officers of the National Education Association, speaking for the Association's 220,000 members and in the name of the teaching profession of America, has reaffirmed the Association's historic belief in the importance of education in American life.

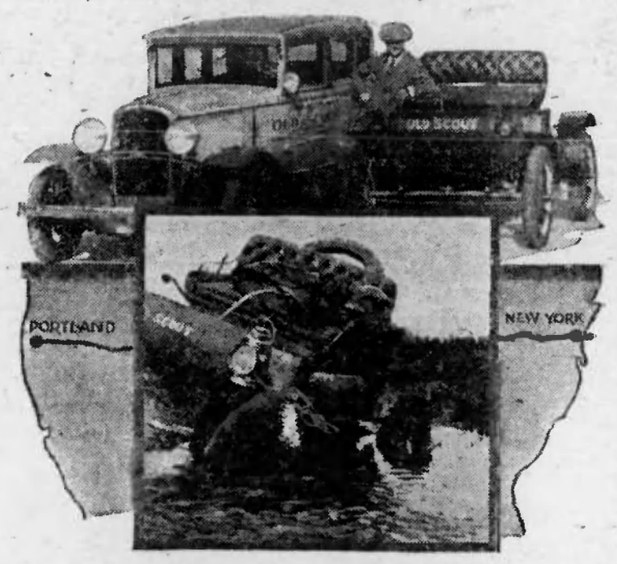
We regret and condemn shortsighted proposals, now current in certain communities, to cripple needlessly the effectiveness of the schools by undiscriminating and drastic reductions in the salary schedules of teachers. We condemn these proposals because they involve a grave injustice to the schools and the teaching profession, because they attack American ideals and well-being at their source, and because they would rob the children of the Nation of their just educational rights.

Common justice demands that income reductions should not be exacted from those least able to bear the loss. Teaching has always been an underpaid profession. Increases in teachers' salaries have always been accompanied by higher standards of preparation, requiring large investments of time and money in professional education. The teacher today is paid only seventy per cent as much as the average gainfully occupied person. The quality of teaching largely determines the future of childhood. Teaching is already at an economic disadvantage; to increase that disadvantage is to strike the schools at their most vulnerable point and to weaken the one institution which can contribute most to the recovery of prosperity.

The welfare and stability of the Nation depends on a continuously effective educational system. To cripple the schools, even for a year or two, means an irreparable loss in national health, stability, culture, leadership, and citizenship. We must not forget the lessons of the World War—the utter helplessness of the illiterate and untrained man to cooperate effectively with others, the tragic wastefulness of poor schools or no schools at all. As citizens we re-direct the attention of this country to these lessons. Temporary difficulties do not excuse the working of permanent harm.

Every child born in America has a right to an adequate education—a right guaranteed by the state constitutions and implied by democratic government. The failure of our own generation to face and solve the problem of economic depressions should strengthen our determination that the new generation shall be better fitted to cope with these and other problems of modern life. We call upon the fathers and mothers of the Nation to reaffirm the American faith in education and to resist firmly any attempt to handicap their children by driving the best teachers out of the profession. The rising generation must not be forced to pay the price of the present generation's failures and blunders. Such a sacrifice of childhood's opportunity is utterly unnecessary. Given equitable and proper methods of taxation, this country is wealthy enough to give every child its American birthright—a generous education under the direction of trained and competent teachers.

Famed Auto of 1905 On Good Roads Tour



Same Driver Piloting One-Cylinder Oldsmobile Across Country

New York City.....: One phase of the remarkable progress made in this country in the past quarter of a century—that of individual transportation—is being strikingly demonstrated by a convoy of automobiles which has just started from this city to retrace the route of the first trans-continental automobile race. The caravan is led by the same car, driven by the same man, who won that first race in 1905.

This first cross country automobile race in 1905 was sponsored by a representative of the federal good roads bureau. It was won by Dwight B. Huss, driving a curved dash Oldsmobile powered with a single cylinder, seven horse power motor. The route from New York City to Portland, Ore., was traversed in 44 days, Huss arriving at Portland just an hour before the opening of the National Good Roads Convention to which he was a delegate from Michigan.

The 1931 tour now being made by Huss and the same little Oldsmobile is a tribute to the building and extension of modern highways that have made present day motoring possible. It is endorsed by Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, and numerous public officials interested in highway development.

The 1905 trans-continental race was far more than a sporting contest. It was a test of the capabilities of the then-derided automobile. The fact that these motoring pioneers succeeded in overcoming all obstacles in crossing the country over this difficult route did much to advance the automobile in the minds of the nation. The race also demonstrated the crying need for improved highways and is credited with giving the first stimulus to road building in many states.

Conditions encountered by these early racers are unbelievable today. They traveled in seas of water and mud with telegraph poles as the only indication of where the road might be: they were forced to ford streams with water above the floor boards; rutted, baked-clay roads wore out a set of tires in 90 miles; one day they scored 64 miles in 17½ hours driving; for days they drove over unmarked prairies and deserts—these were a few of the terrific obstacles they encountered. That they won through to the finish astounded the country.

During the present tour Huss, the winner of that early special event, will speak before civic organizations in scores of cities and towns. He will contrast the roads of 1905 with those of 1931 and describe the benefits derived from improved highways. He will be accompanied on his tour by a convoy of Oldsmobiles which, when compared to his 1905 "Old Scout," will forcefully depict the advancements made in motor cars as well as in highways.

GRANGE MILLING COMPANY CLOSES SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Declares a Six Percent Cash Dividend and Pays Five Percent On Cash Capital of Members

WAS ORGANIZED IN 1921

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Grange Milling and Supply Company, Loch Lynn Heights, on last Saturday, a report of R. W. Watson, manager, showed a six percent cash dividend to the stockholders and in addition the payment of five per cent on the cash capital invested by the members.

In the light of the depression in various parts of the country, this record is considered as highly satisfactory by those holding stock in the company.

The company was organized on September 21, 1921, through the efforts of James A. Towler, at that time county agent of Garrett county. It is a co-operative company, composed of 118 farmer-members, all from this county, and is engaged in handling flonr, feed, fertilizer, cement, farm machinery, etc., and is being successfnlly managed by R. W. Watson, who was selected to take charge of the affairs of the company in 1924.

Since the organization of this company it has grown steadily and has never failed to pay a dividend. The board of directors is composed of D. E. Orendorf, H. V. Leighton, J. D. Harvey, Edward Sembower, H. L. Porter, H. F. Paugh, G. L. Ridder and James A. Towler.

The annual meeting on Saturday took the form of a basket picnic which was attended by fifty-two of the members. Mr. Watson's report was read at this time, which showed that after providing for salaries, taxes, interest, insurance and all overhead, the company had declared a six percent cash dividend and in addition paid to the members five per cent of the cash capital invested by them. This five percent on capital invested by members has been paid for the past five years, thus returning to them in that period one-fourth of their cash outlay in establishing the business.

Considering that cooperative enterprises are at times conducted with indifferent success, the members and directors expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the management and the care with which the business had been conduceted by Mr. Watson.

Watermelon Pickle

The following recipe for watermelon pickle has been furnished The Republican for publication by an Oakland woman:

Cut the watermelon rind into strips and boil in salted water—use an even tablespoon of salt to each quart of water. Cook until tender, then drain thoroughly; rinse in warm water. Prepare a syrup of one quart of vinegar, 4 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of brown sugar; add spices, either whole or ground. If you use ground spices, tie in a cheese cloth bag—one tablespoon each of cinnamon, cloves and allspice makes a good proportion. Cook the syrup and then add the melon; let it boil together well. It looks clear when done. Put in glass jars while hot.

Watermelon Preserve with Ginger—Peel and cut the watermelon rind in strips; let stand over night in water to which has been added one teaspoon of crushed alum and two tablespoons of salt. In the morning drain and wipe dry. Weigh the rind, taking equal weight of sugar. Cook the melon slowly in water to which has been added a coffee cup of vinegar and two ounces of ginger root. Cook about an hour, then use the water in which the melon has been cooking to make the syrup. Add the sugar, 1 cup of brown sugar to three of white gives it a good color; add 2 lemons, sliced, juice of two lemons, 6 pieces of stick cinnamon, same amount of cloves. Cook until clear.

Here's a pretty howdy do, or kettle of fish, or something. Cigarette company is warning the girls that if they don't smoke Lucky Strikes their Adam's apples are liable to go kerflooey at any minute, and a day or so ago a ship's doctor at New Orleans who discovered a girl disguised as a boy in the ship's crew said he knew she was a girl the moment he saw her because she had no Adam's apple. Take your slate and pencil and figure that, if you can.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS TO CONVENE FRIDAY, JULY 31

Outstanding Teachers Engaged to Discuss Religious Topics and Problems of Youth

SESSIONS END AUGUST 6

Plans have been completed for the Fifteenth Annual Session of the Fifteenth Session of the Mountain Lake Park Interdenominational Summer School of Missions, which will be held July 31 to August 6, inclusive, and representatives of many religious bodies from every section of the country are preparing to attend.

The session begins Friday evening, July 31, with a reception for the delegates at Camp Gleam, a girls' camp held in connection with the school.

Beginning Saturday, August 1, and continuing until Thursday, August 6, a series of Bible Study meetings will be held by Dr. Harriet B. Jones, of West Virginia.

Other classes include the Foreign Text Book, by Mrs. F. I. Johnson, President of the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions, who recently returned from a trip around the world; Home Text Book, Mrs. Dan B. Brummit; Missionary Methods, by Mrs. C. K. Lippard, Superintendent of the Light Brigade of the United Lutheran Church in America; Story Telling and Technique, Mrs. W. W. Grant, of Oakland, and others. There will also be lectures by missionaries and noted speakers on topics of interest, including prohibition, lawlessness, citizenship and problems of youth.

Camp Gleam, for young people, will have Miss Anna Shaw, of near Baltimore, as its superintendent, where classes in Bible study, missions, pageantry and teaching will be conducted, followed every afternoon in recreation activities.

Saturday evening, August 1, World Prohibition will be the subject of an address by Miss Lily Grace Matheson, field secretary of the National W. C. T. U.

Severe Electrical Storm Hits Garrett County

One of the most severe electrical storms of the present year visited this section last Thursday afternoon, accompanied by a high wind which uprooted a number of trees and damaged crops to a considerable extent.

Electric current was cut off for three hours in Oakland when lightning struck one of the transformers at the south edge of town, while wind and hail were responsible for demolishing the brick chimney on the Browning House, Oakland; some of the hothouses at Weber's and blowing over trees on the property of the Misses Miller on Second street; and on the lawn of D. E. Offutt, Second street; a vacant lot at the north edge of town and a number of properties in Mt. Lake Park.

Lightning struck the property of William Edgar, of Mt. Lake, and electric bolts were responsible for snapping off large limbs from trees throughout the community.

Rainfall during July thus far has reached three inches, and is already more than the rainfall during the entire month last year, it having reached only 1:91 for July of 1930.

Serious Accident Is Averted

What might have proved a serious accident took place Sunday evening when the rear axle of a Ford car driven by Wellington Yutzy broke as he was enroute to Cumberland, at a point along route 37, at the north edge of town.

Neither Mr. Yutzy nor Miss Margaret Kahl, the other occupant of the car, was injured. The right rear wheel of the car came off as the axle broke, and it was with great difficulty that the driver was able to keep from turning over.

St. Paul's M. E. Church To Have Morning Worship Only

At the Official Board meeting of St. Paul's M. E. church last Monday evening it was decided to eliminate the evening worship for the first four Sundays in August, and urge attendance at the morning worship.

Next Sunday morning it is hoped to have one of the ministers from Baltimore Conference to preach.

In the evening we worship with our brethren of St. Mark's Lutheran church, the pastor of St. Paul's church to be the messenger. The public is cordially invited to these services.

Four Injured in Auto Wrecks

Three persons received minor injuries Monday evening when the automobile in which they were riding skidded on the wet road of the Crellin-Oakland highway at the Washington Spring curve, and turned over.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Thompson received superficial cuts and bruises, and C. E. Lodge received a lacerated scalp. All were from Martinsburg, W. Va., and were returning from Morgantown, W. Va., where Mr. and Mrs. Thompson had just been married.

M. S. McGovney, Tunnelton, was slightly injured Saturday night at King's hill, about three miles north of town on route 37, when his car overturned.

KNIGHTS LAY PLANS FOR LABOR DAY FESTIVITIES

Will Hold Twelfth Annual Celebration on September 7th

That the Knights of Pythias would hold their annual picnic at the usual time, that of Labor Day, September 7, was decided at a meeting of the lodge held last Friday evening, and preliminary plans for the celebration were made at that time.

The Garrett County Agricultural Fair association invited the Knights to join with them this year in an effort to have one mammoth celebration which would be successful both financially and socially, but after a lengthy discussion at the meeting on Friday, the majority favored continuing the picnic at the regular date because many people had come to regard the Pythian outing as a permanent affair on Labor Day and something for which to look forward.

The twelfth annual celebration will be held in Helbig's Grove, along the State road at the north edge of town on Monday, September 7. Edward P. Kahl was named as manager with Paul Riley, Stanley Bond, George Fulk, and Stanley Stahl, officers of the lodge, as the executive committee. The committee will hold weekly meetings.

Committees were appointed at a meeting of the executive board last evening and included the following: speaker, A. T. Matthews, Wade H. Hinebaugh, M. W. Mann; parade, A. R. Martin, Guy O. Yutzy, Ray Teets; advertising and publicity, Harry Stemple, James Bell, C. C. Reckard; finance, Walter Hardesty, Charles F. White.

It was decided that an automobile would be given away on that day.

STATE FORESTER TALKS AT MEETNIG OF ROTARY

Forestry Department Now Owns 26,000 Acres in Garrett County

"The State's Policy in Setting up State Forests," was the subject of an address by F. W. Besley, State forester, before the Oakland Rotary club at the weekly meeting in the William-James hotel last Friday evening.

That the State was continuing to buy land for State forest reserves was pointed out by Mr. Besley who said that the forestry department now owned about 26,000 acres of land in Garrett county. "The price paid for land purchased to date varies from 50 cents per acre to $2.00 per acre, with the average price about $1.50."

"The State does not pay county taxes on this land," Mr. Besley continued, "but by law enacted by the last Legislature at the request of the Forestry department, the State pays to the county treasurer fifteen percent of all the gross revenue derived from the State forests. This is estimated over a period of years to more than equal the loss in taxes.

"The State forests are protected and managed primarily for timber production but under State control other important uses are served such as water conservation, protection of game and wild life, and providing desirable recreation areas for public use. These lands are open to hunting and fishing during the open seasons.

"The State is acquiring lands suited only for timber growing and watershed protection when they can be obtained in sufficiently large tracts for economic administration," Mr. Besley stated.

"With better protection and good forest management those lands of low value, such as are now reverting to the county for taxes, will be restored to productive use and become a valuable asset not only for the communities in which they are located but for the benefit of the state," he concluded.

Man, Posing as Upholsterer, Disappears with Valuable Furniture of Oaklanders

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of Earl Klingensmith, who has been in Oakland for the past several weeks posing as an upholsterer. He is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses and with larceny of goods.

Klingensmith advertised in both county papers that he upholstered furniture, and rebuilt old furniture at reasonable prices. Small pieces of furniture were repaired and returned to the owners, but in some instances he received large articles, many of them valuable in point of antiquity and usefulness which he did not return.

These he took to his place of business at McHenry. But when someone of his customers happened to call on him Saturday evening at McHenry, he had disappeared, taking with him a truckload of furniture obtained from citizens of Oakland and other parts of the county.

County authorities are investigating.

130 ACRES OF POTATOES ARE INSPECTED BY JEHLE

68 Accepted for Certification—To Make Three More Inspections

One hundred thirty acres of potatoes, owned by 26 adult farmers and 36 members of potato clubs were inspected during the past week by Dr. R. A. Jehle, potato specialist, University of Maryland Extension service, in continuing the potato improvement program started last year through John H. Carter, county agent, in cooperation with the Extension service.

Of the 35¾ acres owned by club members 31¾ passed the inspection, while 4 were turned down because of virus diseases. Of the 94½ acres owned by adult farmers, 37 were accepted. Of the 57¼ acres disqualified, 48 were on account of virus diseases, and 9¼ on account of mixed varieties.

"The inspection shows that good seed can be produced in the county over a period of years without going north for new stock," Mr. Carter stated. This quality of good seed necessary to pass certification and produce high yields can be attained only if the farmers will clean out diseased plants thoroughly.

There will be one more field inspection on July 27, and two bin inspections before potatoes will be given the grade of certified seed. The first bin inspection will be at the harvest, and the second at the time the potatoes are marketed. Those passing the inspection will be properly marked by the State.

Ministers' Outing To Be Held on August 3.

The Mountain Top Ministers' outing, which was scheduled to be held on Monday, July 13th, was postponed until Monday, August 3rd, when the ministers and their families will gather at Table Rock. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Rev. D. C. Trimble will read a paper on "Barthianism."

TEST IS BEING MADE FOR TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE

State Hopes To Make Garrett County an Accredited One

That the State of Maryland was conducting a Tuberculin test of all cattle in Garrett county, was announced yesterday by John H. Carter, county agent. It is the intention to make Garrett county an accredited one, and it is hoped to test all cattle within the next several weeks.

Three veterinarians are now at work, two at Oakland, and one in the Grantsville section, and beginning next week there will be one at Friendsville, and one in the Ryan's Glade section. The test is made without cost to the county, except a slight expense connected with showing the veterinarians where farmers who raise cattle reside.

First Test Made in 1928

The first test of cattle for tuberculosis in this county was made in the summer of 1928 when it was found that only twenty out of 2,705 reacted to the test, the lowest record in the entire State of Maryland.

The State testing of herds for tubercular cattle and the subsequent elimination of poor stock has increased the average production of milk more than fifty percent on many farms, according to estimates made by dairy interests on the Eastern shore.

When reactors are located the tuberculosis board allows purebred animals to be appraised as high as $150; grades, $75, and the farmer is paid two-thirds the value of the animal that is condemned and slaughtered.

A report of the present test will be made within the next week or two, Mr. Carter stated.

Misses Genevieve Hayden and Neli Fahey, of Grafton, spent several days recently at the Fahey farm south of Oakland.

PROGRAM CHAIRMAN OF MISSION SCHOOL AT MT. LAKE TELLS OF HER TEN MONTHS' TRIP AROUND THE WORLD

Study Is Made of Conditions of Childhood and Missionary Work In Foreign Countries

MISSIONARIES CAPABLE

A ten-months' round-the-world trip to study generally conditions and situations connected with missionary work, the conditions of childhood in various countries, and the effect of moving pictures in foreign countries, has given Rev. and Mrs. F. I. Johnson, of New York City, the latter program chairman of the Interdenominational Summer School of Missions of Mt. Lake Park, a remarkable fund of knowledge which is expected to produce its effects on the missionary activities in this country and Canada in the near future, through meetings similar to that which will be held at Mt. Lake Park from July 31 to August 6.

Rev. and Mrs. Johnson left New York last October with three objectives in mind: to study conditions of childhood, the moving picture situation, and the general conditions and situations connected with missionary work of all denominations. Mr. Johnson is business manager of the Board of Foreign Missions, New York, and Mrs. Johnson is president of the Interdenominational Board of Federated Mission societies of the United States and Canada. They have been actively associated with the Summer School of Missions of the Park and are well known in this locality for their religious work. They returned early in July to tell of their experiences and conclusions reached on the world problems which were before them.

During their trip they had conferences with men and women high in political and social life and in a great many missions, including Prince Takugawa, president of the House of Peers of Japanese Parliament; Viscount Saito, Government General of Korea, and Mr. Oda, Secretary to the Government of Korea; Madam Chiang Kai Shih, wife of the president of China; Mr. Ghandi and Dr. Mehti, of India, and many others.

"Many of our most fruitful ideas were obtained from groups of nationals assembled in the various countries," Mrs. Johnson stated yesterday morning. "In every country two things seemed to loom largest, the needfor more schools for children, and more playgrounds.

"In Japan ninety-five percent of imported moving pictures are made in the United States. I attended moving pictures in most of the 36 countries visited and found that U. S., Germany, and Japan excepted, released the highest type of films, although I found a great need of improvement in themes, and adaptation to oriental psychology.

"Censorship bureaus of Japan, Siam and Turkey are going to make it impossible for films carrying false ideas of family life in the U. S. to be shown in their countries. This may aid in making American producers of films more careful in the selection of themes to be filmed.

Missionaries Capsble

"As to missionary work around the world our opinion is that there is no more capable, far-seeing, business-like group of people in the world than those we call missionary groups. With few exceptions, they were statesmen

HORSE RACING TO BE FEATURE OF FIFTEENTH ANNUAL FAIR; STATE RACING COMMISSION SANCTIONS PLAN

Association Figuring On Half-Mile Track at Fair Grounds to Be Ready September 15

PREMIUM LIST OUT SOON

That horse racing would be inaugurated in Garrett county to assure the success of the fifteenth annual agricultural fair was announced this morning by John W. Snyder, president of the National Real Estate and Development company of Cumberland, who has been in communication with the Maryland Racing Commission and the Garrett county agricultural fair association for the past several weeks.

The association is planning to promote a half-mile track at the Fair grounds, Oakland, which will be ready September 15, the opening day of the 1931 exhibition, according to Henry M. Speicher, secretary and general manager.

This is the first time in the history of Garrett county, that an enterprise of this nature has been started. "Garrett county is ideally situated for an event of this kind," Mr. Snyder said, "and now with modern roads and fast cars Oakland is within easy reach of over a million people. There is no other attraction which will please and draw the crowds as much as the ponies. This move should have the cooperation of every man, woman and child of Garrett county, as it will stimulate business from the influx of strangers and it is bound to increase the value of real estate to metropolitan prices," Mr. Snyder concluded.

The Fair association has secured assurance from the Maryland Racing Commission under the laws of Maryland, and an agreement has been reached whereby Garrett county may conduct horse racing. No wagering or betting is to be permitted.

Mr. Snyder and Charles Longerbeam, treasurer of the National Real Estate and Development company, of Cumberland, were in Oakland and Garrett county on Tuesday conferring with members of the association, interested citizens and a number of farmers, and as a result of interviews both feel that the majority of the people would like to see the Garrett county Agricultural fair become a financial success, and as a means to that end favor the inauguration of racing events at the Fair grounds.

Premium List Out Soon

Material for the catalog and premium list is being collected and will be ready for the printer within a few days, Mr. Speicher stated. The premium list has been somewhat revised and since all premiums have been paid within the past few years, more and more people of the county plan to enter exhibits.

Farmers should already be selecting material from their ripened crops, in the opinion of Mr. Speicher. In this way, he stated, their best exhibits will be shown and chances for prizes made greater.

Coffman-Fisher Store Moves to Larger Building

The Coffman-Fisher store, men's and women's outfitters, for the past several years occupying part of the Miller building, corner Second and Liberty streets, is moving the stock of goods from that location to the Offutt building, until recently occupied by G. A. Fraley & Son, merchants, where business by the new occupants will be conducted as usual.

Mr. I. R. Rudy, manager of the store, who has made many friends in the community by his genial personality and fair dealing with the public, will continue in charge of the business here assisted by a corps of clerks.

In the advertising columns of The Republican today the firm announces its removal to its new quarters and offers special inducements upon the opening day—Friday, July 24.

ALLEGANY-GARRETT CLUB BOYS CAMPING ON LAKE

Second Annual Outing Being Conducted This Week on Deep Creek

About 45 4-H club boys of Allegany and Garrett counties are holding their second annual encampment at the Oakland Boy Scout camp on Deep Creek Lake, having arrived there on Tuesday morning.

The camp is in charge of Milo S. Downey, assistant county agent of Allegany county, and John H. Carter, county agent of Garrett county. Twenty-five of the campers are from Allegany county, and 20 are from Garrett. Washington county has one representative.

Mr. E. G. Jenkins, State boys' club agent, and Richard Kilbourne, extension forester of the University of Maryland, will be present. Regular routine camp work will be taken up in the morning while in the afternoon games will be played and an educational program, new to the club members, will be carried out. Vesper services will be conducted at 7 o'clock and a camp fire program will follow at 8 o'clock. Only 4-H club members who are in good standing are eligible to attend the camp.

Stuart F. Hamill Named President of Bar Association

At a meeting of the Garrett County Bar Association held in the office of Attorney F. A. Thayer last Friday officers were elected for the following year as follows: President, Stuart F. Hamill; vice-president, E. R. Jones; secretary-treasurer, Walter W. Dawson.

It was decided by the members of the Bar to observe the half-day holiday plan which has been followed for some years, commencing on Monday, July 27, and extending to and including Saturday, August 8. During this period the various law offices will be open for business as usual until noon each day and will then be closed for the afternoon and evening. The attorneys have requested that this announcement be made and all persons having occasion to see them on business matters during the two weeks asked to call at their office during the morning hours. Only matters of an emergency nature will be taken up in the afternoons.

Persons having state business needing attention or requiring the services of the State's Attorney, should see him if possible during the mornings of the above period but he will be available at all times when needed.

West Virginia Court to Decide Cheat River Power Project

The West Virginia State supreme court took the Cheat River water power case under advisement on Tuesday after listening to arguments for four hours.

Five attorneys argued before the court on the case which was appealed from the Kanawha county circuit by the West Virginia Power and Transmission company, applicant for a power development license on the Cheat and Blackwater rivers in Tucker, Preston and Monongalia counties. The circuit court had reversed the Public Service Commission which granted a license for eight projects and remanded the case.

The case has been under fire in West Virginia courts for more than a year. Granting the license would serve to start the building of a power dam near Davis, W. Va., in the Canaan Valley.

Al Jolson in "Big Boy," For Benefit of Scouts, July 27 and 28

"Big Boy," the Al Jolson play New York paid $6.50 to see, will be shown as a Warner Bros. and Vitaphone picture at the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, on Monday and Tuesday, July 27 and 28, with Al Jolson in the starring role.

The picture is for the benefit of the Oakland Troop of Boy Scouts in order to raise funds for their annual camping trip which begins on August 2.

Because Jolson is always at his best when he does not have to adhere to set lines and action, Warner Bros. have given him free rein to be as spontaneous and original as he pleases. The result is a typical Jolson entertainment with stories and jokes told only as Jolson can tell them and songs sung only as Jolson can sing them.

Bearing his lucky character name, Gus, therefore, and playing the role of a colored jockey, Jolson once more fascinates his audience as he did in the stage play which ran throughout the country for three years.

Civic Club To Meet

Miss Priscilla Teytle, New York City, and Miss Mabel Wlant, of Parkersburg, W. Va., who have traveled in Europe and the Near East during the past seven years, will speak at the regular monthly meeting of the Oakland Civic Club, to be held at the home of Mrs. James Treacy on Tuesday, July 28, at 3:00 o'clock. The visitors will tell of their experiences in foreign lands.

Lesson for July 26

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 7:54-8:4; 11:19-21; I Pet. 4:12-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC — The Gospel Spread by Persecution.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Christianity Spread by Persecution.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Martyrs of the Early Church.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Results of Persecution.

Christianity is a life, a "way." Because it is the life of God expressing itself through men, it is indestructible. Its genius is to prosper through opposition. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." Prosperity may rnin the church, but persecntion never.

I. Stephen Stoned (Acts 7:54-60).

In Stephen'a ministry as deacon he testified of Jesus Christ and wrought miracles in confirmation thereof. This aroused violent opposition on the part of the synsgogue officials. Not being able to meet the wisdom as Stephen spoke by the Holy Spirit, they stirred up the people agninst him. They arrested him and brought him before the council. They nccused him of blasphemy nnd employed fnise witnesses against him. They could not silence him by argument before the council so they decided to do so by violence.

1. Stephen looking into heavcn (v. 55). Instead of looking about upon his murderers in their raging fury he looked up to heaven. This was the secret of his calmness.

2. He saw the glory of God (v. 55). A vision of God's glory only can be seen by those who are loyal to him even unto denth.

3. He saw Jesus at the right hand of God (vv. 55, 56). The fnct that Jesus was stnnding showed his actunl interest in the sufferings of his faithful witness.

4. Cnst out of the city and stoned (vv. 58, 59).

5. His prayer (v. 60). He kneeled down nnd cried with a loud voice, "Lord, isy not this sin to their chnrge." How like the prayer of Jesus on the cross!

6. He fell nsleep (v. 60). The Christian's death is only a sleep.

II. Persecution of the Church at Jerusalem (Acts 8:1-4).

1. The ringlender (vv. 1, 3). As a member of the Sanhedrin Snnl had cast his vote sgainst Stephen. He perhaps was the Sanhedrin representative to guide and direct in the execution. Snul'a consenting to Stephen's death shows that he was not taking part himself, but directing the activities.

2. The disciples scnttered (v. 1). The stoning of Stephen had so aroused the pssions of snvnge men that they proceeded to wreak vengeance npon the Christians, who, as a result, were scattered abroad.

3. Preaching the Word (v. 4). Thongh forced out of Jerusnlem, they did not go out in a panic, but went "everywhere preaching."

III. Preaching the Lord Jesus at Antioch (Acts 11:19-21).

In the providence of God a new missionnry center wns now being prepared. With the conversion of Saul and his commission as the npostle to the Gentiles, a new center wns needed. Antioch was well suited as thnt center, for it was the natursl door to the Graeco-Roman world. The persecution at Jerusalem sent the disciples as far as Antioch.

1. Prenching to Jews only (v. 19). In this they followed the exnmple of Christ. They hsd not yet come to realize the universality of the gospel. Even thus limited, they were nsed in carrying out the divine purpose.

2. Prenching to the Grecians (v. 20). The disciples who had come from Africa nnd Cyprus were of broader sympathy thnn those of Palestine, and they coursgeously crossed the line preaching the Lord Jesus to the Greeks.

3. The hand of the Lord upon them (v. 21). Perhaps the Holy Spirit was ponred out anew as at Pentecost. Their ministry was accompanied with the divine blessing. Many believed on the Lord through their ministry.

IV. Rejoicing in Persecutions (I Peter 4:12-19).

Fiery trisis are to be expected by the disciples of Christ. The world hated Christ and put Him to death. To be repronched and hnted for Christ's snke is a hadge of honor, nnd those who mny be called upon thus to suffer should rejoice.

Christ Wins at Last

No mntter whnt the obstacles, Christ wins at lnst. No matter what the delays and disappointments, Christ triumphs in the end. In spite of suffering and loss nnd repeated defents, Christ is the eternal conqueror. Lord, we believe! But we need a lot of help!—Charles E. Jefferson.

The Highest Bidder

The highest bidder for the crown of glory is the lowliest benrer of the cross of self-denial.—A. J. Gordon.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

These are wonderful days for picnics and outings. I declared a Moratorium and Saturdayed and Sundayed on Deep Creek Lake gathering enough sunburn to cure the depression for the unguentine company, only I didn't use any cure. I heard that to display sunburn this year was a grave social error. But judging from the number of backs I have seen, I won't be such a social outcast after all.

I argued Sunday that the sun wasn't so very hot, but right now I am willing to deny ever having said so, and I have proof.

Monday evening was also a fine time for family picnics. Archibaldson and Mrs. Archie were itching to go, as were also the two offsprings. I was asked to accompany them, and incidentally urged to take my Ford.

The basket being ready, we descended on the car. Likewise the rain descended on us. At three o'clock in the afternoon the thermometer read 96 and the humility was great. When we started at 5:30 encased in our bathing regalia, the mercury registered 50 with a cool wind blowing. They put me in the rumble seat.

At 6:10 eastern standard time it still rained. At 6:25 we had spread our lunch on the kitchen table of Archie's home. To make things more realistic we did the following:

Rolled around in the mud, tracked up the linoleum and let the dirt dry on our hands and feet.

Had a handful of it thrown in the air and scattered over the table and food.

Kicked a big hole in the screen door to let in a lot of flies.

Invited in an army of ants and other insects.

Let the spiggots run, in imitation of the lapping of the water against the bank.

Built a wood fire on the gas stove so that the dirt could fly over the sandwiches.

Picked a few rose bushes and scattered them on the floor for unsuspecting bare feet; also gathered a few rocks for good measure.

Turned on the electric fan so that napkins and paper bags would blow all over the room.

We then sat down on chairs, over which had been placed a number of splintery boards, and proceeded to picnic. Watermelon rinds and banana skins, we threw over our shoulders. Following the meal I started to gather up the rinds and paper when Archie hollered "Let 'em lay," so I did. And upon leaving the grounds, Archie proudly remarked, "Very few people are able to leave such swell looking garbage."

ONE MUST USE ONE'S TEETH IN ORDER TO SAVE THEM

State Board of Health Says That Teeth Must Have Exercise

Did it ever occur to you that the teeth—like other parts of the body—need exercise to keep them in good condition? Here is what Dr. Richard C. Leonard, Chief of the Division of Oral Hygicne of the Maryland State Department of Health, says on that subject:

"Every year more people are convinced of the importance of caring for their teeth. The realization that healthy mouths help to keep the body strong and in good condition has resulted in regular dental examinations, in the daily cleansing of the teeth, morning and night, and in paying more attention to the diet. But to these important factors in mouth health should be added another that is often lost sight of even though it is the simplest of all.

"The purpose of the teeth is to chew the food, thereby preparing it for use by the body. But failure to chew the food properly not only affects the digection, but directly affects the teeth themselves. Like any other part of the body the teeth need exercise. Proper exercise of the teeth will materially assist in preventing tooth troubles.

"The foods of todny are so largely soft and mushy that little or no exercise is afforded the teeth in chewing them. Some rough, coarse, hard foods should be included in everyone's diet unless, of course, it is contrary to your doctor's orders. Such food will cxercise the teeth, will strengthen the gum tissues and aid in cleansing the teeth.

"Our early ancestors are said (sometimes incorrectly) to have had unusually sound teeth. When this was true, it was largely due to the rough hard foods they had to eat. We would not, of course, wish to return to those days but we of today would be benefitted if we followed the example set us and regularly included enough coarse foods in our diet to exercise our teeth properly.

"Give your teeth a difficult task. Substitutee crisp toast for soft rolls and whole-grain cereals for pap-like porridge. Use plenty of green, leafy vegetables and fresh fruits. Use your teeth and you will help save them."

Maryland's State-owned Timber Land

25,000 Of The 35,000 Acres Owned are Located in Garrett County

By GERALD GRIFFIN
(Baltimore Sunday Sun)

Since the virgin stands of timber in the United States first began to fall before the saw mills there has been a growing realization that attention must be given the succeeding growths of trees if the country's supply is to be maintained. Thus it has come about that reforestation projects have become important in the plans of States and counties as well as the Federal Government. Maryand is taking an active part in restoring its forest lands, and while its projects cannot be compared in size to those of larger states, such as New York, ita record is one of substantial progress.

The State owns some 35,000 acres of forest, of which about 25,000 acres are in Garrett county. Other land is held in Charles, Prince George's, Washington, Allegany, Howard, Worcester and Talbot counties. Last year on this State-owned land some 60,000 trees were painted, while in addition the State sold 4,630 trees for roadside planting and nearly 500,000 for private planting.

All these young trees came from the State nurseries at College Park, where trees are sold at cost for private planting when the purchaser agrees to use them for forest, windbreak or roadside purposes. No applications are accepted for less than 100 trees of one kind to be used for forests or windbrakes, while at least ten must be purchased in one group for roadside planting.

Most of the land in Maryland forests was abandoned farm or timber land when purchased. Because of this the State was able to secure it at a low cost; the average price per acre has been about $2. All of this land is suitable for forest purposes and in most cases is unsuited to present agricultural conditions. By paying cash and by deliberation in making its purchases the State is able to secure land at bargain prices, explains State Forester F. W. Besley, and because the State, unlike most individuals, may plan ahead as far as fifty years, it expects to profit, both directly and indirectly, from its forests.

Direct profits are expected to be realized from a judicious sale of timber. At the same time, however, the State will not follow the logging methods which have wiped out so many acres of this country's virgin timber, but will pursue a system calculated to assure a perpetual return from the land. Through necessary thinning, a removal of trees after they have reached maturity and a constant care of the young trees, the forests will be kept in a state of continual production.

In connection with a forestry bill passed by the General Assembly this year, Mr. Besley computed the financial returns the State might expect from its timber lands in Western Maryland. Taking a 10,000-acre tract in Garrett county for an example, he estimated that in forty-five years the timber rights to the tract would be worth $414,000, with the State remaining the owner of the land. This is a return of $41 per acre over the 45-year period, or nearly $1 per acre per year.

The above figures, which Mr. Besley says are conservative, apply to the natural timber land of Western Maryland, which usually is in poor condition when purchased. Much greater returns might be expected on plantations where the trees have been selected according to the nature of the land, planted at proper intervals and supervised throughout growth. The fire hazard also may be better controlled on plantations than on natural timber land. Under these almost ideal conditions net returns per acre may run between $150 and $300 per acre over a 40-year period.

That this plan of securing State revenue is quite feasible has been demonstrated effectively in a few small European villages, where communal timber land brings in returns large enough not only to pay expenses of the village government but also to make possible a dividend for the villagers. This Utopian condition, it is hardly necessary to add, should not be anticipated in Marylalnd.

To compensate the counties for the loss of taxes from State-owned land in Maryland the bill mentioned above was drawn up. By its provisions the counties will receive fifteen per cent of the gross revenucs from the land, to be paid annually. Some of the land contains coal and in the event that any mining is done on the State's possessions the counties will share in this income. The fifteen per cent arrangement was agreed upon as a close approximation of the revenue ordinarily received from county taxes.

Indirectly, however, the State will profit from its holdings in a number of ways which probably in themselves justify the purchases. Timber holdings along water courses have a definite place in the plans for city water supplies: the trees planted around Loch Raven by the City of Baltimore provide a good local example of this work. Thickly planted trees over a period of years, form a deep soft carpet of leaves or needles on the ground, as well as loosening the soil to a considerable depth through the action of their roots. This makes the ground much more absorbent, which in turn assures that much of the rainfall will soak into it instead of running off, in times of freshets, over the crest of the dam and into the bay. Baltimoreans were acquainted with the importance of the ground supply of water last summer, when water mysteriously continued to flow into Loch Raven, although no appreciable amount of rain had fallen for some time.

Furthermore, the trees prevent erosion and the washing of large amounts of silt into the streams. The latter factor is important in such a body as Loch Raven, where the silt gradually would collect near the dam, probably making necessary dredging operations after a time. Much of the State's forest land is located along water courses, such as that along the Patapsco, which may be an important water supply factor in future years.

Another indirect return which the State derives from its forests lies in the fact that they are open to visitors and campers. Many persons are taking advantage of this condition in the nearby Patapsco forest and an increasing number are expected to camp in Western Maryland, where summer conditions are scarcely improved upon in any region. All this land is available to campers free of charge, providing they comply with restrictions as to fire and property damage. The State forests, except the Patapsco, also are open to licensed hunters in season, tending to remedy a situation for which some States have been criticized; the requiring of licenses for hunting without providing a place to hunt, since many private property owners refuse to allow hunting on their land.

Often the State has been able to purchase land already devoted, in whole or in part, to timber; here the work of reforestation has consisted chiefly of allowing nature to take its course, with thinning operations constituting practically all the attention demanded. This situation holds for most of the timber in Western Maryland, which is natural timber land, and ordinarily requires but a minimum of planting operations. When waste spaces are acquired along with timber, of course, the waste spaces are planted.

In the southern part of the State, however, abandoned farm land has been purchased which it has been necessary to reforest, loblolly pine being the tree commonly used. Hardwood trees are in the majority in the western part of the State, although red and white pine are being planted. On the Eastern Shore and in central Maryland the State owns but few acres of timber land, since in these sections farming is still reasonably profitable. There is so much wholly waste land in Southern and Western Maryland, explains Mr. Besley, that it is not necessary to purchase farming land for forest purposes.

Trees set out in the State forests usually are but eight to fifteen inches in height when planted; this growth normally takes place in one growing season. To develop the timber type of trees the seedlings are planted quite close together; usually six by six feet apart. Planted in this manner there are about 1,200 trees to the acre, but by the time the trees are 35 years old, with proper thinning the number is reduced to about 400. This seeming heavy mortality is necessary for developing tall, straight trees, free of lower branches, since their early proximity forces them to grow straight and rapidly in order to obtain a maximum amount of sunlight. In the thinning process, after about twenty years, much of the timber can be disposed of profitably, amonuting to what often is called the crop.

In addition to caring for its own land the Forestry Department maintains an advisory service for persons wishing to plant trees. Varieties are selected according to the section of the State and the nature of the soil, as well as the purpose for which they are intended. Throughout the State, in addition to its forests, the Forestry Department has smaller demonstration areas where nearby farmers may see forestry work carried out. Outside of these demonstration lots the State ordinarily does not purchase land in less than 5,000-acre tracts for forestation purposes.

Besides the forestry staff, which has its headquarters in Baltimore, district foresters' offices are maintained at Cumberland, Laurel and Salisbury. Resident forest wardens, on each of the large State tracts, are in charge of the forests.

The forestry Department has hopes of eventually owning 200,000 acres of timber land within Maryland. Although this is a matter to be left to the action of future General Assemblies, it is not considered impossible that it will be attained, since larger States already have purchased proportionately large areas.

In New York at present, within the large area designated as Adirondack Park, the State owns 1,968,000 acres. In total area the Adirondack Park is the largest in the country, containing some 4,604,000 acres (Yellowstone Park has 2,192,640). By a comparison of the State holdings in Adirondack Park with the total it may be noted that the larger part still is privately owned—in fact, it includes sizeable hamlets and towns. Outside the boundaries of the park, but within the forest preserve, the State owns an additional 368,000 acres.

Maryland's forest system is a development of recent years. The nucleus about which the present forests have been built up consisted of a gift of 3,000 acres in Garrett County, presented to the State in 1906 by John Garrett and Robert Garrett. When the gift was received the Forestry Department was organized, with Mr. Besley in the position he still holds. No other land was acquired until 1912, when the nucleus of the Patapsco forest was obtained. The 1929 General Assembly provided funds for the purchase of about 25,000 acres of forest land, and this year's Legislature provided for continuation of the work. Most of the land purchased will be in Western Maryland, according to present plans.

In addition to the manner in which the State expects to profit from its timber holdings, Mr. Besley believes the timber industry within the State also will derive benefits from the output from State forests, as well as the example set for private landowners. At the present time about ninety per cent of the lumber used in Maryland is imported, chiefly from the Pacific Coast, scene of the last stand of the country's virgin timber. Potentially Maryland is able to produce all the timber it needs. If, as Mr. Besley hopes, it eventually is actually able to provide for its own demands, it will have done its part in solving the timber problem of the future.

COMPETITION MAKES LIFE

Every person in Garrett county is entered in competition of one kind or another. Few are the merchants, business or professional men who have no competition. Farmers compete against each other when they place their grains, livestock, etc., in the annual agricultural exhibit, and no one will deny that winning a first place gives the winner a thrill.

Few are the people who are not thrilled when the winner of the 100-yard dash or of some other athletic event crosses the finish line.

Few are the people in Garrett county who would not be thrilled at seeing a horse race.

With this new attraction virtually a certainty the Garrett county Fair Association stands a better chance of financial success this year than ever before.

TABLELAND FESTIVAL—

Tableland folk are today casting their thoughts toward Somerset, Pa., and the last week in August when will be held one of the most unique musical and sports gatherings in the history of nine counties.

Residents of Monongalia, Preston, Tucker, Barbour, Grant and Mineral counties in West Virginia; Garrett county in Maryland, and Fayette and Somerset counties in Pennsylvania are making preparations to join in a great music-pageant which will bring these residents of a common geographic region into a new contact with each other.

Never before has such a festival been held bringing together these people, so naturally neighbors by reason of their highland habitation, but separated by artificial, invisible lines which mark off West Virginia from Maryland, and Pennsylvania from both.

The festival for which Somerset folk are so eagerly planning even now is part of a new understanding of the regions in which this great country is naturally divided, each region spreading out around the major cities of the realm.

Pittsburgh, which stands as the towering metropolitan center above western Pennsylvania, western Maryland, and northern West Virginia, is coming to realize its cultural, economic, and social effect upon the surrounding region, and to recognize the possibilities inherent in its own hinterland.

Of all the region, no part offers greater recreational and other opportunities than this great Tableland, standing as it does as the natural playground for people of the Pittsburgh region. No like area in the region has such an abundance of scenic beauty, such possibilities for reaching nature in its unspoiled condition, such hunting and fishing, such fine places to live in summer, where it is ten degrees cooler than the city, and such possibilities in this latitude for developing a program of winter sports.

It is a new thought. Pittsburgh is helping as the Tableland folk join to become better acquainted.

PITY THE DEMOCRATS!

The leaders of the Democratic party, up to recent days, have been chuckling to themselves on what an easy victory they would have in 1932 over a party having Hoover as its candidate for reelection. It assumed the choice of a Democratic banner-bearer, wet, but no too wet, who would win the united support of the party on the supposition that he would carry the election and place the party and its office-seekers in charge of the National administration.

Hoover's moratorium proposal has changed all this. It is a good proposition and rightly called out the support of a practically united nation, irrespective of party, but it has given Hoover prestige and seems to be in a fair way to give some stimulus to national prosperity. If his proposal succeeds, as seems likely, with some modifications, his party will gladly renominate him and give him hearty support.

But what will the poor Democrats do for an issue if they can't denounce Hoover and his lack of leadership in a national crisis? And where will campaign funds come from to make up Raskob's deficit and pay the expenses of the new campaign?

Unfortunately, the bark of the Democratic dog is determined by its tail, located in the vicinity of New York. Hence the platform of 1932 will contain nothing new, but merely a series of compromises and straddles. Why should not the real party try a genuine platform for a change—a platform stressing the aspirations and visions of those who believe with President Hoover that the United States has a great future, coupled with international duties? If the party is destined to defeat in 1932, why should it not go down with colors flying rather than to meet defeat flying the white flag?

Psychologists tell us that the five senses bear the following relationship. Eighty-seven and one-half percent of our information comes from sight, seven percent comes from hearing, and the other five and one-half percent comes from touch, smell, and taste in the order named.

Visual Education is not new. Centuries ago a Chinese sage said, "One picture is worth ten thousand words." Two hundred years ago Pestalozzi, the founder of the kindergarten system in schools, insisted that the teacher must either bring reality into the schools or take the children out to see reality. His teachings recently bore fruit when the State of Ohio made it compulsory that each one of its twelve hundred high schools be equipped with a motion picture machine for the teaching of history and other like subjects.

Why did that State insist on bringing reality into the class room? Because they knew that those children could SEE history twelve times as fast as they could hear about it or read about it.

With the above facts in mind, is it not then very important that we keep our eye system as near one hundred percent efficient as possible, paying particular attention to the visual efficiency of the growing child?

and stateswomen.

"In conference with H. R. H. Prince Damrong, of Siam, who acts as king during the king's absence, he said that the influence of missionaries in Siam had beed one of its most constructive forces.

"It was gratifying to us to find that leper work in Siam is making tremendous strides, largely due to pioneer work of such men as Dr. McKean.

"Interest in leper work in every country is developing rapidly. Empress Dowage of Japan has given Y250,000 (yens) for leper work and under the inspiration of her example the Japanese parliament appropriated Y10,000,000 to be dispersed over a 10-year period of time. Since our visit seven years ago colonies and hospitals have developed so rapidly that it is really marvelous.

"Our last visit was in Russia. Contrary to many articles and books I have read concerning Russia my contacts with young people and government officials leads me to say that the heart of Russia is not HARD; the heart of Russia is HURT. Some of the most responsive and lovable young people whom I met on the entire trip were from Russia."

Rev. and Mrs. Johnson visited Japan, China, Manchuria, Philippines, Indo-China, Cambodia, Malacca, Siam, Java, Persia, Turkey, Iraq, Kurdistan, India, and other Asiatic and European countries, thirty-six in all. In Ur, they had the pleasure of having a number of conferences with Shaih Mah Moud, ruler of Kurdistan, who had been captured by the English and was being taken to some English stronghold.

They have brought back with them many articles of historic interest from almost every country in which they visited, showing the development of missionary work around the world. They left yesterday for Lakeside, O., for a conference, but will return to Mt. Lake Park for the Interdenominational Summer School of Missions, where she will discuss her experiences at length.

Rev. Johnson is a brother of Mrs. E. L. Davidson, of Parkersburg, W. Va., who with her husband, has spent many summers at Mt. Lake Park.

Creliin Wins First Game in the Second Half of Preston League

Before a large gathering of fans the Crellin baseball nine set the hard hitting Borgman nine down to defeat by a score of 5-1. This was the first game of the second half of a split schedule. Shaffer was on the mound for Crellin scoring his fourth straight win of the season, and but for a squeeze play in the ninth after two down when the Borgman lads pushed a run across the plate, Shaffer would have scored a shut-out. He held his opponents to six scattered hits, and retired five by strikeouts. Dennis Colaw and Wilt were the leading hitters for Crellin, each getting three hits in four trips to the plate, two doubles and a single. B. Sywres was the only player on the Borgman team able to solve Shaffer's delivery and found him for three hits in four trials.

Rowlesburg, winners of the first-half, will be at Creliin to do battle with the Crellinites next Sunday at 2:30. Rowlesburg received a whitewash from the Crellin boys in their last meeting, 1-0.

MT. LAKE PARK

Municipal Ticket To Be Chosen.

Now that the people have decided in favor of a municipal form of government, plans are being perfected to hold a citizens' meeting, or convention for the purpose of nominating a ticket to be voted for at the election in August to guide the destinies of the baby town of Maryland. The places to be filled at the election will be the mayor and five councilmen.

Those having charge of these arrangements are going about their business in a methodical manner and take their duties seriously, as they should, for while Mountain Lake Park is a small community yet its proper government is just as important to the people who make their homes here and to those owning property here as though it were many times its present size. We have no doubt but that the best men for the respective positions will be selected at the convention. Who may be candidates and who may be chosen we have no intimation, although several have been mentioned in a general way. The proper selection is important, as on this first official family will devolve the duty, among others, of drafting the ordinances and bylaws under which the town will operate.

This correspondent Would Like to Attend Camp With Comrades.

To the Editor of The Republican:

In the year 1881 in the month of October, I was a member of Captain Wardwell's Garrett Guards, and we were sent to Yorktown, Va., to take part in the anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis. I understand there is to be another one this year.

I would like to go again and as there are only a corporal's guard left of us old fellows, I would like to hear from them and find out what they think about it. With best wishes, I am,

Yours respectfully,

Maryland Boys Win International Cattle-Judging Contest

An Associated Press cable from Warwick, England, states that the American cattle judging team won the competition in the Royal Society's show held recently, scoring 1,917 points out of a possible 2,160.

Composed entirely of Maryland boys, the cattle-judging team this year was the fourth one from this state to represent the United States in this international contest and this year's team is the third one to win the event.

Members of the team are William Chilcoat, of Sparks, Baltimore county; James Johnston, McDonogh, Baltimore county; Charles Clark, Belair, Harford county. Harold M. Carroll, Harford county agent, and Howard C. Barker, specialist in dairying at the Extension service, U of M., coached the team and accompanied the boys abroad.

The team won the international contest at the National dairy exposition in St. Louis last December against 4-H club groups of 28 states. The team defeated teams from fifteen counties of Maryland at the annual fair at Timonium last fall. County contests were held throughout the State previous to that.

INDIVIDUALS RESPONSIBLE FOR CROP OF MOSQUITOES

Back Yard Rubbish Heaps Are Potential Breeding Places

When you get irritated at the flying pests that annoy you when you sit on your porch, or that get into your sleeping quarters and keep you awake with their buzzing and stinging, when you slap, slap, slap without any relief, don't blame the neighbors or the people in the next camp—if you happen to be camping—just look around to see if you are not raising your own crop of mosquitoes. If you are, you will find it worth while to follow the advice of Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health. Here it is:

"The best way to get rid of mosquitoes, is to get rid of their breeding places. Every empty tin can that has accumulated an inch or so of water, and that has been left on the rubbish heap is a potential breeding place. Mosquitoes breed in stagnant water, but they are not at all particular as to the size of their breeding places. Anything that holds water and that is left in the back yard or on the rubbish heap at the camp, answers the purpose. Old auto tires, empty barrels, buckets, jars and cans are in this class.

"Some mosquitoes are long lived but fortunately, the average life of most of them is about two weeks, so there is hope of relief if the breeding places are gotten rid of. Community action is necessary for mass effort—for such measures as draining swamps and oiling streams, or stocking ponds and streams with the minnows that eat the masquito larvae. But when it comes to the rubbish heap, each family or group of campers has to wage its own warfare.

"The county health officers and the representatives of the Burcau of Sanitary Engineering when making sanitary inspections of the recreation and tourist camps throughout the State, are often asked to locate the source of the 'clouds of mosquitoes' that appear from time to time to the great discomfort of the campers. Very often their search leads to a neglected refuse heap littered with discarded cans and other receptacles holding the mosquito larvae.

"Mosquitoes are able to fly about half a mile from their breeding places, under their own power, but high winds will carry them much farther. Trains, boats and automobiles also furnish free transportation for them. Accordingly, householders, campers and wayside picnickers will be performing a public service and will add greatly to the comfort of their neighbors, far and near, by disposing of their discarded jars, tin cans and other waterholding receptacles in such a way that they do not serve as breeding places for these winged pests."

Granting Authority to the Mayor and Council of Kitzmiller to Issue Bonds.

CHAPTER 283.

AN ACT to provide for a bond issue by the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville, Garrett County, Maryland, for the purpose of securing funds with which to retire the bonds issued under the authority granted by Chapter 378 of the Acts of Assembly of Maryland for the year 1922 and by Chapter 208 of the Acts of Assembly of Maryland for the year 1927, and for the further improvement of the streets of said town of Kitzmillersville, and to submit to the legally qualified voters of said town the question of whether or not said bonds shall be issued.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville, in Garrett County, Maryland, are hereby authorized and empowered, in their discretion, to borrow upon the faith and credit of said town a sum not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) and to issue and sell coupon bonds therefor in the denomination of five hundred dollars ($500) each, to be signed by the Mayor of said town and to be countersigned by the clerk of the Council thereof, and the seal of said town attached, and to be registered by said Clerk of said Council in a book to be kept by the Mayor and Council for the purpose of registering "Refunding and Improvement Bonds." Said bonds by this section authorized shall be known and designated as "Refunding and Improvement Bonds," and shall bear interest at the rate of five (5) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the first day of May and November in each and every year until the said bonds are paid; said bonds shall be exempt from all State, county and municipal taxation and shall have printed on them a distinct reference to the Act authorizing their issue.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That said bonds shall be numbered serially and the first shall be payable on the first day of November, 1932, and thereafter one bond, of the value of five hundred ($500) shall mature and be payable each consecutive year in the order of the consecutive numbers until the entire issue of said bonds is taken up and redeemed; reserving the option to the Mayor and Council aforesaid to take up and redeem at any interest period after ten years any and all outstanding bonds running more than ten years at the face value thereof, with accrued interest; and said bonds shall be sold at public or private sale in such amount, not less, however, than five hundred dollars ($500) at any one time and not exceeding in the total the said sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000), and at such time as the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville, in their discretion, and in the furtherance of the purposes for which this bond issue is created, may deem proper. It is especially intended that the power hereby vested in said Mayor and Council shall be a continuing power until the whole fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) shall have been issued and sold.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the money arising from the sale of said bonds shall be kept as a separate fund by the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville in some safe bank, shall be used exclusively for the purposes of this Act and shall be drawn out only on checks signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk of the Council, and the said Clerk of the Council shall keep in a book for the purpose a full registry of the bonds sold, the number of bonds and name of the purchaser or purchasers, the amount realized on the sale or sales and any transfers and assignments of the same.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the funds realized from the sale of the bonds aforesaid shall be available and shall be used exclusively for the purpose of first retiring eleven thousand dollars ($11,000) of the bonds authorized by Chapter 378 of the Acts of Assembly of 1922 and still outstanding and seventeen hundred and fifty dollars ($1,750) of the bonds authorized by Chapter 208 of the Acts of Assembly of 1927 and still outstanding, and the remaining part of the fund herein provided shall be available for the further improvement of the streets of Kitzmillersville.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That for the purposes of retiring the said bonds authorized to be issued by this Act, and the payment of the interest thereon, there shall be levied against all the assessable property within the corporate limits of the said town of Kitzmillersville by the Mayor and Council of said town annually, so long as any of said bonds are outstanding and unpaid, a tax sufficient to meet the interest, or any part of said interest, on said bonds as it becomes due, and to pay the principal thereof as they mature, said tax to be determined, levied, collected and paid over in the same manner as provided for other taxes in said municipality.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That on the first Tuesday in May, 1931, there shall be a special election held in the town of Kitzmillersville, which election shall be held in the same manner and under the same regulations as other municipal elections held in said town, for the purpose of submitting the question as to whether or not this Act shall take effect, to all legal voters of said town who are qualified to vote at a regular town election, and all ballots at said election shall have printed on them the words following, to-wit: "For Refunding and Improvement Bonds" and "Against Refunding and Improvement Bonds," and the qualified voters of said town desiring to vote on said question at said election shall indicate their choice of said propositions by making a cross-mark opposite the proposition for which they desire to register their votes, and if a majority of the votes so cast are marked "For Refunding and Improvement Bonds," then this Act shall be in full force and effect, otherwise shall be null and void and of no effect. The judges of election shall, under their hands and seals, immediately after said election certify to the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville the result of said election.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That this Act is hereby declared to be an emergency law and necessary for immediate preservation of the public health and safety, and having been passed by a yea and nay vote, supported by three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses of the General Assembly, the same shall take effect from the date of its passage.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate situate in the town of Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, and for a distribution of the proceeds amongst the parties entitled to receive the same.

CHAPTER XXXVI

It was always stimulating to one's morale to visit the headquarters of the Canadians, where one soon caught the fine spirit of that superb body.

I made such a visit in the spring of 1918 and talked with their corps commander, Lieut. Gen. Sir Arthur Currie; his chief of staff, Major General Weber; his chief of engineers, Major General Lindsay, and others and had ten with them.

The alertness and confidence of these neighbors of ours and the excellent record they had made and were still making gave us as much gratification as though they had been our own. I remember this visit with much pleasure and recall the prediction of the Canadians that Americans would soon play an important part in the war.

General Currie deplored the fact that the British had so easily given up Paschendsele ridge, which the year before he had been told must be taken at all costs and for which the Canadians made the tremendous sacrifice of 16,000 casualties.

Calls at British G. H. Q.

At the invitation of Sir Douglas Haig, British commander in chief, I went to the British general headquarters April 20 to discuss the training of our troops with the British and study operations in progress.

We were always made welcome at British headquarters. It so happened that on the day of our arrival Lord Derby, who had just been relieved as minister of war by Lord Milner, was there en route to Paris as British ambassador. During dinner the conversation ran along freely, as though we were members of the official family. At length Lord Derby and Sir Douglas drifted to the subject of British politicians.

It would betray no confidence to say that there was considerable criticism of some who held prominent places. The coalition government came in for its share because of its attitude toward the military high command.

I took advantage of the opportunity while on the British front to visit the Nordnquen area to inspect the advance elements of the Seventy-seventh division, one of the divisions selected for training with the British. We took luncheon with Brig. Gen. Evan M. Johnson, then temporarily in command, and his staff officers. He praised the soldierly qualities of the men, but said they were very much behind in their training.

Makes Agreement With Haig.

At Sir Douglas' headquarters he and I reached an understanding as to the training and administration of our troops that were to be temporarily with the British. In the first place, they were to be allocated by regiments to British skeleton divisions under such a schedule as might be agreed upon. The training staffs of British divisions were to be at the disposal of these regiments, especially for instruction in the use of the rifle and machine gun and the handling of gas.

After that, and with the approval of their American division commander, the regiments were to be attached to a British division in line, so each of the three battalions of the regiment would have the opportunity to serve with one of the three brigades in each British division. These battalions were to be commanded by their own officers as a part of the British brigade, while the staff of the American regiment was to be attached to that of the brigade.

In the next stage the American regiments, with their three battalions united under the regimental commander, were to act as a brigade in a British division. The final stage would find the four American regiments of each division united as such under its own officers, the artillery being British until the arrival of its own artillery brigade.

In carrying out this scheme the tendency at first was for British officers actually to assume command of our units in training. Our officers in most cases permitted this to be done until it was checked by my orders that "American units must be commanded in training by the officers and noncommissioned officers who are to command them in battle," and that American troops would in all cases be commanded in battle only by Americans.

Talks Shipping in London.

Following a suggestion by Lord Milner, I went to London April 22, 1918, to consider further the shipment of American troopers. At our first conference there were present Lord Milner and Gen. Sir Henry Wilson, who had succeeded General Robertson as the chief of the general staff; Harbord and myself. The main point of difference that had developed in previous conferences as to just how far the Americans should be committed to serve in active operations was again considered.

I stated that the main thing was to get our units trained, and that while I was opposed to amalgamation, yet if during the period of instruction the units with which they were serving should be attacked or, if another great emergency should arise, of course, our men would go in. Naturally the British wanted unlimited infantry and machine-gun units, but I would consider nothing further than a limited extension of the six-division plan.

During the conference a cable from Lord Reading to the prime minister was brought forth, which stated that the President had agreed to the amalgamation of Americans with the British. I had nothing official at hand later than the President's conditional approval of joint note No. 18 of the supreme war council as suggested by Secretary Baker, so I promptly said that it could not be possible that any such concession had been made and that the classes of our troops to be shipped over and their disposition must be left to me.

Agree on Troop Shipments.

As a result of these discussions we reached an agreement which provided for the shipment in May by British and American tonnage of the infantry, machine gun, engineer and signal troops, together with the various unit headquarters, of six divisions for training with the British army. It was provided that any shipping in excess of the amount required for this number of troops should be utilized to transport the artillery of these divisions; also that such personnel as might be required to build up corps organizations should then follow, it being understood that the artillery regiments would train with the French and join their proper divisions when this was completed.

To meet any emergency that might require an excess of infantry after the completion of this program, it was agreed that all the American and British shipping available for the transportation of troops was to be used under such arrangement as would insure immediate aid to the allies, and thereafter as far as possible provide other units necessary to complete the organization of our divisions and corps.

It was further agreed that the combatant troops mentioned in connection with May shipments should be followed by such services of supply and other contingents as we ourselves might consider necessary, the shipment of a large number of these troops should be utilized at my discretion, except that the six divisions which the British were to transport would be trained with them.

Washington Makes Concession.

Reaching Chaumont, I found that a cablegram dated April 26 had been received, transmitting a memorandum dated April 19, that had been sent by direction of the President to the British ambassador at Washington in conformity with his approval of note No. 18. In this memorandum the shipment of 120,000 infantry and machine-gun units per month for four months was conceded, with the understanding that their assignment for training and use should be left to my discretion.

It went on to say that the United States, until the situation changed, had no intention of departing from as full compliance with the recommendation of the permanent military representatives as the nature of the case would permit.

This was the first official information I had received that the administration had agreed to send any specific numbers of infantry and machine-gun units to France.

Lord Reading's Influence.

This concession went further than it was necessary to go and much further than I had expected. Realizing the complications that might arise from commitments so far in the future and the delay in forming an American army that would follow, I did not agree in later discussions at the supreme war council with all that the allies now felt justified in demanding. I was opposed to the action of the supreme war council in assuming the power under any circumstances to dispose of American troops. It was not in any sense a prerogative of the supreme war council.

There can be little doubt that Lord Reading received the distinct impression from President Wilson that infantry and machine-gun units would be sent to France at the rate of 120,000 men per month for four months, beginning with April. That the President agreed to this "in principle" is practically certain. It need not be further emphasized that such a concession, even though prompted by the most generous impulse, could only add to the difficulties of our task of building up an army of our own.

It is probable that Lord Reading, skilled advocate that he was, did more while ambassador at Washington to influence the administration to grant allied requests than any other individual.

CHAPTER XXXVII

I left London April 25, 1918, and crossed to France in a British destroyer. Colonel Mott was at Boulogne with a request for me from General Foch to come to Sarcus. I learned then that the Twenty-second division, at Seicheprey, had repulsed a severe trench raid on the night of April 20-21, and had suffered considerable loss.

Arriving at General Foch's headquarters I found Generals Bliss, Harbord and Weygand already there, and after dinner we entered into a general discussion about American troop shipments. The conversation ran as follows:

Foch—On March 28 you came to offer the services of American troops. I have a vivid recollection of the occasion. As to the American divisions, in what order do you think they should be employed?

Pershing—The order would be the Twenty-sixth, Forty-second, Second. (The First had already been sent to an active front near Amiens.) The regiments of the Thirty-second will be ready by May 1.

Foch—I do not think they can be used before May 5, but the more we put into the line the better it will be. Your Seventy-seventh division has arrived, I see. What about the Third and Fifth?

Pershing—The infantry of the Third has arrived, and that of the Fifth will soon follow.

Pershing Stands Firm.

Foch—What we need now is infantry, especially the British, on account of the present crisis. That is why the supreme war council at Versailles recommended that all tonnage be devoted to that purpose for the time being. I hope that America may send over as much infantry as possible during the next three months. The other arms to complete your divisions can come afterward. What do you think of that plan?

Pershing—I cannot commit myself to such a proposition. If nothing but infantry and machine gunners are brought over, to the total of 300,000, it will be October or November before the artillery and auxiliary troops could arrive, and we could not foresee the formation of an American army until next spring.

Foch—I think your calculation is rather pessimistic, for we could begin bringing your other troops in August, but without considering that point we can furnish you with artillery and its personnel and you can have your divisions reconstituted beginning with October. What would you propose in this connection?

Pershing—I think we should limit the transportation of infantry to May, and that the artillery and auxiliary troops should come in June. They should not arrive more than a month later than the infantry. Under what conditions would you employ the American infantry units?

Foch Dodges Final Decision.

Foch—A final decision cannot be made on that subject. That will evidently depend upon the degree of instruction of the units. In the crisis that actually confronts the allied armies it is effectives that we lack. The method of employing these units is a question to be handled in due course and according to their efficiency.

Pershing—I would like to have the conditions under which these units are to be employed determined now, and to fix the time during which the regiments and brigades will be used separately.

Foch—Make your proposition on that subject.

I then explained the details of the system that was being followed where our divisions were in training with the French and the plan agreed upon with the British. I added that it was fully understood that if an emergency should arise while our troops were in training they would go into battle as part of the divisions with which they were serving.

Pershing Refuses to Consent.

General Foch then said:

"I do not doubt the excellence of the method, but in the crisis through which we are passing I return to the decision of the supreme war council, and I ask you to transport during May, June and July only infantry and machine-gun units. Will you consent?"

Pershing—No, I do not consent. I propose for one month to ship nothing but infantry and machine-gun units, and after that the other arms and service of the rear troops to correspond.

Foch—If you adopt the plan I propose you would have by July 31, 300,000 more American infantry.

Pershing—You said just now that you would furnish the artillery, and even artillerymen, which would be joined with our infantry to complete our divisions. Then why not consent to transport our artillery personnel along with our infantry?

Foch—I repeat that it is the infantry of which we have the greatest need at this time. I would like to have General Bliss tell us the considerations which led to the decision taken by the supreme war council at Versailles.

Bliss—The collective note recommended to the United States to send only infantry until the surpeme war council should give instructions to the contrary. The government of the United States, in conformity with this note and with the recommendation of Secretary Baker, consented to this plan. As far as the employment of the units on the front is concerned, the question should be decided by General Pershing according to agreement with the commander in chief to whose army they may be attached.

Foch Fears Disaster.

Pershing—I have been discussing this question of training our units for the last eight months, first with General Petain and then with Marshal Haig. The method agreed upon leads naturally to the formation of constituted American divisions.

General Foch said he wished to see American divisions constituted and an American army formed as large as possible, but the policy he was then advocating would have made it impossible to form an American army without serious delay, if ever. Continuing, he said:

"But do not forget that we are in the midst of a hard battle. If we do not take steps to prevent the disaster which is threatened at present the American army may arrive in France to find the British pushed into the sea and the French driven back behind the Loire, while it tries in vain to organize on lost battle fields over the graves of allied soldiers."

He was assured that it was fully understood that if an emergency should arise while our troops were in training with the British or French they would go into the battle and do their part. I then gave him the numbers to be shipped during May and told him that it had been agreed between the British and ourselves to consider the question for June later. I informed him that the British shipping authorities now thought it would be possible within the next three months to transport to France 750,000 men.

Our Troops Surprised.

With reference to the German attack at Seicheprey on the Twenty-sixth division the night of April 20-21, mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, that point was the focus of a German raid covering a three-kilometer front extending west from the Bois de Remieres. It came during a heavy fog and was a complete surprise to our troops, who were considerably outnumbered. Seicheprey was taken by the enemy, but co-operation was re-established throughout the division and the original front was recaptured on the following day.

In this affair we lost one officer, 80 enlisted men, killed; 11 officers, 176 enlisted men, wounded; 30 officers, 211 enlisted men, gassed, and five officers, 182 enlisted men, missing and prisoners.

The losses of the enemy in killed and wounded were reported as even greater.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

The question of the shipment of American troops, and particularly their allotment to the allied armies, had assumed very great importance in the minds of the allied leaders.

Accordingly a session of the supreme war council was called at Abbeville May 1, 1918, and Premier Clemenceau opened the meeting by referring forthwith to the previous recommendation of the council's military representatives as to the disposition of American troops.

"The military representatives," he began, "expressed the opinion in their joint note No. 18 that only infantry and machine-gun units should be sent to France for the present. Since then the agreement between Lord Milner and General Pershing, signed at London April 24, 1918, has intervened. This agreement makes a change.

"It had been understood at Versailles that America would send 120,000 men per month, which the French and English armies would share equally. Under the Milner-Pershing agreement it appears none go to France. The French have not been consulted. We might suppose that in compensation the American troops arriving in June would be given to France. But it now appears they are also to join the British. I wish to protest that this is not satisfactory.

"I am not discussing the figure of 120,000 men; I am prepared to accept that these men go to the British in May. I am asking to receive the same number of troops in June. There are close to 400,000 Americans in France at present, but only five divisions, or about 125,000 men, can be considered as combatants. That is not a satisfactory proportion."

Milner Defends Agreement.

Lord Milner arose, much incensed at M. Clemenceau's statement, which he considered quite unjust.

"M. Clemenceau has intimated," he asserted, "that there was something mysterious about the London agreement. I believe that an explanation is necessary. He appears to believe that the agreement we signed is a reversal of the supreme war council's decision. I know only of a joint note embodying the recommendations of the military representatives, but it is of no value without the approval of the governments.

"Besides, M. Clemenceau seems to be under the impression that half of the American troops were to go to France and the other half to England. I do not recollect any such decision. All that General Pershing and I have urged is that infantry and machine gunners should be sent to France. We had no intention of depriving France of any American troops. I do not know that anything has been said regarding their allotment on arrival in France. We simply wanted to hasten their coming."

Pershing Upholds Independence.

"In making the agreement with Lord Milner," I interposed, "I had in mind bringing troops as rapidly as possible to meet the existing situation. Lord Milner is quite correct in stating that there was no agreement as to the allocation of American troops either to the British or French armies. There is no agreement between my government and anybody else that a single American soldier shall be sent to either the British or French.

"There is in existence an agreement between Mr. Lloyd George and myself that six divisions should be brought to France. M. Clemenceau will remember that I spoke to him about going to London to arrange for the shipment of American troops to France and that he approved because it would expedite their arrival. I also spoke to General Petain about it."

Clemenceau Is Insistent.

M. Clemenceau remembered my speaking of it, but disregarding his previous approval continued his objections, saying:

"We have been informed that nothing had been decided on at Versailles, but something has been decided on at London, and France was closely concerned in this. It was decided that six divisions should go to the British. Well, I will not argue about that. You announce to us artillery for the month of June.

"Where four are in alliance, two of them cannot act independently. Nothing has been provided for France in June.

"The appointment of General Foch as commander in chief is not a mere decoration. This post involves grave responsibilities; he must meet the present situation; he must provide for the future.

"I accept what has been done for May, but I want to know what is intended for June."

M. Clemenceau said the French had not received certain specialists they had asked for, and also quoted from the conversation I had held with General Foch with reference to sending over troops in May and June.

British Losses Heavy.

Mr. Lloyd George then said:

"I am of M. Clemenceau's opinion. The interests of the allies are identical; we must not lose sight of that, otherwise the unity of command has no meaning. We must consider what is best for the common cause.

"What is the situation today? The British army has had heavy fighting and has suffered heavy losses. All available drafts have been sent to France and we shall send all who are available in May and June. This would be the case even if all the Americans who arrive in Europe during these months should be assigned to the British army.

"At present certain British divisions have been so severely handled that they cannot be reconstituted. General Foch will remember the number."

"Yes, ten," Foch answered.

"As we cannot again put them in line," Mr. Lloyd George continued, "they must be replaced by new units. The Germans are now fighting with the object of using up our effectives. If they can do this without exhausting their own reserves they will sometime deal us a blow which we shall not be able to parry.

"In the meantime, I suggest that the decision for the allotment of the American troops for June be taken up when that month arrives. In May, in fact, either of our two armies may be hard pressed. That is the one which should be re-enforced. It is not desirable now to decide how troops arriving in June should be allotted."

Foch Also Cites France's Need.

To this, Foch replied:

"It is undeniable that the British army is now exhausted; so let it receive immediately re-enforcement in May. But lately the French have had grave losses, notably at Montdidier, and both during the last few days have been fighting shoulder to shoulder. So American aid is now needed almost as much for France as for Great Britain. Above this question of aid to the French or to the British is aid to the allies.

"We are agreed that the American army is to re-enforce the British army at once; in June we, too, shall need infantry and machine-gun units. So let us make the agreement for June at once by saying: the same shipment of infantry and machine guns as for May. If there is tonnage available we shall devote it, after that, to the elements necessary for filling up the American divisions. I am sure that General Pershing, with his generosity and his breadth of view, will grant the fairness of this view and will extend for June the agreement decided upon for May."

Whereupon Mr. Lloyd George gave support to the principle, saying that British recruits would not be available until August and he understood it was the same for France, when both would be able to furnish their own recruits. He then asked that the May program be extended over June, in which M. Clemenceau joined.

Pershing Insists on Own Army.

In reply, I said:

"I do not suppose that we are to understand that the American army is to be entirely at the disposal of the French and British commands."

M. Clemenceau said that of course this was not the intention.

Continuing, I said:

"Speaking for my government and myself, I must insist upon our intention to have our own army. The principle of unity of command must prevail in our army. It must be complete under its own command. I should like to have a date fixed when this will be realized. I should like to make it clear that all American troops are not to be with the British, as there are five divisions with the French now and there will be two more in a short time.

"As to the extension of the May agreement to June I am not prepared to accept it. The troops arriving in June will not be available for the front before the end of July or the middle of August. So we have the whole month of May ahead before deciding whether an emergency is likely to arise in June. I have explained to Lord Milner and General Foch why I do not wish to commit the American army so long in advance. If need be, I shall recommend the extension into June. I can see no reason for it now."

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 55. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, JULY 30, 1931. NUMBER 24.

MAJOR JAMES A. HAYDEN DIES AT MT. LAKE HOME

Succumbs to Lingering Illness and Infirmities of Old Age—Was Civil War Veteran

FOUNDED THE REPUBLICAN

Major James A. Hayden, 89 years old, Civil War Veteran and founder of The Republican, died Tuesday morning at his home at Mt. Lake Park, following an illness which has kept him bedfast for almost a year. He was born at Haydentown on February 20, 1842.

Funeral services for the veteran will be held at his late home in Mountain Lake Park this afternoon at two o'clock, to be conducted by members of the American Legion of Oakland.

He is survived by the following children: James Grant Hayden, Westernport, Md.; Lee N. Hayden, Roanoke, Va.; John D. Hayden, Rowlesburg, W. Va.; Gay W. Hayden, Mt. Lake Park.

The deceased was a veteran of the Civil war, in which he did effective service for the Stars and Stripes, and was promoted from the ranks to captain before he was twenty-one years of age. He participated in numerous important campaigns and battles, and was twice taken prisoner by the enemy. The first time was at the battle of Gaines Mills, and the second when he was in the battle of the Wilderness, altogether being a prisoner for thirteen months, eleven months of his confinement being at Libby Prison in Richmond, Va.

His bravery and distinguished gallantry in the above named engagements won for him substantial honors from his superiors.

At the time of his enlistment in 1861, for three years, he was a member of Company F., Eleventh Pennsylvania; in October, 1862, he was commissioned captain and was brevetted major after the battle of the Wilderness. Among other engagements in which he was active were Fredericksburg and Gettysburg. At the Gettysburg fight he was in command of Company F, Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves and occupied a position in Devil's Glen which he maintained throughout the three days' battle. His name as commander of this unit appears with the names of the men under him on the east face of the Pennsylvania monument on the battlefield.

Capt. Hayden was born in Fayette county, Pa., in 1842. When he was 16 he entered the printing office of the Uniontown Standard. Upon his return from the war he was employed in various printing offices in Pittsburgh for five years, after which he followed his trade in other towns and cities up to the year 1873.

At that time he came to Garrett county and for four years was foreman of the Garrett County Herald in Oakland. In 1877 he established the Oakland Republican which soon became one of the leading newspapers of this section. He conducted The Republican for thirteen years, then selling out to Benj. H. Sincell, the present owner.

In 1891 he removed to Mt. Lake Park where he lived a retired life. Since the formation of the Republican party he was interested in its success and during the administration of President Harrison he held an appointment as state statistician for the government bureau of agriculture. For six years be was the chairman of the Republican State Central committee for Garrett county. Fraternally he was connected with the Grand Army of the Republic, being vice-commander of Crook Post of Oakland while in existence, and he was also a member of the Odd Fellows lodge in Oakland until that organization surrendered its charter. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years and well versed in scripture.

In 1875 Capt. Hayden married Miss Letitia V. Savage, daughter of Nelson Savage, whose death occurred four years ago.

With the death of Capt. Hayden, only six Civil War veterans remain in the county so far as is known to the writer, these being Thomas Nethkin, of Rosedale, near Oakland; Henry Sines, also of Oakland; George Marley, Deer Park; John Sines, Sines; John W. Bowman, Accident, and Josiah Wolfe, of near Cranesville.

Mr. William E. Wass, Selbysport, was in Oakland yesterday transacting some business matters.

52-YEAR OLD MAN SETS LAKE SWIMMING RECORD

Swims Interval Between Bridges Twice and Continues 30 Yards To Break Old 1930 Record

GIRL WILL SWIM SUNDAY

E. J. Curry, 52 years of age, of Bayard, West Va., made an endurance swim in Deep Creek Lake Sunday, swimming the distance between bridges twice, and continuing for 30 yards more to break the record set last year by Miss Regina Howsare, of Zihlman.

Mr. Curry entered the water at Glendale Bridge at 2:30 p. m., and it is estimated that he swam for a distance of seven and three-forth miles in 5 hours and 18 minutes. The exact map distance between bridges is two and four-tenth miles, according to F. R. Corliss of the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric company, but in following the shore line and the inability of the swimmer to travel in a straight line, Walter W. Wittig, one of those attending the swimmers, stated that Mr. Curry had gone at least seven and three-forth miles.

Ross Shaw, of Oldtown, Md., also made an attempt to swim the lake but he became exhausted after swimming three and seven-eighth miles in 2 hrs. and 19 minutes, according to Mr. Wittig. Carl Bowman of Deep Creek joined the party and swam two and one-half miles.

Miss Regina Howsare, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alanza Howsare, of Zihlman, who swam the distance between bridges twice on Sunday, August 17, 1930, in 4 hours and 15 minutes, in cold and choppy waters, will make an attempt this Sunday to break her own record and that made by Mr. Curry. Miss Howsare's time is one hour less than that of Mr. Curry, but she is expecting to swim the distance in even less time. She will enter the water at 10:30 a. m. Sunday.

Motor Boats Hinder

The task of swimming was made much more difficult last Sunday owing to the many motor boats which came close to the swimmers, Mr. Wittig stated, and he hoped that next Sunday they would keep a distance that would not interfere.

Those in attendance last Sunday with Messrs. Curry and Shaw were Clerk Railey, Bernard Glotfelty, Gilbert Alexander, Walter W. Wittig, Ralph Rosemberg, and Walter W. MacGregor, time keeper.

Second Potato Inspection Is Made by Dr. Jehle

A second inspection for certification of seed potatoes was made on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, by Dr. R. A. Jehle, potato specialist, University of Maryland.

Of the 69 acres accepted during the first inspection last week, only one and one-half acres was disqualified. This acreage belonged to one club member and one adult farmer.

The next inspection, known as the bin inspection, will be held at harvest time just before the potato show, which is to be held in Oakland.

Near Drowning Occurs at Lake

A near drowning occurred last evening at the Will-o-the-wisp beach along Deep Creek Lake when Margaret McIntire, 14-year old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. William McIntire, of Washington, D. C., swam out into water over her head and went under twice.

At her call for help Harland L. Jones, of Oakland, jumped into the water and kept her afloat until she had regained her breath, when both proceeded to shore. The girl was just learning to swim and became frightened when she discovered that her feet couldn't touch bottom.

Leaguers To Have Sunrise Service Sunday Morning

The union Leagues of Oakland have planned a sunrise service for the coming Sunday morning, leaving Oakland at six o'clock for Table Rock, where services will be conducted and immediately afterward breakfast will be served.

Miss Mildred Stemple, president of the union, will be the leader.

This sunrise service will take the place of the evening meeting.

Treasurer Gets New Pane!

Those having business at the Court House on Monday morning had visions of a night robbery in the office of the County Treasurer, because as they climbed the steps leading to the building, Oscar, the janitor, was engaged in sweeping up some broken glass.

A hasty inquiry from Jesse J. Ashby, however, dispelled any alarm. In cleaning the windows that morning, Oscar, from a position of vantage on his trusty stepladder, had placed a No. 9 footgear entirely too near the pane. The window was broken on both sides, according to Treasurer Ashby.

SCOUTS TO BEGIN ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT ON AUGUST 2

Daily Schedule To Be Inaugurated Monday—Visiting Days are Wednesdays and Sundays

EXPECTING 35 TO ATTEND

Oakland Troop, No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, will begin its annual summer encampment at its permanent quarters on Deep Creek Lake on Sunday afternoon, according to George H. Hanst, scoutmaster, who, with members of the Troop committee and Ladies' Auxilitary, are arranging the details for the two-weeks' camp. Thirty-five Scouts at least are expecting to be at the camp.

The daily schedule for the camp will start on Monday and will consist of setting up exercises, cleaning up the grounds and inspection, work hour, study hour, swimming three times a day, and a camp fire program in the evening. All will be in bed by nine o'clock.

William Turney will again be the camp cook, and James Lee, former Eagle Scout of Oakland troop, will be second in command. Other assistants this year will be Kenneth Stahl, Leonard Murphy and Elvin Iman, who will be in charge of the swimming periods as well as other details.

All but a few of the scouts will be second class or above that rank at the time camp opens, and those who are still Tenderfoot scouts are expected to pass their final requirements the first few days there.

Wednesdays and Sundays will be visiting days at camp and it is urged that every one who can, visit the camp on these days so that the camp program may not be interrupted.

Each boy attending camp will be required to pay $6.00 for the two weeks and the balance of the expense is being raised by a benefit picture, donations from the Rotary Club and other organizations.

Scouts and their supplies will be taken to camp in trucks and cars supplied by the merchants of town and by interested citizens and parents.

Dr. W. M. Danner To Give Talks on Problems of Leprosy

How modern miracles are being performed through the agency of the American Mission to Lepers will be told in a series of talks by Dr. W. M. Danner, general secretary of this society, at Red House, Oakland and Mountain Lake Park, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Dr. Danner will give his story, illustrated by large photographs, of his visits to leper mission stations the world around. He will stress especially the bright aspects of the problem, the paroling of apparently cured lepers and the rescue of their children who do not inherit leprosy.

There are approximately a thousand people in the United States suffering from leprosy, three hundred of whom are now being cared for in the U. S. Marine Hospital at Carville, La. There are over two million lepers in the world.

Not only the relief of lepers is the objective of this mission, but the ultimate freeing of the world of leprosy.

Dr. Danner will be at Red House Saturday evening; St. Mark's Lutheran church, Oakland, Sunday morning and at the auditorium at Mountain Lake Park on Sunday evening.

Thieves Steal Car Wheel

Authorities are searching for clues as to the identity of the thief or thieves who entered the garage on the property of George Stewart Brown, of Backbone Mountain, near Altamont, last Sunday night and took a spare wheel and tire from a Ford sedan.

Two or three weeks ago a number of Evergreens were removed from the entrance to the Brown place, and a reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest of the culprits.

REDUCTION IN INSURANCE RATE IS PROMISED HERE

Inspection Made of Fire Apparatus and Water Works

A decrease in the insurance rates now in effect in Oakland, has been promised by James Tremble, a member of the Insurance Underwriters' Association of America, with headquartrs in Philadelphia, Pa., who spent a day here last week on a general inspection of the water works system and fire apparatus of the city.

Mr. Tremble made an inspection of all hydrants, valves, sizs of pipe lines, capacity of pumps, reservoirs, output of wells, reserve wells and everything connected with the water and fire departments, including the fire fighting apparatus, trucks, hose and equipment generally.

Upon completion of his inspection Mr. Tremble assured Mayor Grover Stemple and members of council that a reduction would be made in the insurance rates.

Mr. Tremble stated that in his inspection of cities throughout the eastern section of the United States that most of the cities three times the size of Oakland could not compare with the efficiency of the fire department here and the condition of the water works system of the town.

UPHOLSTERER IS FOUND IN PENNSYLVANIA JAIL

Truck and Most of Furniture, Taken from Oaklanders, Is Recovered by Authorities

IS FOUND IN EBENSBURG

Return of most of the furniture obtained from Oakland residents by Earl Klingensmith, who posed as an upholsterer, was effected by Walter H. Haenftling, sheriff, and Cecil Ramsey, constable, last Thursday afternoon, when they discovered the stolen goods near New Kensington, Pa., about 150 miles north of Oakland.

Klingensmith, wanted by Pennsylvania authorities for skipping bond in the sum of $2,500 for an indictment there, was in the Ebensburg jail, where he will remain until his case is disposed of, after which he will be turned over to Garrett county authorities.

A truck which had been purchased from Sharps Motor company, was recovered in Strawstown, Pa., north of Ebensburg. The furniture which had been obtained from several citizens of Oakland under the pretense of repairing it, was slightly damaged, and some of the individual pieces were missing. A new living room suite, purchased from Cuppett's furniture store of Terra Alta, W. Va., was also brought back in a slightly damaged condition.

Klingensmith had received a number of repair jobs and taking the furniture to McHenry, he reloaded it and made his getaway Saturday night.

When turned over to the Garrett county authorities he will be held on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses and larceny of goods.

Foot Nearly Severed by Mowing Machine Knives

Justice of the Peace R. E. Alexander, whose home and farm is located on the Bittinger-Grantsville road a few miles north of Rock Lodge, was seriously injured yesterday morning when, as he was directing a farm hand in the hay field where to cut the grass with a mowing machine, was caught by the cutting bar of the machine and his foot almost severed just above his ankle. The injured man bled so profusely that it was feared he would die from loss of blood before the arrival of Dr. McComas, who was hurriedly summoned by telephone. After rendering first aid the local physician took Mr. Alexander to Memorial Hospital where his wounds were dressed and in which institution he will remain until he recovers.

Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Offutt or Mrs. Willison. The library is in need of funds and if it is not possible to attend the party, a donation will be appreciated, Mrs. Willison stated.

TO BEGIN WORK ON RACE TRACK AT FAIR GROUNDS

Engineer To Be Engaged to Survey Site—Will Be Illuminated For Night Racing

PREMIUM LIST COMPLETE

Following the assurance received from the Maryland Racing Commission that it would be permissible to hold horseracing at the fifteenth annual agricultural fair, to be held at Oakland September 15, 16, 17, and 18, arrangements are being made to lay out the track, according to Henry M. Speicher, secretary and general manager.

A civil engineer is being engaged to survey the grounds and decide on the best place to build the track, and as soon as his decision is accepted by the Fair association, construction will start immediately. The State Roads commission has offered the use of its machinery for scraping, grading, and rolling, and with this available, the work is not expected to be difficult.

It is planned to make the track one-half mile in length, with the curves banked to the proper angle. An engineer for the West Penn Electric company will also come here free of charge to estimate the cost of lighting the track, and the number of flood lights needed.

This track, when completed, will make the sixth one in the State of Maryland, and will be the first one to be illuminated for night racing. Night racing is expected to be one of the features of the annual fair, Mr. Speicher stated.

The premium list for the exhibits has been given to the printer, and will be ready for publication within the next few days. Many changes have been made in the list, according to Mr. Speicher, the premium list having been increased in a number of cases, while prizes for uninteresting exhibits have been lessened.

"With the cooperation of the farmers of the county, and the expected influx of people from other counties to witness the horseracing, this year should be the best in the history of the Garrett County Agricultural Fair Association," Mr. Spelcher concluded.

Knights to Give Away Plymouth Sedan on September 7th

Hon. Millard E. Tydings, United States Senator from Maryland, will be the principal speaker at the annual Labor Day picnic to be held on Monday, September 7, under the auspices of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, it has been announced.

The committee in charge of this part of the day's program received a letter from Senator Tydings on Wednesday, stating that he would be delighted to attend the twelfth annual Labor Day picnic as observed by the local organization.

Grand Lodge officers and Supreme Lodge officers have also been invited to attend the picnic, but no word has been received as to whether or not they will be here.

The various committees are meeting weekly and completing arrangements for the affair which has been planned on a large scale.

A Plymouth tudor Sedan, valued at $660, was purchased by the lodge last week and will be given away on the evening of September 7.

The picnic will be held in Helbig's Grove, along the State road at the north edge of town, and the general manager has been in communication with several amusement companies which want to come to Oakland on that day.

Son of Oakland Visitors Dies of Broken Neck

PHILIP'S MISSIONARY LABORS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:5-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Philip Tells a Stranger About Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Philip An Early Missionary.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Pioneering for Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Gospel Breaks Over the Frontier.

I. Philip Preaching in Samaria (vv. 5-8).

In taking the gospel to the Samaritans we see the broadening of the scope of Christianity. Philip was one of the seven so-called deacons. He went to Samaria and preached Christ showing that God's purpose included these despised people. Christ is the true message of the evangelist. Not Christ as an ethical teacher or as an example, but Christ as the Savior from sin through the offering of himself on the cross as a substitutionary ransom.

II. Philip Preaching to the Ethiopian (Acts 8:26-39).

Following the preaching to the Samaritans, the gospel was preached to the Ethiopian who was in all probability a Gentile. In his conversion we see the gospel in its outreach to the ends of the earth.

1. Philip meeting the Ethiopian (vv. 26-30).

a. Leaving work by divine direction (v. 26). The Lord called Philip away from a great work in Samaria and specifically directed him to this man. The Spirit of God directed him to go near and join himself to the chariot. The tactful question put to the treasurer gained him a seat by his side. The mission which at first seemed so unpromising was now clear.

b. An officer of state seeking the way of salvation (vv. 27, 28). The Ethiopian had been to Jerusalem to worship. Despite his high official position he was not ashamed of the worship of God. The journey from that far-off country required hardship and expense, but to one whose soul yearns after God this is all joy.

c. A providential meeting in the desert (vv. 29, 30). The coming together of these two men was clearly the predetermined way of God.

2. Philip preaching to the Ethiopian (vv. 30-35).

a. The Ethiopian's employment on the way (v. 30). He was reading the Word of God. The particular portion was the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. A most excellent way to spend one's time while traveling is to read God's Word. It is through God's Word that the individual is shown the way of life.

b. The need of an interpreter (v. 31). The Ethiopian was reading one of the clearest testimonies to the Messiah in the Old Testament, yet he was unable to understand it. The Ethiopian, a great statesman, needed an interpreter of the Scriptures. The gospel needs to be experienced before one can be a witness to its saving power. The human mind in its natural state is blind to spiritual things, making the work of an evangelist indispensable. Preaching the Word of God will always be necessary. God has designed that through the foolishness of preaching, men shall be saved. Valuable, indeed, as the Bible is in the hands of men, the touch and influence of the believing man who has experienced the work of God in his own heart is needed.

c. Philip's message (vv. 32-35). He began at the scripture which the Ethiopian was reading and preached unto him Jesus. This shows us that the person presented in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah as suffering in the stead of others was Jesus Christ, also that the central theme of the preacher's message should be Christ crucified. He did not preach Jesus as a great teacher, but as a Savior who had suffered and died in the stead of sinners. The vicarious atonement is a note which is at the very heart of the message of every evangelist.

3. Philip baptized the Ethiopian (vv. 36-38). As a result of Philip's preaching, the eunuch proposed baptism. When Christ is truly received men will desire to confess him in baptism. Where this desire is lacking the gospel in its fullness is evidently not preached. The Ethiopian might have offered many excuses as to why he should neglect this important ordinance, but like every man who is honest before God, he was willing at any cost to render obedience.

4. The Ethiopian rejoicing (v. 39). Having been baptized, he went on his way rejoicing. Confession of Christ and obedience to his Word always brings joy.

Worry

Oh, if religion can only rid us of this cursed habit of worry, what a blessing it will be! And Paul says it can. He is writing in the shadow of a prison. "Be anxious for nothing!" What a song to sing itself through prison bars!—James I. Vance.

The Cross

The cross is the real measure of life. You either stumble over it to spiritual death or you rise on it to newness of life.—P. T. Forsyth.

COMMUNICABLE DISEASES REPORT MADE ON STATE

Measles and Influenza Responsible For Half of Sickness

Measles and influenza were responsible for more than half of the sickness from communicable diseases reported to the State Department of Health during the first half of the current year, according to the records of the Department for the six months ending June 30.

Altogether, 49,863 cases of notifiable diseases were reported, 18,351 from the counties and 31,512 from Baltimore City. This was an increase of 30,000 over the total for the corresponding period of 1930 when 19,778 cases were recorded, 8,337 from the counties and 11,441 from Baltimore City.

Of the notifiable diseases reported, measles led with 20,218 cases, of which 5,293 occurred in the counties and 14,925 in Baltimore City. Influenza came next with 9,112 cases, 4,510 in the counties and 4602 in Baltimore City. During the corresponding period of 1930, 1,017 cases of measles were reported and 812 of influenza.

The pneumonias showed the increases usually observed in connection with outbreaks of influenza and of measles. During the first six months of the current year, 1,447 cases of broncho pneumonia and 1,348 of lobar pneumonia were reported in comparison with 1,088 of broncho pneumonia and 1,192 of lobar pneumonia during the corresponding period of last year. There were 1,146 cases of whooping cough, 421 reported from the counties and 725 from Baltimore City in comparison with 1,043 during the same period of last year, when 536 were reported from the counties and 507 from Baltimore City.

There were decreases in scarlet fever and in diphtheria, but in both instances the reduction was more marked in Baltimore Ciyt than in the counties. There were 1,982 cases of scarlet fever reported, 1,011 from the counties and 971 from Baltimore City in comparison with 2,275 during the first six months of 1930, when 853 were reported from the counties and 1,122 from Baltimore City, and 425 cases of diphtheria, 223 from the counties and 202 from Baltimore City in comparison with 549 for the corresponding period of last year when 216 cases were reported from the counties and 333 from Baltimore City.

There were 109 cases of typhoid fever reported, ten fewer than during the corresponding period of 1930; 6 cases of malaria in comparison with 7 in 1930; 16 of undulant or Malta fever, an increase of two over the number reported in 1930; 8 cases of rabbit or tularemia, the same number reported in 1930; 7 of typhus fever; 6 of Rocky Mountain spotted fever; 7 of pellagra and 1 of leprosy. There were no cases of smallpox.

The total deaths from all causes recorded in the State during the six months ending on thirtieth of June was 11,731, of which 5,426 occurred in the counties and 6,305 in Baltimore City, in comparison with 11,088 during the first six months of 1930, of which 5,211 occurred in the counties and 5,877 in Baltimore City. June, with a total of 4,278 cases of communicable diseases and 1600 deaths from all causes, had the most favorable record with regard to both sickness and deaths.

CITY'S VOLUNTEER "SMOKE-EATERS"

Oakland Has Good Protection Against Fire

As told by A. T. Shaw, manager of the local Monongahela West-Penn Public Service Company's office, in the July-August number of the organization's magazine, "Courtesy and Service."

And now Oakland, Maryland, speaks for its volunteer department, described by all who have seen it in action as one of the most efficient organizations of its kind in Monongahela System territory. The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department has been organized for five years and scores of times every year it has demonstrated its great worth not only to Oakland, but to surrounding communities. During 1930, for instance, the fire laddies answered 22 calls, and nine were outside communities, including four to Mountain Lake Park; two to Crellin and one each to Aurora, Deer Park and Gortner.

Modern equipment protects the homes of the Oakland territory, because the volunteer fire fighters, in their desire to offer the soundest fire insurance in the world, a completely equipped and well-organized department, have from time to time discarded the old and slow trucks and replaced them with trucks that are the latest word in fire-fighting. The department started its career with a Ford ton truck, carrying a 140-gallon chemical tank; 300 feet of three-quarter inch chemical hose and 300 feet of two and a half inch hose. Later a Dodge truck was purchased and the equipment transferred to it. In December, 1926, a Locomobile truck, carrying a 500-gallon pumper and 800 feet of two and a half inch hose was added, but four years later both of these trucks were discarded.

Oakland now has two most modern fire engines, both of American LaFrance make. Truck No. 1 has a 135 horsepower motor, 750 gallon pump, 80 gallon booster tank, 200 feet of three-quarter inch booster tank hose, ladders, hand extinguishers, foamite extinguishers, extra nozzles, smoke helmets, buckets and safety kits.

Truck No. 2 has a 98 horsepower motor, 500 gallon pumper, 100 gallon booster tank, 200 feet of three-quarter inch booster tank hose and other auxiliary equipment. There is 1750 feet of 2½ inch hose distributed between the two trucks. The trucks and equipment cost $22,000, which Oakland considers money well spent.

Five men in the department, R. R. Gilbert, Fred Peddicord, Lee R. Mason, Emroy Bolden and George T. Kerins are versed in first aid work, and many times are called upon to treat accident victims, not only at fires but in many other cases.

Thirty-five men compose the department personnel, and in Oakland, like other cities with volunteer departments, old men and young, are anxious to become members, so that the waiting list is a long one. The city's most prominent citizens are members of the department.

L. R. Mason, P. Frantz, R. R. Gilbert, R. L. Wolfe, H. P. Stuck, M. Maroney, Frank Blake, Leo Helbig, Wilbur Davis, G. A. Whorton, Arthur Hinebaugh, James Kerins, James Lewis, Arthur Lawton, Ernest Townshend, Jr., E. A. Shaffer, A. L. Lawton, John Sweeney, Paul McIntire, James Carney, Eugene Carney, James Hart, William Gower, J. C. Griffith, Ralph Thayer, A. T. Shaw.

Incidentally, cities and towns of the Monongahela System are fortunate in having such efficient fire departments. Several towns are large enough to support full-time departments and these are as efficient as any in citles of their size and of some much larger communities. Of the volunteer fire departments there can be nothing but praise. To protect community and private property is one of the greatest public services that can be performed and when it is done without pay, the quality of such service readily becomes apparent.

EDITOR MARTIN, OF "THE TRANSMITTER," DELIVERS ADDRESS REFORE OAKLAND ROTARY CLUD ON THE NATIONAL HIGHWAY

Following is an address on "The National Pike," delivered last Friday evening at the Rotary Club dinner served at Table Rock Inn, located on the Northwestern Turnpike south of Oakland, by J. O. Martin, of Washington, D. C., editor of "The Transmitter," service magazine of the C. & P. Telephone Company. The speaker was accompanied to the Inn by Mr. H. S. Boyle, Jr., manager of the telephone company at Cumberland. Mr. Martin was introduced to the club by Mr. W. O Davis, chairman of the entertainment committee of the local organization.

Mr. Martin said:

The heavy wheels of a big, canvas-covered wagon rattled over the cobble-stones of a street in Baltimore, and the bells on the harness of the six-horse team jingled a merry tune. The driver swung his long whip over the backs of his steeds as they turned into Frederick Road. Night was coming on and the driver had decided that he would stop for the night at Hawes Tavern, six miles out of the city. He was tired. He had brought a load of pork into Baltimore that morning, unloaded it, loaded up with general merchandise, and was now on his way to Wheeling with his cargo, a journey that would take him the better part of two weeks.

His team was not the only one on the road that evening. Dozens of men like him were driving six-horse teams along the old National Road every day in the year. In 1822, 5,000 such wagons unloaded in Wheeling.

More than one hundred years after this chariot had rattled over the stony streets of Baltimore, a friend of mine and I followed in his footsteps—or, rather his wheel tracks. But we traveled in a Ford that made no noise at all—well, hardly any—and we had no bells on our harness.

The traveler going west by automobile today does not follow the road out of Baltimore that the wagoners and stagecoach drivers did. The modern motorist naturally travels by the most direct, best paved, most uninteresting, most completely hot-dogged and thoroughly bill-boarded way.

Indeed, unless he is familiar with old books and maps, the chances are that he will not know that there is more than one road leading out of Baltimore toward Ellicott City.

To follow the wagon tracks out of Baltimore you go through quiet country lanes and tree-shaded avenues and finally into the present Frederick Road near a hill called Devil's Elbow, just before you arrive at Ellicott City.

The modern motorist will tell you that following the ghost of a stage-coach driver or wagoner who has been gathered to his fathers for nearly a century is a crazy way to get out of Baltimore, and maybe it is, but the fact remains that the world is just full of crazy people, many of whom are modern motorists.

This highway from Baltimore westward, in addition to its many local names, is called, when considered in its entirety, the Old National Pike, and it connects the Chesapeake Bay with the Mississippi River—Baltimore to St. Louis.

Strictly speaking, the name National Road, or Cumberland Road, or United States Road, belongs only to that section between Cumberland and Wheeling. The Act of Congress which in 1806 authorized the building of this road, was called "An act to regulate the laying out and making a road from Cumberland, in the State of Maryland, to the State of Ohio." The act was passed at the time Ohio was admitted to the Union, when there was no West Virginia, and when the country west of the Ohio River was laregly wilderness. The road was referred to in the original act and in subsequent acts as the Cumberland Road, although it soon came to be known as the National Pike.

While the original act provided only for the building of a road from Cumberland to Wheeling, the pressure later brought to bear on Congress from the settlements beyond the Ohio was so great that subsequent legislation provided for a road in a straight line to a point opposite St. Louis, on the Mississippi. This road was surveyed through the forests and a right of way was cleared, and much of it completed by the National Government, especially in Ohio, but parts of it had to be completed by the individual states through which it passed.

All of the road was eventually turned over to the individual states because Congress would not appropriate money for its maintenance and it was felt that the National Government had no authority to collect toll. It was after the individual states came into possession of the road that the toll gates were erected on that portion of it built by the government.

The Baltimore-Cumberland section was built and was made up largely of older and shorter roads which were formerly Indian paths, local dirt roads or pieces of roads built by the state or by local turnpike companies.

What you call a road depends largely on where you are and where you are going. If you are in Baltimore and going to Frederick, you naturally think of the road as the Frederick Pike. If you are in Frederick and going to Hagerstown, you think of the road as the Hagerstown Pike. But if you are in Baltimore and going all the way through to Wheeling, you think of the road as the Old National Pike.

This old highway is one of the most used in the country; it is also one of the most historic and picturesque. It follows as direct a course over the Allegheny Mountains as the nature of the country will allow and is the shortest and most natural way for road travel between Baltimore and Washington and points west.

Built before canals and railroads, it was the link that tied up the unknown western part of our country with the older and more closely settled eastern part, and carried trade, traffic and mails between the two sections. In the opinion of many students of history, it was not only the leading factor in the rapid settlement of what we now call the Middle West, but it prevented the formation of a new republic along the Ohio by providing a continuous and constantly-used tie with the east.

Over this road flowed a tide of emigration from east to west. Over this road in both directions went long lines of Conestoga wagons, carrying freight of all kinds. Over this road went droves of cattle, horses, mules, hogs and sheep. Over this road—whisper it softly—truged groups of poor black slaves tied two by two to a long rope. Over this road, when it was barely a trail through the wilderness, went Braddock, the proud British general, and with him went the young George Washington.

Over this road went the famous men of the west of the early days, when affairs brought them to the Nation's capital or to Baltimore, and over this road went men of the east who sought adventure, profit or glory on the frontier. Jefferson traveled over it, and Lafayette, and Andrew Jackson, and Zachary Taylor, and James K. Polk, and William Henry Harrison, and James G. Blaine, and Sam Houston, and Davy Crockett and thousands of forgotten men and women who rode in the stagecoaches that are now dust and ashes.

I left you at Ellicott City while I went rambling off into ancient history. To me the greatest charm of this old town lies not in its old homes or quaint stone buildings that come right out to the sidewalk, or its flour mills or its memories of other days, but in the fact that the town is built on seemingly perpendicular hills that rise from the river. The houses seem piled up in tiers, and the streets are so steep that they wind around instead of going straight. Apparently no two houses or streets are on the same level.

Ellicott City came into being in 1772 when Andrew Ellicott and his brother established a mill on the river. The Ellicotts were shrewd Scots and they soon had a tavern and a general store. In order to attract the wheat farmers from Frederick county they built a road between their mill and Frederick and also improved the existing road between their mill and Baltimore.

A few miles out of Ellicott City you pass the entrance to Doughoregan Manor. Here lived in his later years Charles Carroll of Carrollton, who was the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence. At the time of the signing he was living on his estate Carrollton, in Carroll county. Immediately across the road from the entrance are the ruins of Saint Charles' College. This was an educational institution—a training school for young men about to enter the Catholic priesthood, and was founded in 1831 with funds donated by Charles Carroll, who also gave 250 acres of land from his estate. The buildings were destroyed by fire in 1911 and the college was later established on a tract near Catonsville.

Beyond Ridgeville you will travel for miles through what can be described in no better way than by calling it smiling country. And then you reach New Market, the old houses of which are strung along the highway like worn wooden beads on a string.

You arrive at the Jug Bridge over the Monocacy. The name of the river is Indian for right ear and the name of the bridge comes from the fact that at the end toward Baltimore the builders erected in stone a large jug or decanter, and it is said that sealed up inside this stone jug is a jug of whiskey. It was built in 1808.

This is one of the several stone bridges you will cross before you reach Wheeling, and they are all beautifully and solidly constructed. When you realize that bridge builders in the early days of our republic lacked the modern steam and electrical machinery that we have, you will say that they were bridge builders indeed.

In this general neighborhood was fought the battle of the Monocacy, in 1864. General Jubal Early, Confederate,came down the Shenandoah Valley with 23,000 men, detached from the Army of Northern Virginia, to threaten Washington and divert Grant from proceeding against Richmond. General Lew Wallace, Federal, advanced to meet him with emergency forces gathered in the vicinity of Frederick and gave battle at the Monocacy. Although Wallace was defeated, he succeeded in delaying Early's advance by 24 hours and gave the Federals time to gather a force with which to successfully defend the Nation's capital.

Frederick, the next town reached, has been in existence since 1745, and is of much interest from a historical standpoint. It was in Frederick that Barbara Fritchie is said to have waved the American flag in the face of Stonewall Jackson. I realize, of course, that there is some doubt as to whether Barbara waved any flag at all, but I don't propose to be get mixed up in that dispute.

Between Frederick and Hagerstown, you pass over South Mountain where a battle was founght during the war between the States, and through the town of Boonsboro where the first monument was erected to the memory of George Washington.

Then you ride into Hagerstown, a trading center for a prosperous farming community and was founded by Jonathan Hager in 1762.

Out of Hagerstown the road goes almost straight west towards the mountains that lie east of Cumberland. Indeed, if you go right on to Wheeling, you will ride through mountains for practically all of the way.

On the top of Fairview Mountain is a stone house in which you can get the inevitable chicken dinner which is so persistently advertised along American roads. If I ever start a roadside inn—which I might be tempted to do after I get too useless for anything else—I am going to advertise lamb stew or Hungarian goulash or something else that will appeal to the chicken-weary tourist. For me, chicken is just chicken. Hereafter, if the vendor of roadside meals wishes to tempt me with fowl, it will be necessary to plaster the front gate with signs proclaiming that ostrich, cassowary or emu may be had inside.

On the east side of Fairview you pass through country associated with the war between the States. On the west side of the same mountain you enter country associated with a much earlier struggle, the French and Indian War, which took place in 1755.

In the village of Indian Springs you will find a road which will take you to old Fort Frederick, which was built in 1756, in order to protect the colonists from the Indian raids that followed Braddock's defeat. This old fort was built of stone and is in a good state of preservation and well worth a visit.

From Indian Springs you travel to Hancock, where you come right down to the level of the Potomac. Here the Potomac reaches farthest north, on account of a great bend. At this point it is a matter of only five miles or so across Maryland from West Virginia to Pennsylvania.

Here, also, river, railroad, highway and canal are all side by side. In this connection, it is interesting to note the competition in transportation that existed in this part of the country for many years. The National Road was built in the years immediately following 1806, and was used by wagoners until railroad transportation made their business unprofitable. The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company was chartered in 1824. The building of the B. & O. R. R. was begun in 1828.

The building of the canal was Alexandria's and Washington's bid for the trade of the west. The building of the railroad was Baltimore's answer. The canal was opened to Cumberland in 1850 and was in business continually until 1924, when floods damaged it so severely that it was decmed impracticable to rebuild it.

The first railroad train arrived in Cumberland in 1842 and for the next eleven years Cumberland was the western terminus of the line.

Although the railroad put the old pike out of business to such an extent that grass grew in lt in places, the automobile restored it to life. What the airplane is going to do to it I leave to your imagination. In the next 25 years the airplane is going to do a lot of things to a lot of cities and roads.

But we don't need to worry about that today.

After you leave Hancock, you begin the ascent of Tonoloway Ridge, which is a climb of two miles. Indeed, wrom here on into Cumberland the story of the old pike is one of ups and downs—up one side of a mountain and down the other. And there is something distinctlve about nearly every one of these.

I remember Tonoloway on account of a filling station called Jack's place. As you approach it messages on rocks and trees keep reminding one that there are big mountains ahead and that you had better fill up with gas and oil.

Sideling Hill is remembered because it was probably called Sidelong Hill originally. You don't go up and over; you crawl along the side of the hill for some distance before reaching the crest, and then you crawl along the other side before making the descent.

Town Till is three feet higher than Sideling, but the road passes over it with less winding. From its slopes one can look down into the cleared valleys filled with peaceful farms. At least, they look peaceful from the mountain side, but you really can't tell what might be going on down there.

The next elevation worth talking about is spelled P-o-l-i-s-h. I have heard it called Palish Mountain and Polish Mountain. The girl at the filling station on top said the word is pronounced Polish because in the fall of the year, when the trees are brilliant with reds, yellows, purples and browns, the mountain looks as though it had been polished. Those who hold that the true pronuciation is Palish Mountain, say that it is so named because a man of that name once lived there. Far be it from me to decide which is right.

On a journey over this road we pulled into Flintstone after dark and decided to spend the night there. Now, there is no reason in the world why anybody should want to stay all night in Flintstone unless he craves to sleep in an ancient inn. And that's exactly what I wanted to do.

If you are a man who simply must have a morning bath and hot water for shaving, and grapefruit for breakfast, and demi-tasse for dinner, followed by finger-bowls, and you cannot be happy without a lot of other things that so-called civilized people worry themselves about, it will be better for your own peace of mind to say nothing about that of the landlord, if you will just keep right on whizzing by when you are tempted to stop at an ancient inn. But if you are just naturally curious about everything both ancient and modern, and take not too much thought about what you shall eat or where you shall sleep, you will probably find it interesting. I did.

We were personally entertained by the proprietor, Dr. Twigg, who was also the physician for the community. He confided to us that in his 40 years of practice in that vicinity he had been present at the arrival of 3200 new (and very young) citizens—which number is about ten times that of the present population. However, 40 years is a long time and people do move on to the big cities.

These old taverns are a part of the history of the old road. Let your imagination picture the gay scenes that took place in the bar-room of such a tavern on a winter's night, with the wagoners gathered 'round and somebody playing the fiddle. In a big room next to the bar the wagoners slept. Each carried his own bedding in a box in front of the wagon. When it was time to retire each man simply spread out his bed on the floor with his feet to the fire.

Henry Clay once spent a night at this tavern, but not with his feet to the fire. He had a room upstairs. Henry was a sort of hero all along the old road, because he fought in Congress for appropriations for it. During Henry's time this road was a constant factor in national politics.

I had a room looking out on what was once the wagon yard. Early in the morning I was awakened by the noise of a man and a boy chasing a cow through the yard. Had it been 100 years earlier I would have been awakened by the noise of the wagoners getting ready to start.

Let's look at a wagon yard of the long ago. Here are 30 or more wagone scattered about like the wagons of a gypsy encampment. They have high bodies, the ends shaped somewhat like the stern of a boat, and are gaily painted, blue being a favorite color. Frequently two or three colors may be seen on the same wagon. Above the body billows the canvas top, spread over the iron bows that support it. The tires are four inches wide so as not to cut into the road. A higher rate of toll is charged for wagone with narrow tires. The horses have been fed from a box at the end of the wagon and are now tethered to the wagon tongue. It is evening. Inside the tavern there is singing. Presently the lights go out and all becomes quiet, except for the noise of a drove of hogs in a field adjoining the yard and a batch of Kentucky mules munching corn.

Immediately after leaving Flintstone on the next morning we went over Martin's Mountain. I have no idea for which member of the large and well-distributed Martin tribe this mountain was named, but I am grateful to him. If he felt that he just naturally had to have a mountain named for the family, it is nice to know that he selected one worthy of the name. It is higher than anything elsc between Baltimore and Cumberland.

When George Washington, in 1753, made a long journey through the wilderness and over the mountains from Williamsburg, Va., to the Ohio River, to warn the French that their presence on that river was undesirable, he stopped for a few days near a pass through the mountains, at which place a fort was later erected. Around that fort has grown up the City of Cumberland, the second largest city in Maryland.

The fort was called Fort Cumberland, in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, a friend of General Braddock, and an adviser to the king on American affairs. By 1785 the settlement around the old fort,the site of which is now occupied by the Episcopal church, had grown into a permanent town.

About half a century later the C. and O. Canal terminated at Cumberland, as did, for 11 years, the B. and O. It can be readily seen that the city was an important trade center, especially when you take into consideration the fact that the main road from the west came into the town. The pike between Wheeling and Cumberland was crowded with stage coaches, freight wagons and droves of cattle and swine, all traveling eastward toward the canal and the railroad.

From Cumberland westward you are on the true National Pike. There are two ways out of Cumberland to the west and both were built by the United States Government. One is the old way, which follows Braddock's Trail over Will's Mountain, and the other is the pass known as the Narrows. Both come together six miles outside the city.

I should like to continue talking with you about this old road, and to go on with you over it all the way to Wheeling. But I am afraid we will have to leave that for another time. At this time, I can only refer to some of the things you might see on such a journey, including Braddock's Road, and Big Savage Mountain and Little Savage Mountain, and the old taverns, and the toll gates, and the mining towns, and those long, long grades.

It is hard for the automobile driver to realize just how wonderful must have been the skill of those stage-coach and wagon drivers. Think of driving six horses down a two-mile mountain grade covered with ice, with a three to five-ton load pushing from behind. Think now that in the early days of the road there were no brakes on the wagon. Some of the drivers would stick a sapling in a wheel instead, and some of them managed to get along without it. Think now of holes in the road and hairpin turns and traffic coming in the opposite direction. Think now of rain and darkness and a few other things. You may imagine you are quite a driver because you can guide a splendid machine along a splendid piece of road. Shucks, man; you don't know what driving it.

Or think of that same outfit coming up that same grade with that same load. When you see how those long grades take the fighting spirit out of busses and big trucks and make them crawl along like giane insects, you realize that getting a load to the top by animal horsepower was no child's play.

I said that I would stop at eight o'clock. It is now that time; I am a man of my word. I have stopped.

ASSASSIN
A Drinker of Hashish!

In eleventh-century Persia, a secret order was founded by Hassan ben Sabbah, indulging in the use of the Oriental drug hashish, and, when under its influence, in the practice of secret murder. The murderous drinker of hashish came to be called hashish in the Arabic and from that origin comes our English word assassin!

THE PASSING OF A FRIEND.

In the passing of Captain James A. Hayden, the editor of The Republican notes the loss of a friend of more than fifty years standing.

As a mere boy the writer entered the employ of Capt. Hayden, then the owner and publisher of The Republican. For several years he was identified with the newspaper as an employe and in all that time the "Captain," as he was known to everyone, was the kindliest soul one would wish to meet and to have as an associate.

As a soldier Captain Hayden was such in every sense of the word; as a gentleman he had no peer; as a Christian character he stood well in the community and in his church relationships; as a citizen he was loyal in everything looking to the uplift and betterment of mankind.

His presence in the community and his occasional friendly visits to The Republican office will be greatly missed and regretted by everyone who had the pleasure of knowing him.

Now and then a piping voice is heard complaining because President Hoover did not warn the people early in 1929 that they were riding to a fall in the matter of speculation and thus prevent the collapse which carried down so many fortunes in November of that year. In view of which complaint it is more or less interesting to recall that in August, 1929, a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal urged American women to manipulate their household budgets so that funds would be available for investment in common stocks. The writer was recognized as one of the great business master minds of the country, and there is no telling how much potential egg and vegetable money went into common stocks and was there when the market collapsed two months later. The writer of the article was the Honorable John J. Raskob, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

EDUCATION

(By John Nedrow, Friendsville, Md.)

Manhood, not scholarship, is the first step in education.

After I have applied my mind with more than ordinary attention to my studies, it is my usual custom to then relax and unbend it in the conversation of such as are rather easy than shining companions.

This century, which some have called the age of iron, has been an age of ideas, an era of seeking and finding, the like of which was never known before. It is an epoch the grandeur of which dwarfs all others that can be named since the beginning of historic period, if not since man became distinctively human.

And the intellectual development of the human race has been suddenly, almost abruptly, raised to a higher plane than that upon which it had proceeded from the days of the primitive troglodyte to the days of our great-grandfathers. It is characteristic of this higher plane of development that the progress which until lately was so slow must henceforth be rapid. It is true men's minds are more flexible, the resistence to innovation is weakening, while the intellectual demands are multiplying, the means of satisfying them are increasing.

At the recent examination, which ended my four years' course in the local high school, I believe that I attach quite as much value as is reasonable to high school distinctions, but it would be a grievous evil if the good of a man's reading for four years were all to depend on the result of a single examination, affected as that result must ever in some degree be by causes independent of a man's intellectual excellence.

It is true every man is said to have his peculiar ambition and I am confident that among my fellow-classmen there is such a variety of talents that each has an ambition to develop that talent. We may require a lifetime to develop our talents to the height of our ambition—we are young and unknown to many of you. We were born and some have ever remained in the most humble walks of life. May each one consider as a supposition that she or he are without any wealthy or popular relations to offer a recommendation; therefore it is to the advantage of the individual that his desires of the greatest of life's pleasures rest in his own hands.

I am certain that among this group there are some who are contemplating to offer in return for the knowledge they have acquired their services toward the up-building and promotion of the ideals which have been taught them. Let it be remembered by these few or many whom I have enumerated heretofore that like all highly developed literature the Bible contains a great deal of sensational fiction, imagined with intense vividness, appealing to the most susceptible passions, and narrated with a force which the ordinary man is unable to resist.

Perhaps only an expert can thoroughly appreciate the power with which a story well told or an assertion well made, takes possession of a mind not specially trained to criticize it.

Try to imagine all that is most powerful in English literature bound into one volume and offered to a comparatively barbarous race as an instrument of civilization and education invested with supernatural authority! Indeed let us leave what we call the barbarous race out of the question, and suppose it offered to this glorious nation on the same assumptions as to its nature and authority which the children of the public schools are led to make today concerning the Bible under the school board compromise. Who could stand up against the inspiration and moral grandeur of our prophets and poets, from Langland to Blake and Shelley? Let it be remembered that the power of the Scripture has not waned with the ages. Why not teach children the realities of inspiration and revelation as they work daily through scribes and law givers? It would in all events make better journalists and counsellors of them.

Let us ask ourselves, what is education? Above all things what is our ideal of a thoroughly liberal education? Of that education which, if we could begin life again, we would give ourselves—of that education which, if we could mould the fates to our own will, we would give our children?

Well, I know not what may be your conception of this matter, but I will tell you mine, and I hope that I shall find that our views are very divergent.

That man, I think, who has had a liberal education, who has been so trained in his youth that his body is the ready servant of his will and does with ease and pleasure all that, as a mechanism, it is capable of, whose intellect is a clear, cold, logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength and in smooth working order, ready like a steam engine to be turned to any kind of work and spin the gassamers as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who is full of life and fire and whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience, who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness and to respect others as himself, such an one and no other, I conceive has had a liberal education, for he is completely as a man can be, in harmony with nature. He will make the best of her and she of him.

SPORTS TO ASK PROBE OF YOUGHIOGHENY POLLUTION

Fishermen Believe Bass Have Been Killed in Upper Reaches

The outstanding disappointment of the bass fishing season, says a news story dated at Connellsville on the 25th inst., is the discovery that waters of the Youghiogheny River have been polluted to such an extent that fish life there is nearly, if not altogether, extinct—has aroused sportsmen of Fayette and adjoining counties. An investigation of the condition is to be asked and the outcome of such action will be watched with considerable interest.

There was a report in the spring that ice going out at a low water stage had caused heavy loss of fish life. Since the opening of the season reports of catches in the Yough have been few and far between. Fishermen claim there is a source of pollution in Maryland which had caused casualties among fish life on a previous occasion and now there are persistent rumors that upon it rests responsibility for nearly complete disappearance of fish from the river.

It is understood that Congressman Samuel A. Kendall will be asked to institute a Federal investigation into the matter. He has always evidenced a keen interest in efforts of sportsmen to stock the stream and it is believed he will prove of valuable assistance in restoring fish life there.

Inasmuch as the source of pollution is in Maryland sportsmen say they do not know to what extent the authority of the State Fish Commission may be used. The matter is also to be submitted to the Izaak Walton League of America and support of that organization enlisted to stop contamination of the stream.

The upper waters of the Youghiogheny were regarded as one of the finest bass streams in this part of the State. They have been kept free from sulphur but at times dead and dying fish on the surface have indicated pollution from another source. It is understood that a previous investigation disclosed this fact. Now that the bass seem to have been wiped entirely from the river, sportsmen are asserting polluted waters and not the passing of ice in the spring is responsible.

Thousands of young bass have been put into the river in recent years and, if anything, the fishing there should be showing an improvement instead of becoming an almost extinct pastime.

Dogs that bark all the time over nothing can easily become neighborhood nuisances, especially if there are children or sick people or hard-working parents who have necessary sleep disturbed. But the dog that barks only for cause may be of great benefit. A group of neighbors had a Chicago man arrested because his dogs barked too much. Two boys admitted tossing pebbles at the windows at night to make the dogs bark. "The dogs were merely doing their duty," said the just and learned judge. CHAPTER XXXIX

"I am commander in chief of the allied armies in Frnace," said General Foch, "and my appointment has been sanctioned by the signature not only of the British and French governments but also by the President of the United States. Hence, I believe myself in a position to insist.

"There is a program signed by Lord Milner and Generni Pershing at London. I ask to be made a party to this arrangement, since America has given me the strategic direction of the war, or else I have ao reason for holding the position.

"So I ask that an agreement be made this evening among Lord Milner, General Pershing and myself, extending to June what has been decided on for May.

"I cannot forget the responsibilities weighing on me, because of the fact that the allied governments have intrusted to me the direction of operations in France."

Of conrse all present knew that no aathority to dictate regarding auch matters had been conferred upon him and his remarks only showed that the allies were ready to go to almost any leagth to carry their point.

Clemenceau Makes Plea.

Premier Clemenceau then said he agreed with General Foch and favored aa American army, but that the Germans were at Villers-Bretonaeux, nnd if the lines were broken there the enemy might quickly arrive under the walls of Paris, aad liaison between the allied armies might have to he established on the Loire, or if the lines were pierced at Hnzebrouck the enemy could reach the sea.

"Whnt is importnnt for the morale of our soldiers," he said, "is not to tell them that the American soldiers are arriving but to show them thut they hnve arrived."

In my opinion the plan proposed was entirely unsound, and I thought that the best and quickest way to help the allies would be to build up an Americnn army. Moreover, the implied presumption that the council might dictate to us either as a council or through the allied commander in chief in the arbitrary manner indicated set me more firmly than ever agalast American units serving in allied armies. The dny's discussion made it quite clenr thnt both allies intended to get commitment to the proposed schedule as far into the future as possible.

Saw Pershing Opposing Wilson.

A telegram sent by the British secretary of state for foreign affairs April 8, 1918, to Lord Reading, British ambassndor at Washington, aald:

"It is evident from the brief nccount of the conversation thnt General Pershing'a views are absolutely inconsistent with the hroad policy which we believe the I'resident has accepted. The main difference, of course, is thnt we interpret it as meaning that 480,000 infantry and machine guns are to he brigaded with French and British troops in the course of four moaths. General Pershing admits no such obligntion and does not conceal the fnct thnt he disnpproves of the policy.

"A second and minor difference is that, whlie the British government quite agrees as to the propriety of ultimately withdrnwing American troops brigaded with the French and British so as to form an American army, they do not think this process could or ought to be attempted until the end of the season for active operations this year draws to its close, say, in October or November.

"I am unwilling to embarrass tbe President, wbo has shown such a firm grasp of the situation, with criticisms of his officers. But the difference of opinion is so fundamental and touches so nearly the issues of the whole war that we are bound to have the matter cleared ap."

Three Meet Privately.

At M. Clemencean's suggestion the meeting of the council was adjourned at this point that Foch, Lord Milner and I might meet and examine the question and see if some agreement conld not be reached. Whereupon we repaired to an adjacent room and went over the whole subject again.

My proposnl was more liberal than the circumstances or my own views on tbe subject really warranted. It conceded priority for a limited number of the infantry and machine-gun units, but generally it contemplated the shipment of artillery for divisions and corps and rnilways troops, mechanics aad labor troops for the service of the rear, all of which were badly needed.

It was the distinct aaderstnnding, however, as already promised by Foch, that if we would consent to make the concession as to infantry and machine-gua units the French would help ns out with artillery when the time came to form nn American army. But, of course, they could not furnish men for other services, nor for the services of supply, without which we could not function as an army.

Others Insist on Program.

When we met Milaer, and especially Foch, insisted that the war would be lost unless their program was carried out. I repeated the arguments already presented to the council and added that I full renlized the military emergency, but did not think that the plan to bring over untrained units to fight under British nnd Frnnch commands would either relieve the situation or end the war.

I pointed out that, regardless of tbe depressing conditions and the very urgent aeed of men by the allies, their plan was not practicable, and that even if sound in principle there was not time enough to prepnre our men as individuals for efficient service under a new system, with the strange surroundings to be found in a foreign army.

Here Foch said: "Yon are willing to risk our being driven back to the Loire?"

I said: "Yes, I am willing to take the risk.

"Moreover, the time may come when the American nrmy will have to stand the brunt of this war, nnd it is not wise to fritter nway our resources in this manner. The morale of the British, French and Italian armies is low, while, as you know, that of the Americnn army is very high, nnd it would he a grave mistake to give up the idea of building an American army in all its details as rapidly as possible."

"Can't Budge Him an Inch."

At about this juncture Lloyd George, M. Clemenceau and Premier Orlando of Itnly, evidently becoming impatient, walked into the room. Milner met Lloyd George at the door and said in n stage whisper behind his hand: "You can't budge him an inch." Lloyd George then said: "Well, how is the committee getting along?"

Whereupon we nll sat down and Lloyd George said to me: "Can't you see that the war will he lost unless we get this support?" which statement was echoed in turn hy Clemenceau and Orlando. In fact, nll five of the party attacked me with nll the force and prestige of their high positions.

But I had already yielded to their demands as far as possible without disrupting the plans toward which we had heen striving for over a year and a continunnce of May shipments into June, withont any provision for transporting artillery and auxiliary and service of supply troops, could not be granted without making it practically impossible in the futnre to have an American army.

After I bad gone over the whole situation again and stated my position, they still insisted, whereupon I struck the table with my fist and said with the greatest possible emphasis: "Gentlemen, I hnve thought this program over very deliberately and will not be coerced."

This ended the discussion in committee nnd when the council reconvened M. Clemenceau stated that the question of Americnn troops would be taken up again the following day.

When the council met for the afternoon session of the second day the discussion of shipments of American personnel was at once resumed. General Foch spoke at length, repeating previous arguments and giving a rather grandiose dissertation of the allied situation and the dire things that would happen unless the Americans agreed to the proposal of the council.

Lloyd George's Challenge.

Mr. Lloyd George in turn spoke at some length. He asserted that the Germans hoped to use up the British and French reserves before their own were exhausted and that the British had already called up nearly 7,000,000 men for their army and navy and had extended their age limits to all men between eighteen and fifty years of age.

"If the United States does not come to our aid," he said, "then perhaps the enemy'a calculations will be correct. If France and Great Britain should have to yield this defeat would be honorable, for they would have fought to their last man, while the United Stntes would have to stop without hnving put iato line more than little Belgium."

Possibly realizing the unfnirness of the comparison he quickly went on to say that he was sure I was doing my best to meet the emergency, and that:

"General Pershing desires that the aid brought to us by America should not be incompatible with the creation of the American nrmy as rapidly as possible.

"I, too, am counting on the existence of that army and I am counting on it this very year to deni the enemy the final blow. But to do that the allies will have to hold out until August."

CHAPTER XL

"Speaking in the name of the American army aad in the name of the American people," I told the supreme war council during the second dny of its session at Abbeville, May 2, 1918, "I want you to realize tlint we are ready to bear as large n pnrt ns possible of the burden of the wnr. We nll want the same thing, hut our means of nttaining it is different from yours.

"America declared war independently of the nllies, nnd she must face it as soon as possible with a powerful army. There is one capital point to which I wish to call your attention. Tlint is the importnnce to the morale of our soldiers of fighting under our own flag.

"America is alrendy anxious to know where her army is. The Germnns hnve once more stnrted a strong campaign of propaganda in the United Stntes, the purpose of which is to insinuate that the allies have so little confidence in the Americnn troops that they are obliged to distribute them among their own divisions.

Tells of American Pride.

"The American soldier is as proud as any other, aad the time will soon come when our troops, as well as our government, will ask to fight as an autonomous army ander the American high command.

"I understand thnt in Prime Minister Lloyd George's proposal we shall have to examine the situation again in June before deciding for July.

"That is all that I cnn agree to at present to show my desire for solidarity with the cause of the allies."

Lloyd George had previously taken up a revised program submitted by myself and after some discussion he proposed that:

"America give us 120,000 infantrymen and machine gunners in May—the same number in June, with a supplement of 50,000 infantrymen and machine gunners if we 'scrape together' the tonnage to transport them."

He further proposed that the situation he examined again in June before deciding whether there was reason to extend to July the program decided upon for May and June. He then called on the council to accept his plan.

Inasmuch as the proposal submitted by Lloyd George contemplated the shipment of the numbers mentioned in British tonnage, leaving American shipping entirely free for us to use as we should decide, an agreement was soon reached, aubstantially as set forth in the following cablegram to the secretary of war:

Following ngreement adopted by supreme war council May 2 at Abbeville. Will cable more in detail later: "It is the opinion of the supreme war council that, to carry the war to a successful conclusion, an American army should be formed as early as possible under its own commander nnd under its own flag. (Then it was thought the war would run to 1919.)

"In order to meet the present emergency it is agreed that American troops should he brought to France as rapidly as nllied transportation facilities will permit, and that as far ns consistent with the necessity of building up an American army preference be given to infantry aad machine-gun units for training and service with French and British armies; with the understnnding that such infantry nnd machine-gun units are to be withdrawn and united with their own artillery and auxiliary troops into divisions nnd corps at the discretion of the American commander in chief after consultation with tbe commander in chief of the allied armies in France.

"It is also agreed that during May preference should be given to the transportation of infantry and machine-gun units of six divisions, and that any excess tonnage shall be devoted to bringing over such troops as may be determined by the American commander in chief.

June Shipment Up to Pershing.

"It is further agreed that this program shall be continued darlng June upon condition that the British government shall furnish transportatioa for a minimum of 130,000 men in May nnd 150,000 men in June, with the understnnding thnt the first six divisions of infantry shall go to the British for training and service, and that troops sent over in June shall be allocated for training and service as the American commander in chief may determine.

"It is nlso further agreed that if the British government shall transport an excess of 150,000 men in Juae such excess shall he infantry and machine-gun units, nnd that enrly in June there shall be a new review of the situation to determine further action."

As stated in a cable from the secretary of war, received May 12, this agreement provided less priority for infantry and machiae-gun units thaa recommended by the supreme war council. It was certninly much more favorable to the ultimate formntion of an Americnn army than we had reason to expect in view of the recommendations contained in note No. 18 of the military representatives, which, as we have seen, had been practically approved by the President. In the excitement over our agreement with the British tbe full purport of this commitment was not empbasized by the allies during the discussion.

Pooling of Supplies.

Another matter, taken np informally with the prime ministers after the conference, was that of pooling allied supplies. I explained its advantnges and emphnsized the snving in tonnage that would result. Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Orlando did not commit themselves entirely, but accepted it in principle, as M. Clemencean had done, and each agreed to designate nn officer with business experience to meet with us at an early date to study the question.

With this beginning at least a step had been tnken townrd our objective, even though the principle might not be extended as far ns we thought desirnble. A few dnys later M. Clemenceau called a meeting in his office of the representatives, Gen. Sir Travers Clarke acting for the British and Col. Charles G. Dawes for the Americans.

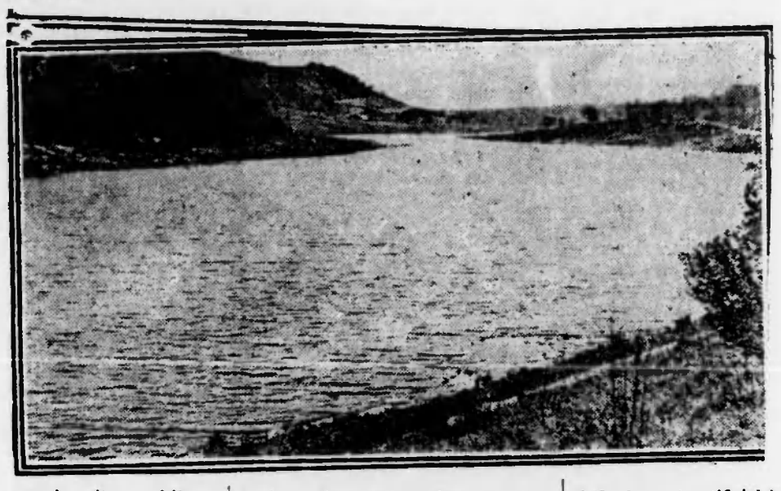
DEEP CREEK LAKE IN GARRETT COUNTY IS FAST BECOMING MOST POPULAR RESORT IN THIS SECTION

Number of Motor Boats Has Grown to Thirty While Canoes and Rowboats Are Numerous

Deep Creek Lake, the sixty-five hundred acre power dam of the Associated Gas and Electric company, located eight miles north of Oakland, is fast becoming a favorite vacation and week-end resort, if the past Sunday can be taken as any criterion. Each week-end throughout the summer several thousand people have been coming to Deep Creek Lake to spend the time, either at their cottages, or at one of the beaches along the shore, or in remote camping sites, and it was estimated that the largest crowd of present season had assembled on last Sunday.



Each year since its completion in 1925 has seen a growing number of people making it their summer retreat. Scores from Pittsburgh, Uniontown, Greensburg, Charleroi, Pa., and Cumberland, Frostburg, and Oakland, Md., already having erected cottages.

Construction was begun this year on a large club house for a Hagerstown hunting and fishing club.

Excellent fishing is to be had, its waters being stocked with Rainbow trout, big mouth bass, pike and pike fry. The largest fish caught thus far was a twenty-eight inch rainbow trout.

There are now approximately thirty motor boats on the lake ranging from the small out-board craft to the larger inboard runabouts costing as much as five thousand dollars. About twenty-five canoes and row boats are also on the lake.

Regular summer camps for a number of scout troops are held on the shores of Deep Creek. Two units from Pittsburgh have permanent quarters at McHenry, while each year troops from Clarksburg, Grafton, W. Va., and Confluence, Pa., encamp at Rainbow Inn. On another section of the shore line there is the permanent camp of the Oakland Scout troop, and that of the Holy Cross students from Washington, D. C.

Approximately 50 boys from Allegany and of this county, members of 4-H clubs, just finished a week's camping trip at the Oakland Scout camp, and on August 2 thirty-five Oakland scouts will begin their two-weeks' outing.

Fifteen miles in length, a shoreline of sixty-five miles, making it one of the largest artificial bodies of water in the country, nestled among the mountains, Deep Creek Lake is making a strong bid for the most popular resort of this section.

DEFECTIVE VISION NOT REALIZED BY THOUSANDS

Poor Eyesight Responsible For Majority of Traffic Accidents

By Dr. J. Fred Andreae, Maryland Optometry Board

Last year thirty-three thousand and sixty men, women and children were killed in automobile accidents in this country and a tremendous number seriously injured. Far too little attention has been given to one factor which is without doubt directly responsible for a large proportion of traffic accidents. I refer to defective eye sight.

The outstanding obstacle in straightening out this matter of defective eyes is the fact that so many people refuse to bleieve that there can be any trouble with their eyes. Although their vision may be decidedly below par they think it is all right because they have no idea of what good vision really is. You have driven a car with the rain beating against the windshield and know the blurred look that everything has and how hard you must strain in order to see. It is an absolute fact that there are many people driving cars on our streets today who see objects in just this manner all of the time.

In addition to the commonly known eye defects such as near and far-sightedness or astigmatism, there are others found in motorists which are little understood by the laymen. For instance, there is night blindness, which as the word indicates, is a condition where the vision is greatly reduced at night. There is also the double-vision, where one is unable to see images received by each eye and fused in a common image. This double-vision often appears when a driver is excessively tired. Perhaps you have heard of drivers falling asleep at the wheel or have known persons who have had to get out and walk for a time in order to stay awake. This conditions means a depletion of nervous energy brought about by the strain of constantly watching the road.

A very dangerous type of eye defect and one responsible for many accidents is what is known as barrel vision. The driver who has this difficulty is like a horse with blinders: all he can see are the objects directly in front of his eyes. You have nll heard of color-blindness but probably have no idea of how many persons are afflicted with this defect. A recent visual test in Pennsylvania of applicants who wished to drive cars showed that twenty-five per cent were color-blind and unable to interpret colored semaphores and signals properly.

BITTINGER

An unusually severe hail storm broke over this community last Friday evening. Great quantities of hail stones fell, accompanied by a high wind and downpour of rain. The storm area was very small, however, being confined to a few farms, but those farms and gardens directly in the path of the storm suffered much damage. Some buckwheat fields are said to have been entirely destroyed and much corn was injured.

Rev. Charles A. Shilke, of Oakland, who preached in the Lutheran church here Sunday afternoon, was accompanied by Mr. Benj. H. Sincell and Mr. J. M. Falkenstein, of Oakland. Rev. Shilke announced that he will again preach in this village on Sunday evening, August 9th.

The social held by the ladies of the Busy Workers Sunday school class in Broadwater's Grove on last Saturday evening, was well attended and has been reported as a satisfactory success and the young ladies extend their thanks to the public for its liberal patronage.

Owing to my health and upon the advice of my physician I am compelled to offer my business for sale.

Here is a fine opportunity for some one, as this business has been established for over thirty years and has always enjoyed the patronage of the public.

The Bakery is equipped with up-to-date machinery, sanitary in every respect. The store room is also equipped with up-to-date furniture and situated in one of the best locations of the town of Oakland.

While I am not able to carry on the baking business, I will continue to operate the store and in addition to light lunches and confectionery I will handle the products of the Sanitary Baking Company, of Clarksburg, W. Va. Their Bakery products are famous throughout West Virginia.

Thanking the public for their patronage and their loyal support in the past thirty years, I hope that my successor will give you the same courteous treatment and service.

Very sincerely yours,

MT. LAKE PARK

Annual Tennis Tournament

The Twelfth Annual Tennis Tournament, Western Maryland Championship, will be held at Mountain Lake Park, beginning on August 10th and continuing until the 15th. This tournament is held under the auspices of the Women's Civic Club of the Park and is sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The first Western Maryland challenge cup in men's singles was in competition for nine years and was won permanently by Gwynn King, of Washington, D. C., in 1928.

The women's singles cup was in competition for five years and was won permanently by Mrs. DeLloyd Thompson, of Washington, Pa., in 1928.

The new challenge cups for the present events, first placed in competition in 1929, were won by B. F. Arkle, Wheeling, W. Va.; Bob Considine, Washington, D. C., 1930, and Miss Will Wakefield, Mobile, Ala., and Miss Margaret Carspecken, Morgantown, W. Va., 1930. These cups become the permanent property of the player first winning three times, not necessarily in succession. The temporary winners of the cups are awarded their custody for one year. Suitable trophies will be awarded the winners and runners-up in all events.

The tennis committee has for its chairman Mr. G. A. Savin, of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, E. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. Lee Bender is chairman of the finance committee; Mrs. Wilson Camden, secretary, and Miss Katherine McLain, treasurer. The grounds committee has as its head Mr. Ralph Weber. Mrs. Elizabeth Talson is chairman of the social committee.

The special committee has arranged for a reception to be tendered all the players at the bowling alley on Monday night, the first night of the contest.

Entry fees have been fixed as follows: Men's singles and women's singles, $2; doubles, $2.50 for each team.

Mrs. Camden, secretary, reports that entries are already coming in and the indications are that the tournament wil be largely patronized.

Those who have used the courts the past few weeks say that they are in fine condition and under the direction of Mr. Weber they will be placed in even better condition for the events soon to take place.

Major James A. Hayden

Although Major James A. Hayden had been confined to his bed for so many months and his death was not unexpected, the announcement of his demise came as a distinct shock to the people of the community. On Tuesday morning, as quietly as the falling of a rose petal, his gentle spirit departed for that realm from which no traveler returns. His presence will be missed and his departure is deeply mourned.

Resigned Activities

Mrs. J. L. Stratton, for more than fifteen years, treasurer of the Summer School of Missions, has resigned the position on account of ill health. Mrs. Stratton's home is at New Castle, Pa. She with her late husband were summer residents of the Park for upwards of forty years where they had a cottage erected forty-four years ago. Mrs. Stratton, in addition to the treasurership of the Mission School, was one of its promoters a number of years ago along with Mrs. Mary A. Davidson. She also served as treasurer of Thompson Rest Home and is now president of its board of directors.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn E. Riggs have returned to their home in Pittsburgh after spending the week in visiting friends here. Mr. Riggs is an announcer at Station KDKA. He conducts the morning parade.

Mrs. P. F. Gortner and sons, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ream, have returned to their home at Mezon, Ill.

Dickie Hardesty, son of Mayor and Mrs. C. E. Hardesty, Loch Lynn, is in the Cumberland Hospital where he underwent an operation for the removal of his appendix recently.

Miss Helen Gibson is also a patient in the hospital at Cumberland for a tonsil operation.

"Mutt" Ready, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ready, who was operated on at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, a week ago for appendicitis, will be able to return home in a few days.

Mr. William Searle, Washington, D. C., spent the week-end with his family.

Mrs. Isobel Hill has returned from a brief trip to Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis B. Fleming, Fairmont, W. Va., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comerford.

The bridge luncheon for the benefit of the Civic Club of the Park, held at the home of Mrs. Chesley, was a successful and delightful affair.

While no official call has been made, we understand the citizens mass meeting or convention, at which officers, consisting of a mayor and five councilmen, will be nominated to serve under the new municipal charter, will be held on the evening of August 5, thus giving practically a week before the election to be held on the 11th.

Ministers To Have Outing

Members of the Mountain Top Ministers' Association will hold a picnic outing and supper with their families at Table Rock Inn next Monday afternoon beginning at four o'clock.

Rev. D. C. Trimble, president of the association, will read a paper on Barthianism. Games will be provided for the children. Supper will be at 5:30 o'clock. All members of the association are asked to attend.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

I mentioned Bet Dawson's name again last week in this column and he was so tickled he came up in the office before the ink was dry on the paper and paid up his past due account on his subscription.

This might have some effect on a lot of others who take The Republican. I'm going to look over the Oakland list and see just what bozos are holding out on the boss editor.

With Terrance and J. Noates working overtime, Romanus Rudy was ready to open his store last Friday on time. I was all prepared to make a purchase of a pair of shoe strings but was informed all the rugs had been given away. The place looked like Wanamaker's for a while.

Word has just been received from the chamber of town scoundrels and Hizzonor the Mare, that they are thinking of passing an ordinance, charging Andy Gonder storage on his Studebaker front porch.

"One of our popular Oakland physicians is mad enough to cuss. He had a Negro in his employ for a long time to drive his carriage and care for his horses. This Negro got into a fuss and is now in jail. The doctor went to Keyser and employed another.

"Negro No. 2 was not dressed to suit the taste of the doctor, who is neatness itself, and so he took his new Negro into a store and fitted him out in new clothes from top to toe.

"Negro No. 2 drove one day or thereabouts and walked off with all his finery. The pill man now knows more about the disposition of the Negroes than he did a week ago."

Although no name was given, this sounds very much like Doc. McComas. It wouldn't do any harm to ask him.

Although Scoop doesn't vouch for the validity of this announcement, rumor has it that Water street has been turned into the front line trenches. All was quiet on the western front, and suddenly, all was not so quiet. It's quite a complicated rumor.

I'd say more, only I don't want Pennington street to get mixed up in this.

With racing assured for the Garrett County Fair, Scoop got in touch with Noah Kolbfleisch, Bill Whorton and a few others concerning their horses. Bill promises to run at least one of his cement mixers, while Noah is going to enter his thoroughbred "garbage chaser" in the main race.

With all these sure winners lined up, Scoop has made arrangements to secure a last plug from Harne's barn, which will represent The Republican. Di-di Jim will probably be the jockey.

If possible, Upholsterer Klingensmith will be employed. He was so successful in carrying off things that it was thought he might be able to carry off a few honors at the Fair grounds.

When Archibaldson and Mrs. Archie planned a picnic last week it rained. Yesterday evening a picnic was planned and it rained.

If there are any drought stricken areas who want a wet spell, just call on Archie. His rates are reasonable. No area too small or too large. Rain guaranteed or your money back.

Members of the Amalgamated society for the Prevention of Work have been in hot arguments lately over which organization has the biggest capacity for that which burns as it descends the Liberty tube into the stomach, and thereafter causes various feelings.

The rum and bungle corps has many staunch supporters, but so has the fair department, and it looks as if the fire eaters might win because it is known that when they are entirely full, they still have a couple of booster tanks, while the most of which the rummers can boast is a bass drum or so.

To see both in action—one would never know.

Youth Injured When Knocked From Railroad Train

Herbert Adams, 18, of Oakland, was painfully injured at 4:15 o'clock last Saturday afternoon when he was knocked from atop a box car on a fast freight train of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at the Washington street crossing in Cumberland. He was taken to the Allegany Hospital, Cumberland, in a conveyance. At the hospital a laceration of the head and an injured leg were treated by Dr. W. A. Gracie. The injured boy was brought to his home in Oakland Sunday afternoon by his father, E. W. Adams, where he is resting comfortably.

THRU THE WINDOW

News was scarce on Tuesday afternoon, and the reporter sat at his typewriter, looking out the window. As his eyes happened to turn to the alleway between the West Penn office and the Garrett National Bank, he saw three or four people run from behind the corner of the bank.

Unable to recognize them at first glance, the first thought was that somebody had lit a firecracker. A dozen more came around the corner and upon a closer inspection, however, he recognized about 10 of the 16, and then the whole story was clear without even so much as asking Constable Andrew Shartzer about it.

The poker joint under the boardwalk and old bowling alley had been "raided".

LAKE SWIMMING RECORD IS BROKEN BY GIRL OF 19

Miss Regina Howsare Beats Own Record on Deep Creek Lake

Miss Regina Howsare, daughter of Alonzo Howsare, Zihlman, Allegany county, broke her record Sunday by swimming contiuously for five hours in Deep Creek Lake, north of Oakland, a distance of seven miles, beating all former records by one mile.

Miss Howsare swam between the two bridges and returned, in all a distance of five miles, and then continued until she had completed the seven miles, beating her own record made last fall of six miles. The youthful swimmer started at the lower bridge at ten o'clock Sunday morning, reaching the upper bridge about twelve, and then swam back to the upper bridge, continuing swimming in different directions without a stop. She was in the water five hours. Geo. S. Downton, also of Zihlman, accompanied her in the water for about five miles and then stopped.

Quite a large crowd of interested people witnessed the acquatic performance of Miss Howsare, who exhibited no signs of exhaustion when she stepped ashore.

It is said by those who often visit the lake, especially on Sunday afternoons, that more people were present at the various bathing and boating points along the lakeshore than they had ever seen before.

NOW IS TIME TO SELECT EXHIBITS FOR 15TH FAIR

County Agent Carter Tells How To Pick Them—Four Factors Determine Good Exhibit

COOPERATION IS NEEDED

"Time waits for no one, and therefore anyone planning to exhibit at the Fifteenth Annual Garrett County Fair should be planning his exhibits now and continue to do so until fair time," stated John H. Carter, county agent, this morning.

"On September 15, 16, 17, and 18 the Fair Association will hold its exhibit. With an excellent growing season there is promise of a greater variety of exhibits with higher quality, and with horseracing scheduled there is promise of the greatest attendance at the Fair in years," Mr. Carter continued.

"When selecting exhibits it is well to keep in mind four important factors that determine a good exhibit: quality, uniformity, condition and size, which are to be considered in selecting fruits and vegetables. When selecting material for exhibition, remember that only the best is worthy of being entered. Any inferior product should not be used. Quantity at no time will suffice for poor quality.

"Uniformity causes an exhibitor a lot of trouble if he waits until the last minute to select his exhibit. Selection takes time and may be done in the field before the crop is harvested.

"Condition and preparation of exhibits are not to be left out if the exhibitor expect to be on the honor list. Many good exhibits have been ruined by improper handling and storing. Also exhibits improperly prepared for show stand no chance in competition. Avoid artificial look to the exhibit.

"Size is more of importance than the general public recognizes. All exhibitors should study market demand, using the same standard when selecting their exhibit.

"Exhibitors of animals must keep in mind first of all quality. Second to quality is condition and fitting for show. In several cases a good animal lost a placing in the show ring because it was in poor condition and not properly prepared.

"Showing the animal is also of great importance. It is useless to show a good animal if it is not handled properly. Anyone showing an animal should always keep in mind it is the judge that makes the decision and not the public. Show the animal to the public after the prizes have been awarded. The County Agent will be glad to assist exhibitors in any way possible should requests be made early.

"It is the aim of the Association to make the fair a success in every way, and it deserves the support and cooperation of every citizen in Garrett county, both business men and farmers," concluded Mr. Carter.

DANIEL WILLARD PLANS TO ATTEND B. & O. VET PICNIC

John J. Cornwell Will Be Principal Speaker at Mountain Lake Park on August 8th

For the fist time in a long time Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, plans to attend a divisional reunion of railroad men and their families, the Cumberland Division picnic at Mt. Lake Park, August 8, being the event thus honored.

In response to an invitation from M. J. Welsh, president of the Veterans' Association of the local division, Mr. Willard wrote yesterday: "I think it may be necessary for me to be in Washington at a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission on August 8. However, if things shape themselves so I can get away, I shall be very glad to accept your invitation."

Cornwell To Speak

John J. Cornwell, chief counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and wartime Governor of West Virginia, has definitely accepted an invitation to be present and will make the principal address. Ex-Governor Cornwell is being prominently mentioned as the West Va. Democratic gubernatorial nominee again in 1932. He is one of the best public speakers in the country, and several local people heard him a few days ago at a homecoming celebration in his honor at Romney, West Va.

Michael J. Garvey, grand vice-president of the Baltimore and Ohio Veterans, and ranking offiee since the death last week of its president, Geo. W. Sturmer, will attend and make an address.

E. W. Scheer, general manager of of the Baltimore and Ohio, has accepted tentatively; M. A. Jones, of the B. & O. Employes Magazine, will be present, and numerous other officials expect to attend.

Lots of Entertainment

The Monongah Division has accepted the invitation of the Cumberland Division to join in this year's reunion, and the combined attendance is expected to break all records.

Entertainment of the widest variety is promised by John McMackin, chairman of the entertainment committee. There will be footraces for girls and boys; an egg hunt for smaller children; special prizes for the best dancers, solo and in couples; baseball games between Grafton, Keyser and Cumberland; music by the Oakland band and the American Legion Drum corps of Oakland; all-day dancing on a specially erected outdoor dance platform with music by an Oakland orchestra; an exhibition of tap dancing by "Messenger Boy" Foley, of Grafton; swimming, public speaking and scenic bus rides through the Mt. Lake-Deer Park area.

R. R. Accommodations

Extra cars will be attached to Baltimore and Ohio passenger train No. 55 leaving Cumberland at 6:50 a. m. next Saturday, and a reduced round trip rate will be granted. The regular round trip fare from Cumberland to Mt. Lake Park is $3.70, but for August 8 it will be $2.25 and maybe less. An effort is being made to get half fare which would bring the round trip cost down to $1.85.

There will be reduced rates also from the Grafton end of the division.

Everybody Welcome

While primarily a railroad picnic, the public in general is invited and provisions are being made to accommodate 2000 people or more. The Ladies' Aid Society of Mt. Lake Park will serve lunches for those who do not take baskets. Many are planning to go by automobile.

As this will be the first Veterans gathering since the death of President Sturmer, a special tribute will be paid him during the Mt. Lake Park reunion.

Date of Grange Picnic Changed To August 22

The date of the county-wide Grange picnic, which was to have been held on August 8, will be held at Table Rock on Saturday, August 22, beginning at ten o'clock. The picnic is open to the public. All who come are asked to bring their own baskets.

Mr. W. B. Burruss, Washington, D. C., will be on the program for an address and other interesting features are being arranged by the committee for the entertainment of the Grangers and others expected to be in attendance.

OAKLAND FIREMEN ASSIST AT BLAZE IN ROWLESBURG

Oil Tanks, Lumber Piles, Buildings, Trucks, Destroyed By Fire Saturday Afternoon

WORST BLAZE IN 30 YEARS

Establishing a record run of less than forty minutes between Oakland and Rowlesburg, W. Va., the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department took an active part in subduing a fire which destroyed twenty-eight thousand gallons of gasoline and oil, 22 stacks of lumber, two buildings, two trucks, a concrete mixer and other equipment at Rowlesburg Saturday afternoon about 1:45 o'clock. Three other fire departments—Rowlesburg, Terra Alta and Kingwood—battled the fire for four hours. The loss is estimated at more than $25,000, a portion of the property destroyed being covered by insurance.

Robert Trickett, Standard Oil Company manager, was painfully burned when he attempted to stop a leak in a valve of one of the storage tanks destroyed from which the fire started. John Hartsell, working near one of the tanks when an explosion occurred, was hurled ten feet, but was not injured.

The lumber was owned by John Felty, formerly of Oakland, and the Ruthbell Lumber Company. Aside from the stacks of lumber destroyed, much other lumber was considerably damaged by the fire. The lumber was partially covered by insurance.

One Standard Oil truck and another owned by the town of Rowlesburg were destroyed along with the town's building, which housed a concrete mixer, several sections of fire hose, tools and other equipment. The Martin Lumber Company's building, with all its records was burned. Residents in 25 neighboring houses moved their furniture and other goods to places of safety, fearing that the fire would get beyond the control of the firemen.

The fire is said to have been the worst that has visited Rowlesburg in thirty years.

The Oakland department is believed to have established a record in its run of less than forty minutes from Oakland. The distance from this point to Rowlesburg is 29 miles, and the first fifteen miles to Aurora was made in 16 minutes. Cheat Mountain had to be traversed in second gear. The truck was driven by Emroy Bolden, and with him were eleven other members of the local company.

The fire is said to have been quite spectacular. Flames shot into the air from the flaming tanks for more than 500 feet with a roar that was heard for miles. Firemen stated that but for the safety valves on top of the tanks which relieved the pressure in the tanks and through which the fire was shot into the air the town might easily have been destroyed.

They confined their efforts in an endeavor to smother the flames and in saving the homes of the people and in both instances they were successful, although the fire had reached tremendous proportions before they arrived.

The machine from Oakland was run to the river bank and in a short time the firemen had several lines of hose laid and were playing on the buildings.

The work of the local firemen was spoken of very highly by the people of Rowlesburg, many of whom have expressed their gratitude.

To Hold Library Benefit

The card party for the benefit of the Oakland Free Public Library, which was to have been held at the home of Mrs. D. Edward Offutt, Oakland, will be held at the home of Mrs. James Willison, Mountain Lake Park, on Friday, August 7, beginning at 2:00 o'clock. Reservations can be made by calling Mrs. Willison.

Oakland Band to Lead Parade

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland will lead the mammoth parade of the State Elks convention at Cumberland on August 12, it has been announced.

This is the only big parade of the entire convention, and there will be eleven bands in the procession. The Baltimore City delegation to the convention will be the first organization of Elks in the parade, and the Oakland band will march in front of this section. Only members of the senior band will make the trip.

ATTRACTIONS ARE PICKED FOR LABOR DAY JUBILEE

Annual Picnic Being Sponsored by Knights of Pythias Lodge

The Weaver Park Attractions, of the E. W. Weaver Amusement company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., have been engaged to come to Oakland for the twelfth annual Labor Day picnic, to be held in Helbig's Grove, at the north edge of town, Monday, September 7, under the auspices of Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias.

The attractions will consist of a Merry-go-round, Ferris wheel, chair plane and concessions. A platform for square dancing will be erected for afternoon and night dances.

The parade committee, Guy Yutzy, A. R. Martin, and Ray Teets, are working to make the parade in the morning one of the biggest parades ever held here on Labor Day. A number of business men have already promised to place floats in the procession. There will be three bands, several drum corps, and possibly scout troops and other organizations.

It is planned to have the usual display of fireworks in the evening. The Plymouth sedan, to be given away on the evening of Labor Day, will be in Oakland the latter part of the week and will be on display.

SIMON WHITMER COMMITS SUICIDE AT HOME MONDAY

Deceased Had Been in Ill Health and Despondent for Some Time—Took Strychnine

IS FOUND BY EMPLOYE

Simon L. Whitmer, 55 years old, a farmer of the Red Oak section, about fourteen miles south of Oakland, was found dead Monday morning about 9:30 o'clock about 500 yards from his home. He had been despondent recently, according to friends, and evidence gathered by county officials pointed to suicide by taking strychnine sulphate.

The deceased spent Sunday at his home, the majority of the time stretched under a tree, and complained that he was not feeling well. Monday morning Ney Arnold, an employe, and Whitmer started to work in the hay field, but Whitmer still complained that he was not feeling well. Sometime later Arnold started to look for him, and found him in the grass, about 500 yards from the house, near a spring.

W. H. Haenftling, sheriff, and Walter W. Dawson, State's attorney, were notified, and upon investigation, discovered a bottle of strychnine sulphate near the man's body, with the cork out of the bottle and most of the contents missing. The body was rigid and other symptoms pointed to death by poisoning. Dr. I. B. Johnson, Bayard, W. Va., after an examination, stated that he had died from an overdose of strychnine, and county officials decided that a coroner's jury was unnecessary.

The deceased is survived by his wife and five children, several of whom are grown.

Open Season Is Declared On Fathers and Sons

An open season on fathers and sons seems to have been declared in the Bear Hill section of the county, according to W. H. Haenftling, Garrett County Sheriff, who has made several arrests in that community in the past week on charges of attempts to murder.

Harmon Bittinger, 65, was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Haenftling and his deputies. Bittinger is charged with assault and attempt to kill his son Russell, aged about 24 years. It is alleged that the father attempted to gouge out his son's eyes and cut him with a knife. He will be given a hearing Friday before Juslce W. A. Gonder, and is being held under a $1,000 bond for his appearance.

Clarence Swauger, about 26 years old, is in the Garrett County Jail old, also of the Bear Hill community, is in the Garrett County Jail following his arrest on Saturday on a warrant charged with having attempted to kill his father with a knife. A hearing will be accorded Swauger at a later time.

Herman Bittinger, another son of Harmon Bittinger, is also in the Garrett County Jail. He was arrested a day or two ago following a complaint made by Donald Simpson that he had stolen and destroyed his spectacles.

CITIZENS WILL DISCUSS MUSIC FESTIVAL PLANS

West Virginia State Leader of Music To Be Present at Meeting Here Saturday Night

TO EMBRACE 8 COUNTIES

Discussion of the program of the Tableland music festival, to be held at Somerset, Pa., on September 4 and 5, and plans for Garrett county's part in the celebration will be made at a meeting of a number of citizens at the William-James hotel Saturday evening, according to John H. Carter, county agent.

Miss Sara B. Hoff, West Virginia State leader of music, who has in charge the pageant of the school children of the Forest Festival at Elkins in October, and who will lead the music program at Somerset, will be present and take an active part in the discussion, she assured Mr. Carter this morning in a telephone message.

Local organizations are appointing representatives to attend the meeting and other interested citizens will be present.

Eight counties embracing parts of three states, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland, will take part in the Allegheny Tableland association's music festival.

Monongalia, Preston, Grant, Mineral and Tucker counties in West Virginia, will take part in the festival, while Garrett county, Maryland, and Fayette and Somerset counties in Pennsylvania will send musicians.

Each county, through its county agent, women's clubs, granges, Civic clubs, Rotary clubs and other groups, is making plans for the event. Amateur musical organizations from Pittsburgh will be listed among the participants and other entertainment features are to be provided.

The objective of the program is for everybody to take part and is being sponsored by the extension department of the State universities of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

The music festival at Somerset is part of the development of a "regional consciousness" which will tend to bind together the people who live in the plateau counties of the three states. Another reason for the association of the eight counties is to foster interstate cooperation.

TOWN COUNCIL HAS QUIET SESSION MONDAY EVENING

City Officials to Continue Good Will Tour Tonight

Continuing the second annual good will tour of the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Grover C. Stemple, mayor, and members of the council will journey to Kitzmiller this evening, where they will meet with the city officials of that town to talk over the civic affairs and other problems.

They will be accompanied by the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band, of Oakland. The party will leave at 6 o'clock.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Council on Monday evening, a day policeman was appointed for the month of August to enforce the parking regulations and to assist the many visitors and tourists in becoming acquainted with the roads of this vicinity. Lee R. Mason was named by the council for this work.

James Collins was given the contract for removing the pump house from the lot on north Third street, to the Bradley farm where it will house a new motor operating the well which was drilled last fall. A report of the street committee showed Water street completed, with the work on Pennington street to begin in September.

No report was made on specifications for a swimming pool. It was felt by those interested that it was too late this year to begin operations, but that plans would be made for its erection in the spring of 1932.

To Extend Bar Vacation

At a recent meeting of the members of the local Bar Association, it was decided to extend the vacation period to and including Saturday, August 15. The offices of the members of the bar will be open for business during the morning hours, but will be closed each afternoon until Monday, August 17.

SAUL CONVERTED AND COMMISSIONED

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-19; I Timothy 1:12-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Chosen to Be a Missionary.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Chosen a Missionary to the Gentiles.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Vision and a Response.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Saul's Conversion and Commission.

I. Saul's Violent Hatred of the Lord's Disciples (vv. 1, 2).

Saul knew full well that unless the movement set on foot by Jesus was stopped it would supersede Judaism. The noble display of faith by Stephen in sealing his testimony with his blood did not soften Saul's spirit, but rather intensified his hatred for the Lord and his disciples. It made him more determined than ever to stamp out the Nazarene heresy. The intensity of his madness and the extent of its operations are best set forth in his own words (Acts 22:4; 26:10-12 R. V.).

II. Saul Kicking Against the Pricks (vv. 3-9).

The figure here is that of the eastern ox driver following the ox with a sharp iron fixed to the end of a pole. The animal is prodded on with this instrument and if refractory, it kicks against the sharp iron and injures itself. This is a graphic picture of Saul as he was madly fighting against Jesus.

1. A light from heaven (vv. 3, 4). The time had come for the Lord to interfere. Saul was smitten with blindness and fell to the earth.

2. A voice from heaven (vv. 4, 5). This was the Lord's voice calling Saul by name and asking "Why persecutest thou me?" To this Saul replied, "Who art thou, Lord?" Then came the answer, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest," as if to say that persecution of the disciples is persecution of Jesus.

3. Saul's inquiry (v. 6). "What wilt thou have me to do?" The Lord told him to go into the city where information would be given him as to what he must do.

4. Saul entering Damascus (vv. 7-9). The proud persecutor went humbly into Damascus, led by his attendants. For the space of three days he remained blind, and fasted. What went on in his soul in those days no mortal can know. Doubtless in this time he got hold of the truths which he later proclaimed to the world, for his conversion was the basal fact of his theology. The day is coming when all men shall behold the dazzling glory of the Son, either in salvation or in condemnation (Phil. 2:10, 11; Rev. 6:15-17).

III. Saul Ministered to by Ananias (vv. 10-19).

1. Ananias' vision (vv. 10-12). The Lord appeared to him and instructed him to go to Saul. He gave him the name of the streets and Saul's host, and informed him that Saul was now a praying man and that he had prepared Saul by a vision for the coming of Ananias. The Lord knows the name of the street and the number of the house in which his chosen live.

2. Ananias' fear and hesitancy (vv. 13-16). He knew of Saul's ministry and the authority by which he came. The Lord encouraged him to go, assuring him that Saul was no longer an enemy but a chosen vessel to bear his name before the Gentiles, kings, and the children of Israel, and that the badge of his commission should be great suffering for Christ.

3. Ananias' obedience (v. 17). His fears being removed, Ananias went to the house where Saul was stopping, put his hand upon him and affectionately addressed him as brother. The hitherto savage persecutor is now a brother in Christ. Ananias informed him that the Lord had sent him with a twofold mission:

a. "That thou mightest receive thy sight."

b. "Be filled with the Holy Ghost." He received his sight forthwith.

4. Saul baptized (vv. 18, 19). After Saul received his sight, Ananias baptized him. The Lord bestows the gift of the Spirit upon whomsoever he will, and may designate anyone, whether occupying an official position or not, to lay hands upon individuals.

IV. Paul Put into the Ministry (I Tim. 1:12-14).

He was commissioned for his work among the Gentiles by Jesus Christ. He did not enter the Christian ministry, but was placed there by the sovereign act of the Lord. He was transformed from a blasphemer and a persecutor through the abundant grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and made the apostle to the Gentiles.

The Gospel

The great commission does not bid us adapt the Gospel to every creature, but to preach the Gospel to every creature. The Gospel of the first century is the dynamic of God unto salvation in the Twentieth century.—Dr. F. W. Farr.

A Prayer

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

That battle front on Water street may be nothing more than the celebration of the opening of the boulevard which was just recently finished at the order of the Mayor and councilmen.

* * *

A flying visit was made to Oakland by Mrs. Maryangelina Stork on a recent morning. A letter had been written to the mayor that she would arrive here but the exact time was not known. She was expected to come by horse and buggy, but was enabled to engage an airplane. The guest room was in an uproar but that didn't make any difference to her. She only stayed a short while and visited only one family.

Asks Doctor to Bid

A printer somewhere in Texas got slightly peeved at a letter from a doctor who wanted bids on several thousand letterheads and statements, different sizes, different grades of paper and printed in various colors, with the request that the forms be kept standing for possible reprint orders.

The printer diagnosed the case carefully and answered something in this manner: "Am in the market for bids on one operation for appendicitis—one, two, and five inch incision, with and without nurse. If appendix is found to be sound, want quotations to include putting same back and cancelling order. If removed, successful bidder is expected to hold incision open for about sixty days, as I expect to be in the market for an operation for gallstones at that time and want to save the cost of cutting."

The poker players seem to be improving in their eyesight, for they are able to find their way up the stairs without any light.

Not Much Worse in Those Days

And they talk about the present generation. Here's something from The Republican files of 40 years ago, which appeared in the Friendsville local letter: "A company of our young folks hied themselves away, Saturday evening, back in the country a piece, to trip the light fantastic, and it was day-break when they arrived home. They appeared to be a happy crowd."

Archie Goes Batty

Dija ever have a bat in your house? Not the kind you would swing in the air when Lefty Groves was pitching, but the kind that hangs by its toes, and flies into your hair, and gets credit for carrying bugs, diseases, and a lot of other things.

Well, Archie and I saw one the other night. We would have had a delightful visit with her, if it hadn't been 4 o'clock in the morning. We just couldn't do justice to our entertaining personality to be so rudely awakened by Mrs. Archie. When told we had a guest to entertain, it took us a few minutes to realize it, and then we were at a loss as to what to wear.

Mrs. Archie wore a dress of white chiffon, with a towel wrapped around her head to match, and low cut slippers. Archibaldson was atttired in a nightgown of pale pink and carried a bunch of newspapers. He was hatless and wore no stockings or shoes. I was similarly attired except that I had pajamas in place of the nightgown, and carried a heavy sweater.

We gathered in the bathroom, where we invited the black veiled lady in for a private conference which vitally concerned her, but she flitted hither and thither and paid us no attention.

She went down to our living room without invitation, and no one will ever know the courage which Archie exhibited in getting the living room light turned on. The kitchen and dining room lights were next, and it was my turn.

But she left as unexpectedly as she had come, and didn't even leave her card. She wasn't the least bit sociable, and, personally, I'm glad she wasn't.

Birthday Dinner

A joint birthday dinner was given last Sunday at the home of Mr. Thomas R. Murphy in honor of Mr. Murphy and his brother, Henry P. Murphy, the elder brother celebrating his 70th birthday the day previous and the younger brother being 60 upon this day. Dinner was served upon the ground.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Murphy and children Robert, Glen, Allan, Cleo, John and Wilmer; Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Murphy and children Dayton, Mary, Frank and Helen; Mr. and Mrs. John I. Wilt and children Elmer, Ellis, Pauline, Margaret and Irene; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Murphy and son Lee; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Broadwater and children Clarence, Rnleigh, Ruth, Porter and Ora; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Durst and children Lester, Vernon, Lois, Marie, Catherine, Henry, and Curtis; Violet Fazenbaker and daughter Dorcas; Messrs. Everett Green, Howard C. Broadwater and Stanley Swauger, Mr. Sandy Watson and children, Elick, Eleanor, Grace and Curtis, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. James R. Murphy and children Deloss, Junior and Ethel, Cumberland; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Savage, Jr., Grahamstown, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Preston and children William, Jr. James and John, Frostburg; Mrs. Thornton Crowe and son Olen, and stepson Olin, Mrs. Robert Turnbull and son Robert, Jr., and granddaughter Marval Moscow, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McAdoo and son William, Jr., Mrs. Ruth Kulberson and daughter Eleanor, Lonaconing; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holtschneider and children Maxine and Blair, Cumberland; Mr. and Mrs. Owen Mattingly and children Owen, Jr., and Ray, of Hoyes; Misses Pearl and Nellie Filsinger, Eckard; and Miss Mabel Beachy, of Friendsville.

In the old days when you went to the grocery for a gallon of kerosene the grocer would put a big potato on the spout of the can to cork it. But now potatoes are too expensive and the oil cans have all gone into politics.

Here is an ad which you are apt to see in official Democratic newspapers next year: Wanted, a candidate who is wet in the north and dry in the south. How will Governor Ritchie rate in this?

FLIES, FINGERS, FOOD ARE ALL DANGEROUS TO BABIES

City Babies Have less Intestinal Disorders than Country Babies

Country babies are supposed to have many advantages that city babies lack, but when it comes to certain seasonal diseases, such as diarrhea, dysentary, and other intestinal diseases in the summer and pneumonia in the winter, city babies seem to have an advantage over the country babies, as a comparison of the records of the State Department of Health for Baltimore City with those of the counties, will indicate. The records of the Bureau of the Census show that the same thing is true in other parts of the country.

Last year 1,285 babies under a year old, died in the counties of Maryland, and of that total 341 were due to diarrheal diseases, that is, one out of every four was charged on the death certificate to "diarrhea" or "dysentery," or to one of the other diseases of that class. In Baltimore City where there were 981 deaths of babies under a year old, 120 were due to diarrheal diseases—or one out of every eight.

Because of the prevalence of diarrheal and digestive diseases at this time of the year, babies need special protection against them. Outlining some of the ways by which babies ean be safeguarded against such diseases, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene, said: "Means that have proved effective in the prevention of digestive and diarrhael diseases among babies are:

"Regular supervision of the baby while it is well, by the family doctor; mother's milk; clean cow's milk modified according to the needs of the individual child for the babies who have to be bottle-fed; unsweetened condensed milk, or evaporated milk, if cow's milk is not available; cooled, boiled water to drink; careful protection from contact with persons suffering from any diarrhael disease; protection against flies; clothing adapted to the temperature; and intelligent care.

"The three F's—flies, fingers and food—are three sources of danger to the baby. Flies carry disease germs to the baby and to its food. Fingers and hands that are not thoroughly washed before preparing baby's food are likely to be germ carriers, also. Milk or other food that is intended for the baby should be carefully covered and kept in a cool place until used.

"Very special care should be taken of the milk that is given to babies and young children. All milk intended for them should be boiled for three minutes and then cooled to the right temperature before using."

Drivers of sixes never want less because it takes six cylinders to give the smooth, silent power that makes driving really enjoyable

CHEVROLET Drivers of sixes are spoiled for anything less. Drivers of sixes are "sold" on multiple cylinders. They would no more think of giving up "six" performance than any other real advancement of motoring.

Drive a Chevrolet Six, and you'll know why these drivers feel as they do. Step on the starter, let the motor idle—and notice its silence. Throw in the clutch, shift into "low"—and feel that smoothness. Change into "second," hit a faster clip, slip into "high," sweep along at top speed—then throttle down to a crawl. The smoothness and flexibility you always get are six-cylinder smoothness, six-cylinder flexibility. Annoying vibration is gone!

Over two million owners have proved this six-cylinder Chevrolet engine. They have found that it costs less for gas and oil than any other. They have found that it actually reduces upkeep costs, by holding vibration to a minimum. They know a six is better in every way—and they would never be satisfied with less!

Twenty beautiful models, at prices ranging from . . . $475 to $675

All prices f. o. b. Flint, Michigan, special equipment extra. Low delivered prices and easy G. M. A. C. terms.

CHAPTER 283.

AN ACT to provide for a bond issue by the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville, Garrett County, Maryland, for the purpose of securing funds with which to retire the bonds issued under the authority granted by Chapter 378 of the Acts of Assembly of Maryland for the year 1922 and by Chapter 208 of the Acts of Assembly of Maryland for the year 1927, and for the further improvement of the streets of said town of Kitzmillersville, and to submit to the legally qualified voters of said town the question of whether or not said bonds shall be issued.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville, in Garrett County, Maryland, are hereby authorized and empowered, in their discretion, to borrow upon the faith and credit of said town a sum not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) and to issue and sell coupon bonds therefor in the denomination of five hundred dollars ($500) each, to be signed by the Mayor of said town and to be countersigned by the clerk of the Council thereof, and the seal of said town attached, and to be registered by said Clerk of said Council in a book to be kept by the Mayor and Council for the purpose of registering "Refunding and Improvement Bonds." Said bonds by this section authorized shall be known and designated as "Refunding and Improvement Bonds," and shall bear interest at the rate of five (5) per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the first day of May and November in each and every year until the said bonds are paid; said bonds shall be exempt from all State, county and municipal taxation and shall have printed on them a distinct reference to the Act authorizing their issue.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That said bonds shall be numbered serially and the first shall be payable on the first day of November, 1932, and thereafter one bond, of the value of five hundred ($500) shall mature and be payable each consecutive year in the order of the consecutive numbers until the entire issue of said bonds is taken up and redeemed; reserving the option to the Mayor and Council aforesaid to take up and redeem at any interest period after ten years any and all outstanding bonds running more than ten years at the face value thereof, with accrued interest; and said bonds shall be sold at public or private sale in such amount, not less, however, than five hundred dollars ($500) at any one time and not exceeding in the total the said sum of fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000), and at such time as the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville, in their discretion, and in the furtherance of the purposes for which this bond issue is created, may deem proper. It is especially intended that the power hereby vested in said Mayor and Council shall be a continuing power until the whole fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) shall have been issued and sold.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the money arising from the sale of said bonds shall be kept as a separate fund by the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville in some safe bank, shall be used exclusively for the purposes of this Act and shall be drawn out only on checks signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk of the Council, and the said Clerk of the Council shall keep in a book for the purpose a full registry of the bonds sold, the number of bonds and name of the purchaser or purchasers, the amount realized on the sale or sales and any transfers and assignments of the same.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the funds realized from the sale of the bonds aforesaid shall be available and shall be used exclusively for the purpose of first retiring eleven thousand dollars ($11,000) of the bonds authorized by Chapter 378 of the Acts of Assembly of 1922 and still outstanding and seventeen hundred and fifty dollars ($1,750) of the bonds authorized by Chapter 208 of the Acts of Assembly of 1927 and still outstanding, and the remaining part of the fund herein provided shall be available for the further improvement of the streets of Kitzmillersville.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That for the purposes of retiring the said bonds authorized to be issued by this Act, and the payment of the interest thereon, there shall be levied against all the assessable property within the corporate limits of the said town of Kitzmillersville by the Mayor and Council of said town annually, so long as any of said bonds are outstanding and unpaid, a tax sufficient to meet the interest, or any part of said interest, on said bonds as it becomes due, and to pay the principal thereof as they mature, said tax to be determined, levied, collected and paid over in the same manner as provided for other taxes in said municipality.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That on the first Tuesday in May, 1931, there shall be a special election held in the town of Kitzmillersville, which election shall be held in the same manner and under the same regulations as other municipal elections held in said town, for the purpose of submitting the question as to whether or not this Act shall take effect, to all legal voters of said town who are qualified to vote at a regular town election, and all ballots at said election shall have printed on them the words following, to-wit: "For Refunding and Improvement Bonds" and "Against Refunding and Improvement Bonds," and the qualified voters of said town desiring to vote on said question at said election shall Indicate their choice of said propositions by making a cross-mark opposite the proposition for which they desire to register their votes, and if a majority of the votes so cast are marked "For Refunding and Improvement Bonds," then this Act shall be in full force and effect, otherwise shall be null and void and of no effect. The judges of election shall, under their hands and seals, immediately after said election certify to the Mayor and Council of Kitzmillersville the result of said election.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That this Act is hereby declared to be an emergency law and necessary for immediate preservation of the public health and safety, and having been passed by a yea and nay vote, supported by three-fifths of all the members elected to each of the two Houses of the General Assembly, the same shall take effect from the date of its passage.

CHAPTER XLI

On the heels of all the clamor for nothing but infantry and machine gunners I received a request from Marshal Haig, British commander, asking 10,000 artillerymen. This fully bore out a prediction I had cabled Washington that the allies would be asking artillerymen before long.

It will be readily understood, however, that once the allies had made a demand for infantry and machine gunners they all joined in concerted effort to bring it about regardless of what their real needs might be.

In reply, I reminded Marshal Haig that the Abbeville agreement, giving priority to infantry and machine-gun shipments, would prevent the arrival of our artillerymen for some time.

In fulfilling our part in military cooperation we had already gone far beyond the mere recognition of the principle of unity of command and had begun to bring over hundreds of thousands of men almost regardless of the organizations to which they belonged, that they might be available in the event of extreme necessity.

Inspects Second Division.

It was my custom throughout the war, as both a duty and a pleasure, to visit the troops as frequently as possible to keep in touch with the state of efficiency and the morale of officers and men. As Bundy's Second division, with Harbord and E. M. Lewis as brigade commanders, was leaving the quiet sector south of Verdun en route to the billeting and training area to finish preparation for battle, the moment was opportune to make a brief inspection. I had an opportunity to talk with a number of the officers in command of smaller units. I especially discussed the question of supply with officers charged with that duty.

I visited Harbord's brigade of marines and found those I inspected in good shape and their billets well kept. The troops of the division that were seen on the march, especially the trains, did not look so well. In an army like ours the care of animals is difficult to teach. Cruikshank's artillery looked well. The entraining at Ancemont was carried out in an orderly and systematic manner.

General Blondlat, in whose corps the Second had been serving, spoke very highly of the troops. The favorable impression obtained of this unit was very soon to be confirmed on the battlefield, where its distinguished service was to make its name immortal.

Frequently Had Guests.

During the first few months at Chaumont I occupied quarters in the town, but later M. de Rouvre placed at my disposal his beautiful chateau some three kilometers away. My headquarters mess was limited to the few officers with whom I was most intimately associated and consisted of my personal aids, the chief of staff, and one or two others. Nearly always there were a few guests at meals invited from among the visitors, both French and American, who came to headquarters. Officers from French general headquarters were frequent guests and we were always glad to have them.

As a rule there was a ban on everything in the way of shop talk and the rule was rarely broken and then only when we had special guests seeking enlightenment or information regarding our policies and activities.

There was one subject that would always start a discussion, and that was the relative value of the different arms, each being represented by at least one officer. Harbord and I were both from the cavalry, and the cavalry member of the staff felt that he had at least a sympathetic audience. The infantry did, however, always hold his own in any discussion, as no matter how specious the arguments or perhaps the gibes at his expense we all know that without the infantry the other arms would accomplish little. The associations of such a group are never forgotten, and even a short period was enough to establish a permanent and affectionate relationship.

Staff Offices Rotated.

Rotation in office was early adopted as a principle to be applied to the staff in general, and although it was never possible fully to carry it out most of the officers of my staff got their chance at a tour with combat troops. Major Collins and Major Shallenberger, two of the aids who went with me to France, were the first to go to other duty, being replaced by Major Quekemeyer and Major Bowditch. Colonel Boyd, who joined me as aid shortly after my arrival in France, remained throughout the war.

When General Harbord's turn came his place as chief of staff was taken by General McAndrew. Several of the higher officers of the general staff had a tour with troops, not only that they might have the opportunity to serve at the front, which is every soldier's ambition, but because they would return to staff duty with a broader and more sympathetic understanding of the line officer's point of view and appreciate more fully the consideration that he deserves at the hands of the staff.

According to the plan for the rotation of officers between line and staff several others were relieved and sent to serve with troops. Among them were Col. Frank R. McCoy, secretary of the general staff, relieved by Maj. James H. Collins, and Col. W. D. Connor, assistant chief of staff G-1, relieved by Col. G. V. H. Moseley.

Morrow on Maritime Council.

Our members of the interallied maritime council were wide awake at this time in their search for additional tonnage. Dwight Morrow reported prospects of some increase, besides calling attention to tonnage that was idle or not being used to the best advantage. The immense shipment of American troops contemplated the use of all available passenger-cargo carrying ships, British, American and neutral. As very little if any space would be left in such ships for cargo, the latter class of ships was in greater demand than ever.

Meanwhile the amount of world cargo tonnage built during the preceding five months was scarcely equal to the losses, and the ships we were manufacturing had only just begun to be turned out for service. It was at once evident that the immense program of troop shipments would call for extraordinary concessions on the part of all concerned.

CHAPTER XLII

A strong German offensive opened May 27, 1918, against the French, with the famous Big Bertha firing on Paris.

The position of the First division was near Cantigny, where it had been in line nearly a month opposite the town and near the point of farthest advance of the enemy in the Amiens salient.

Although some weeks had passed since my offer of troops in the emergency, up to now none had been called upon to take part in active operations. The reason appeared to be that the allies were skeptical of the ability of any of our units to conduct an offensive. The opportunity now came, however, to remove misgivings on that score.

The French corps in which the First was serving had prepared a counterattack to be launched in the Amiens sector about the middle of May in case of another offensive by the enemy in Flanders, which, it was believed, would occur between May 15 and 20. The counterattack was to be directed due east toward the heights of Montdidier, with the advance of the First division, supported by a French division on each flank, as a preliminary move. This was to be followed in forty-eight hours by a general advance northward of the entire Third French army, which covered the front from Montdidier to Noyon.

Ammunition dumps had been filled, special trenches dug, new battery emplacements prepared for the reinforcing artillery and necessary orders issued for the counterattack, but the enemy did not put in his appearance according to the forecast.

First Seeks Better Position.

It was then decided that the First division should undertake to improve its position. The Germans on its front continued to hold the advantage of higher ground, from which they were able to inflict constant losses on our troops while suffering little damage themselves. Another reason was at this moment the morale of the allies required that American troops make their appearance in battle.

The Cantigny sector at this time was very active, with artillery fire unusually heavy, and the preparations for the attack by the First division, which had to be hastily made, were carried out under great difficulty. Many casualties occurred during the construction of jumping-off trenches, emplacements and advance command posts.

The Twenty-eighth infantry, under Col. Hanson E. Ely, designated for the assault, was reinforced by machine guns, engineers and other special units. Additional French artillery was sent to assist the artillery brigade of the division and particularly to suppress the hostile batteries attempting to interfere with the consolidation of the new position after it should be captured.

Yanks Splendid Under Fire.

On the morning of May 28, after a brief artillery preparation, the infantry advanced on a front of a mile and a quarter. The village of Cantigny and the adjacent heights were quickly taken, relatively heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy and about 300 prisoners were captured. Our troops behaved splendidly and suffered but slight loss in the actual attack.

Events developing farther east, however, were seriously to complicate the success. The German assault in force against the French along the Chemin des Dames, between Soissons and Rheims, began on the morning of the Twenty-seventh and was making dangerous headway. By the morning of the twenty-eighth the gains of the enemy were such that the French high command was compelled to relieve much of the reinforcing artillery behind the First division and transfer it to that front.

The enemy's artillery within range of Cantigny thus became superior to ours and was able to concentrate a terrific fire on the unsheltered troops in the captured position. His reaction against our troops was extremely violent and apparently he was determined at all cost to counteract the excellent effect the American success had produced upon the allies.

Under cover of heavy bombardment a series of counterattacks were made by the enemy, but our young infantrymen stood their ground and broke up every attempt to dislodge them. The regiment sustained severe casualties from the large caliber shells poured down upon it and had to be reinforced by a battalion each from the Eighteenth and Twenty-sixth regiments.

It was a matter of pride to the whole A. E. F. that the troops of this division, in their first battle, and in the unusually trying situation that followed, displayed the fortitude and courage of veterans, held their gains and denied the enemy the slightest advantage.

U. S. Troops at Chateau Thierry.

The alarming situation had caused General Petain to call on me on the 30th for American troops to be sent to the region of Chateau Thierry. The Third division (Dickman), then in training near Chaumont, being the only division within reach, besides the Second, was ordered to move north immediately. Dickman started his motorized machine-gun battalion over the road on the afternoon of May 30. The infantry and engineers entrained the same night, and the division's supply trains marched overland.

The first element to reach Chateau Thierry was the machine-gun battalion, which arrived the afternoon of May 31 and immediately went into action against the enemy, who then held the half of the town north of the Marne. By daylight on June 1 all available guns had been provided with cover and were in their positions, one company with eight guns, and another with nine guns about 500 yards to the east, guarding the approaches to the railroad bridge. From these positions they repulsed all attempts by the Germans to cross the Marne.

Meanwhile, as the infantry of the division came up on June 1 its battalions were put into line to reinforce the French from Chateau Thierry east to Dormans. The conduct of the machine-gun battalion in this operation was highly praised by General Petain in a citation issued later.

Stopped German Drive on Paris.

The Second division (Bundy) May 30 was near Chaumont-en-Vixen and was preparing to move northward the next day for concentration near Beauvais to relieve the First division at Cantigny. But its orders were changed late that night, and the division, moving by motor trucks, was rushed toward Maux, twenty miles northeast of Paris. Reaching there, the leading elements were hurried forward in the direction of Chateau Thierry. The roads were crowded with French troops and refugees. There was great confusion among the rapidly retreating French troops, many of them saying to our men that all was lost.

The initial deployment of the Second division was made by the Ninth infantry and the Sixth regiment of marines June 1, across the Paris highway at Lucy-le-Bocage, in front of Montreuil-aux-Lions, supposedly in support of two French divisions; but the French had orders to fall back through the American lines. In the early morning of June 2 the Twenty-third infantry, then on the left, was replaced by the French One Hundred Sixty-seventh division, and when reinforced by one battalion of the Fifth marines, the Fifth machine-gun battalion and some engineers, it was deployed to the right between the Sixth marines and the Ninth infantry, to fill a gap in the French line, and by June 5 the entire division became engaged.

Considering that this was its first experience in battle, this division made a splendid defense, repulsed all German attacks, and by its timely arrival effectively stopped the German advance on Paris.

Bring Relief to French Poilu.

The sudden appearance and dramatic entrance of the Second and Third divisions into the shattered and broken fighting lines and their dash and courage in battle produced a favorable effect upon the French poilu. It must have been with a decided feeling of relief that the worn and tired French army, retreating before vastly superior numbers, caught sight of Americans arriving in trucks at Meaux and marching thence on foot, hats off, hurrying eagerly forward to battle. And the Germans, who had been filled with propaganda deprecating the American effort and the quality of their training, must have been surprised and doubtless rather disconcerted by meeting strong resistance by Americans on different portions of this active battle front, especially when our troops advanced at once to meet the attack in open combat.

This defeat of the French furnished the second striking confirmation of the wisdom of training troops for open warfare.

Replies to French Criticism.

After the success of our troops we were in no mood to listen to self-appointed critics. M. Andre Tardieu called on me upon my return to Paris and undertook to point out that our staff was inefficient and offered criticisms of our organization. As this was something he could not possibly know about, I replied that he had got an entirely erroneous impression and that our staff was second to none in either ability or efficiency.

I advised him that we had quite enough of this sort of thing from the French, either military or civilian, and suggested that if his people would cease troubling themselves so much about our affairs and attend more strictly to their own we should all get along much better.

I did not fail to appreciate M. Tardieu's ability and his helpfulness on many occasions, but this constant inclination on the part of a certain element among the French to assume a superiority that did not exist then or at any later period, added to the attempts of some of them to dictate, had reached the limit.

CHAPTER XLIII

The sixth session of the supreme war council was convened June 1, 1918. The important matter of further shipment of American troops was taken up.

As already indicated, it was my opinion that neither the character of the troops to be sent over nor their disposition was within the province of the council to decide, but that these questions should be determined according to circumstances and after discussion with the allies.

So I objected to their consideration by the council, as such, and suggested a meeting outside the council, which was approved.

Accordingly, in the late afternoon, General Foch, Lord Milner, British war minister, General Weygand and I, with Colonels Conner and Boyd, met in the premier's room. General Foch began by stating the serious condition of the allies and proposed the continued shipment from America of nothing but infantry and machine-gun units in June and July, in effect 250,000 in each month. Every one realized the gravity of the allied situation as strongly as he did, but, as previously and persistently contended by me, there were two sides to the question.

Foch Becomes Excited.

I was prepared to make some concessions and stated my views, but neither facts nor arguments seemed to make any impression. General Foch especially was very positive and earnest, and, in fact, became quite excited, waving his hands and repeating: "The battle, the battle; nothing else counts."

With equal emphasis I urged that we must build up our organization as fast as possible to carry on the battle to the end, and that our program had been seriously interrupted by concessions already made.

I called attention to the fact that the railways all over France were on the point of breaking down for lack of efficient operators and of skilled workmen to repair rolling stock; that our ports would be hopelessly blocked unless we could improve the railways; this his plan would leave us 200,000 men short to complete combat units and fill up special organizations that were absolutely necessary in the S. O. S., and, finally, that the restriction of our shipments to infantry and machine-gun units would be a very dangerous and short-sighted policy.

To much of this he paid little or no attention and replied that all these things could be postponed.

Wanted Wilson Informed.

Graeme Thompson, British expert on transportation and supply, came into the room at this point with Mr. Lloyd George and General Sir Henry Wilson, and took part in the discussion. Mr. Lloyd George said he thought President Wilson would be deeply interested to get General Foch's view of the situation, and added that as America had no prime minister present he thought it would be inconvenient for us to make a decision, but that this subject should be brought before the whole council.

I then called attention to a cable from Secretary of War Baker, already quoted, showing that the President had been much embarrassed by representations made to him personally by the French and British ambassadors, and had suggested that the matter might be settled by a conference between General Foch and myself. I pointed out that the cable did not mention the supreme war council, and I again stated my opposition to making the subject one of general discussion by all allied representatives and their staffs.

I did not fail to point out further that the President was trusting my judgment in this matter. As nothing was being accomplished and hoping the number of participants in the discussion might be limited, I proposed we adjourn until the following day.

Pershing Again Answers Foch.

The next afternoon when we assembled M. Clemenceau was waiting for the rest of us, and instead of there being fewer conferees the number had increased. Not unlike the situation at Abbeville a month before, everybody was keyed up, and, as we had expected, the question had to be fought all over again.

General Foch supported by M. Clemenceau and Lloyd George, wanted nothing but infantry and machine guns in June and July, to which I was strongly opposed, again insisting that sufficient importance had not been attached to my reasons for the necessity of the auxiliary troops omitted in June.

Foch resorted to his often-repeated question whether I was willing to take the risk, to which I replied very positively that I was ready to assume any responsibility my proposal might entail, but that I must have a greater proportion of other troops to keep the American organization from going to smash.

Men Called in May Untrained.

Other objections, which the allies apparently overlooked, were that the untrained men called out in May could not possibly be ready for service until a considerable time after arrival, and that neither the French nor the British could provide all the equipment and land transportation they would need. In accordance with my program, I was willing to agree to the shipment of fully trained infantry not needed for the instruction of new drafts, but felt that this point should be left to the judgment of the secretary of war.

Mr. Lloyd George then concluded that as a consequence July would be a blank, and in a rather dejected tone he said the allies were in a sense in the hands of the United States. He spoke of the generous and chivalrous attitude of President Wilson, and said all they could do was to acquaint him with their needs and call upon him to come to their aid, more particularly to the aid of France at the period of the most terrible extremity that she had yet encountered.

ANNIVERSARY OF JOHN PAUL JONES IS RECALLED

Born In Scotland in 1747, He Came To America In 1773

In the little parish of Kirkbean in Scotland, one of America's greatest heroes was born July 6, 1747. His family name was Paul and he was christened John. Later in life he was to add Jones to his name and become famous as a commander in the Continental navy whose brilliant achievements on the sea rivaled those of General George Washington on the land.

The 184th anniversary of John Paul Jones' birthday is marked as a date of significance to all Americans by the Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Every citizen of the United States has reason to be grateful for the services of the first great American sea fighter.

Young John Paul went to sea when he was but 12 years old, and at the age of 21 he was captain of a trader. In 1773 he came to America and settled on his brother's plantation in Virginia which he had inherited upon the death of the latter. It was here that he first used the name of Jones.

When the break between England and her colonies widened into actual warfare, Jones applied to Congress for a naval commission which was granted in December, 1775. That same month, as a lieutenant in the new Continental navy, he is said to have hoisted with his own hands the first naval flag of an American squadron. This was the well-known yellow silk banner with the rattlesnake and the warning, "Don't tread on me!"

The young officer soon was given an independent commission in command of the little ship "Providence." With a crew of but seventy men and a dozen four-pound guns, Jones became a terror to British shipping, destroying a million dollars' worth of enemy property. Later, in the "Alfred," he continued his work, capturing valuable munitions intended for Burgoyne.

He was commissioned captain October 10, 1776, and June 14, 1776, was ordered to the "Ranger." On this ship, July 4, he raised the first stars and stripes that ever flew from an American warship. In the "Ranger" he carried to France the news of Burgoyne's surrender and received the States flag by a foreign fleet.

From France Jones sailed to the north coast of England where he landed at Whitehaven, spiked the English guns, burned some shipping and thoroughly alarmed the country. This was the only invasion of British territory by an American force during the Revolutionary War.

The most famous battle in which he was engaged was that which took place Sepetmber 23, 1779, with the British man of war "Serapis," off Flamborough Head. At that time Jones was in command of an ancient ship which he had refitted in France and named "Bon Homme Richard," in honor of Benjamin Franklin. Despite the great odds against him the intrepid American unhesitatingly engaged the far superior enemy in a battle which has gone down in history as one of the greatest sea fights of all time.

The rotten sides of the American ship were almost completely shot away when the English commander called on Jones to surrender. In reply he received the terse statement, "I have not begun to fight." Utterly dismayed at such courage, the Englishman struck his colors. Jones at once transferred his crew to the "Serapis" and the "Bon Homme Richard," completely shattered, sank to her glorious grave.

After the Revolution, John Paul Jones entered the service of Catherine of Russia, where he again revealed his remarkable courage and ability as a sea fighter. Being the victim of intrigue by jealouse Russian officers, Jones left that country and went to France where he died July 18, 1792. In 1905 his body was located and identified by the American ambassador to France. It was brought to this country and interred with full military honors at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

NEW GERMANY

DISCLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY

Prior to the incorporation of Mountain Lake Park, much propaganda was spread as to the dire things that would happen under a municipal form of government, one statement being that excursions of all descriptions, dance platforms and other undesirable features would come, which would greatly mar the sacredness of the place.

While the Park is now incorporated, officers to manage its affairs will not be elected until August 11, so that no criticism should be directed to the incorporators for the excursion and dance platform that are booked for the Park on August 8.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 55. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, AUGUST 13, 1931. NUMBER 26.

COMMISSIONERS APPOINT COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER

Dr. George E. Clarke To Devote full Time to Public Health Service, Beginning September 1

HAS HAD WIDE PRACTICE

That Dr. George E. Clarke, of Washington, D. C., had been appointed full-time health officer for Garrett county was announced yesterday by Geo. D. Browning, president of the Board of County Commissioners. Dr. Clarke will assume his duties on September first and will maintain his office in the Court House, Mr. Browning also stated.

Doctor Clarke, Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, deputy State Health Officer of Cumberland, and Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, were in Oakland on Tuesday conferring with the Board of County Commissioners where they outlined the work of carrying on a full-time aggressive health program. The definite program will be announced at a later date.

Graduate of Illinois

Dr. Clarke is a graduate of the University of Illinois, class of 1919, having received degrees in engineering and medicine. He served as an interne in a Brooklyn (N. Y.) hospital for one and one-half years and from there went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he practiced general medicine until 1929. Five years of this period was with the health department of that city as an assistant in contagious diseases. He also had charge of clinics covering pre-natal cases, tuberculosis, vaccination and and other work in his profession. For the past two years Dr. Clarke has been medical officer of the food and drug administration in Washington, D. C., which is operated by the Federal Government.

"I sincerely hope that I will receive hearty cooperation in the health program which will be inaugurated in this county the first of September," Dr. Clarke said in an interview with a Republican representative. "My work and that of the health nurses who will assist me, will be in conjunction with the practicing physicians of the county, and not in competition with them. My work will consist in managing clinics of various kinds, in preventing epidemics and in the spread of contagious diseases, not in curing them or giving prescriptions. The work will cover the entire county."

Dr. and Mrs. Clarke will come to Oakland the latter part of the present month where they will establish their residence.

The appointment of a full-time health officer and the continuation of the services of the two health nurses in the county is the result of an arrangement between the County Commissioners of Garrett county and the State Department of Health whereby the State Department agreed to provide a full-time health officer for the county free of expense to the taxpayers.

When the annual levy was made in April, no provision was made for the salaries of the health nurses, on account of the great demand by the people for lower taxes, but the advantages accruing by reason of a health program were outlined in a public meeting held on May 11, at which many public spirited citizens who are large taxpayers protested the discontinuance of the activities of the public health nurses, the commissioners reconsidered their decision. An agreement between the commissioners and the Health Department then followed and the result of such agreement was concluded Tuesday as outlined above.

West Virginia Music Leader To Attend Two Picnics in County

Miss Sara B. Huff, West Virginia State leader of music, with headquarters at the State 4-H camp at Jackson's Mill, near Weston, W. Va., will lead community singing at the Bittinger community picnic near Bittinger, and the county-wide Grange picnic at Table Rock on Saturday, August 22.

Miss Huff will be at Bittinger from 2:00 until 3:00 o'clock p. m., and at Table Rock from 11:00 a. m., until 12:00 o'clock. The singing will be similar to that which will be used at the music festival to be held in Somerset, Pa., September 5 and 6, which will also be directed by Miss Huff.

At the Garrett county picnics there will be special marimba solos.

PLANS SHAPING UP FOR LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

Twelfth Annual K. of P. Picnic To Be Held Here September 7

Plans for the twelfth annual Labor Day picnic to be held in Helbig's grove, on the outskirts of Oakland, Monday, September 7, are shaping up, and according to the committee this will be by far the biggest and best picnic ever staged by Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias.

The new Plymouth two door sedan to be given away, can be seen now on the street in front of the First National Bank in Oakland.

The Weaver Park Attractions of Pittsburgh, Pa., will furnish the amusement, with a merry-go-round, ferris wheel and chair plane. There will also be a dancing pavilion on the grounds for afternoon and evening dancing.

From all indications the big feature parade, to move over the city streets promptly at ten o'clock a. m. will be larger in every way than heretofore. The music this year will be furnished by three military bands and three or more drum corps, including Oakland's junior drum corps, composed of 40 boys of grammar school age. This is the only boys' drum corps in this section of the country.

There will be many floats, trades displays, comic features, clowns, fire departments, richly decorated automobiles and fraternal organizations in the parade and at the picnic ground and in addition there will be a fireworks display at night.

There will also be one address at the afternoon session, "Our Teachers' Physical Equipment," by Miss Lampson.

Officers will be installed at the evening session and announcement of the program for the ensuing year will be made.

Mr. Hamm will talk on "Every Teacher a Soul Winner."

EX-SOLDIER THREATENS FAMILY; IS BROUGHT HERE

Will Undergo Test of Sanity—Captured Only After Severe Struggle With State Officers

HAD ARSENAL AT HOME

Martin L. Tomlinson, aged about 45 years, of Garrett county, near Lonaconing, who threatened the lives of his wife and five children at their home in Koontz Mountain, after barricading himself for three days, was brought to Oakland on Monday by Sheriff Walter H. Haenftling and Constable Cecil Ramsey and placed in the Garrett County Jail, where he is being held pending an investigation into his mental condition.

Tomlinson was taken to Cumberland last Saturday night after being subdued by Officer M. A. Katz, of the Maryland State police. The man, at the time he was apprehended, had been drinking to excess, according to the officers and was apparently suffering from shell shock sustained during the World War in which he served as a soldier.

His wife, Mrs. Artie Tomlinson, will be summoned to Oakland to testify at the examination to be conducted as to his mental condition.

Tomlinson, it is said, after threatening to kill his wife and children barricaded himself with his family in his home for three days and it was not until Saturday that his capture was effected. Officer Katz, held at bay for several hours with two automatic pistols and shotgun in the hands of Tomlinson, finally reached the home after crawling 250 yards through a field and in an encounter with Tomlinson was cut upon the forehead when struck with the butt of a revolver.

Tomlinson was disarmed and taken to Cumberland where he was put in the Allegany County Jail pending the arrival of the officers from Garrett county.

Mrs. Tomlinson and her children, when found by the officers, were suffering greatly from shock and lack of food. Mrs. Tomlinson stated she had tried to sleep for three nights with a pistol pressed to her heart by her husband but was afraid to make an outcry. At the first opportunity that presented itself Mrs. Tomlinson sent her eight-year old son Virgil to Lonaconing to seek aid. She said her husband had been drinking.

When the officers at last succeeded in gaining entry to the home they found seven rifles, three automatic shotguns, four automatic pistols and twelve thousand founds of ammunition of various kinds. He also had six assorted butcher, skinning and carving knives, all ground to razor edge. These were all brought to Oakland on Monday by Sheriff Haenftling.

Officers believe Tomlinson to be suffering from shell shock. It is said that Tomlinson served more than 20 years in the United States Army and has been acting queerly during the past several weeks.

Here Studying Conditions of Aged People

Mr. Earl S. Bellman, of the sociology department of the University of Maryland, has been in Garrett county for the past two weeks studying sociological and economic conditions of people over 65 years of age.

He has visited a number of families with whom the public health nurse has come in contact, and has taken picures of them and their homes, and their environment.

He will determine whether they would seem more satisfied to be as they are, or to have more modern comforts as inmates of an institution for the aged, at some central point in the state.

Race Track Will Be Less Than Half-mile In Length

That it would not be possible to make the race track at the Fair Grounds one-half mile in length, was announced by Henry M. Speicher, secretary and general manager, following a report of Mr. G. J. Altstetter, who surveyed the grounds.

In order to have the horses race the full half mile it will be necessary to make the starting point somewhere beyond the finishing line. This is not considered a detriment to the track, Mr. Speicher stated.

Following the survey of the track, arrangement are being made for starting the work.

AWARD MERLE GARLETTS B. AND O. SCHOLARSHIP

Selbysport Boy Presented With $100 at 4-H Club Week Meeting At College Park Last Week

KNOWN FOR POTATO WORK

Merle Garletts, of Selbysport, was awarded a $100 scholarship offered by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to the outstanding 4-H Club boy in any county traversed by that railroad. The award was made at the 4-H Club week activities at College Park last week. Elizabeth Lisky, of Washington county, won the $100 award for girls.

Merle Garletts, 16 years old, is best known for his influence on potato club work in his community, his potato crop in 1929 being the source of certified seed for six farmers in this county that year. He has been winning prizes annually since 1929, when he won first prize at the Tri-State Potato show; has served as an officer in the Friendsville Potato club and has been in many high school activities in his community, having made outstanding records in dramatics, athletics, glee club, school paper, etc., and this year is enlarging his potato project and entering into partnership with his father.

He graduated from Friendsville High School with the class of 1931.

To date the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has awarded 120 such scolarships to farm boys and girls in the States of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania Virginia, Maryland and Delaware. of which approximately seventy-five have either graduated or are attending college in the states named.

These scolarships have been won while the contestants were still in high school, and in each case have been deposited in the name of the winner, thus earning interest until such time as he or she is ready to use it for scholastic purposes. In some instances the original $100 has been increased by interest to about $130 by the time the winner was ready to enter college.

City Council Continues Good Will Tour

Continuing the series of good will tours to incorporated towns of the county, the Mayor and Town council of Oakland went to Kitzmiller last Thursday evening where they discussed civic matters with the mayor and councilmen of that city.

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland gave a concert and headed a short parade over the streets of the town. Refreshments were served to the guests and all of the band members were given free tickets admitting them to attracions at the carnival.

GARRETT COUNTY TO HAVE PART IN MUSIC FESTIVAL

Will Present Pageant Depicting Maple Sugar Industry and Dramatize Star Spangled Banner

TO HAVE UNION CHOIR

A pageant depicting the maple sugar industry of the Allegheny Tableland, the rendition of "Swing Wide the Gates," from Etainer's Crucifixion by a union choir from Oakland, and the dramatization of "The Star Spangled Banner", will be Garrett county's contribution in the Allegheny Tableland Music Festival, which will be held at Somerset, Pa., on Saturday and Sunday, September 5 and 6, according to Miss Sara B. Huff, West Virginia State leader of music.

Miss Huff was in Oakland last Saturday evening at a meeting of interested citizens; at Grantsville on Tuesday afternoon and at Ryan's Glade Tuesday evening. Preliminary plans for the part Garrett county is to play in the festival were outlined and accepted by the various groups who met with Miss Huff.

To Include Bugle and Drum Corps

It is planned to include the junior drum and bugle corps in the pageant of the maple sugar industry, and the Legion drum and bugle corps, the Boys' Band of Oakland, and the union choir in the dramatization of the Star Spangled Banner. The national anthem was chosen as it is known to be a distinct contribution to the nation's patriotic music from Maryland.

Rev. Charles A. Shilke was appointed chairman for Garrett county, with local chairmen from each section to be named in the near future. These committeemen will work in cooperation with John H. Carter, county agent, and through his office.

The people of Grantsville, under the direction of Miss Holmes and Miss Wallace, of the Holmes and Wallace studio, will have charge of the maple sugar pageant. A maple sugar queen will be crowned and princesses from the seven other counties of the Tableland Association will be her attendants.

The union choir will be under the direction of Mrs. Frederick A. Thayer and the local union choir will join in the general chorusses during the festival.

The music festival, designed to bring together people of eight tableland counties from the three States —Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland—will have its program divided into three sections.

Saturday morning will be devoted to contests, including fly casting, horseshoe pitching, woodchopping and trapshooting. These will be the only competitive features of the festival.

Saturday afternoon the music pageant will be presented with liberal mixtures of folk songs and ballads.

Sunday morning will be devoted to religious songs. Gigantic arrangements are being made by Miss Huff, who expects to assemble her singers in sueh a way tha ta vast chorus of several thousand voices will be together in the group singing, which will climax the festival.

Miss Huff and Darcy Wilson, of Morgantown, W. Va., are scouring the tableland counties for talent and at latest have found so much musical and dramatic talent which might be used in the pageant and religious singing that the number in the grand finale at the open air amphitheatre at Rhoads Flying Field at Somerset will number well on to 5000. Mr. Wilson is in charge of the pageant, while Miss Huff is directing all musical activity.

The tableland counties are Somerset and Fayette, Pennsylvania; Monongalia, Preston, Tucker, Grant and Mineral, West Virginia, and Garrett county, Maryland. As talent is uncovered it will be worked into the pageant, the form of which will fit into musical and dramatic possibilities in the area.

The festival is intended to bring together in a mood of play, recreation and cooperation the people of the eight counties in the highland area, and is the first move of the Allegheny Tableland Association to popularize the tableland as a recreational, social and economic portion of the Pittsburgh area.

To Give Concert

The Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland will give an open air concert at Friendsville on Thursday, August 20, at 7 p. m. Everybody is invited to be present.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Even threats of starting hapis capis proceedings against Ikey Sincell for removing the bench from in front of his store have not been suffieient to secure his promise to restore the pedestrain's paradise on Second street.

The Amalgamated society is in favor of its return and at a recent meeting it was moved by Slim Shaw and seconded by Bill Frazeethat an air cushion be purchased by Brother Ikey for the convenience of his guests. There are grave rumors to the effect that if the bench and cushion are not forthcoming, his membership will be taken away.

To see the Girl Scouts getting ready to load their outfits on the truck in front of McIntire's Monday morning, you would have thought they were going to Europe. They even took beach pajamas, evening dresses, and dancing pumps, so they could keep up their social obligations.

Echoes from the boy scout camp are to the effect that George "Pony Power" Stuck is strapping himself in bed so that Junior Dixon will not be able to throw him out of his upper bunk when he gets the nightmare again.

The rest of this Is just to fill up space. It is of no particular subject. If it had been written on any subject it would not be here.

Ever since I have been here and for centuries before that I guess, the same dictionary has been on its pedestal in the front office where Archibaldson goes to see how to spell schedual, recieve, paradice, paralel, and hemorage. It was dated 1793, I believe, and doesn't carry the words Star Spangled Banner, because Francis Scott Key was just a little squirt in those days.

Now, however, we have a new one. The boss editor loosened up, (the other one was falling to pieces) and got us a late edition of brother Webster. Now a page taken from Noah under any letter from A to Z would be interesting. Under A would be found the word "ass." He is a patient fellow with long ears. He is dull but surefooted, and can kick twice in the same place. There are not as many asses as there are horses but a lot of people try to make up for the deficiency.

Then you can turn to B and will find the word "booze" which will recall memories of other days and present daze. Then turn to C and you will find "cask", which came into usage when there was need for a container.

Under M there is "Mescal" which is a high-powered drink of Mexico. Under Q we find "quack", who is one professing to know something and doesn't. We could have a regular quack pond here. Then there is "quaff," which means to drink deeply. A lot of them around here quaff and quaff until they are entirely submerged.

Finally in the Q's there is "Quicha", the name of an Indian who was always joking so much that people, when they saw him, would say, "There's Quicha, kiddin." Hence, down thru the ages.

You will finally reaeh the last word on the last page. It will be "zythum" and means a kind of beer. There ought to be a colony of Zythumites here, just like the Dukaboors, or something like that.

And About Cussing

Whenever you feel the urge coming on, do not cuss, as it is too common. Anybody can cuss. Instead, turn to the dictionary and find words to express your thoughts without profanity, for instance "You spindle shanked, ostracised, lop-eared, moronic monstrosity and so and so. When used with proper emphasis these words are just as good as cussing and your opponent will never know the difference. Your repartee will be perfect with a little practice. You know, the proper definition of repartee is the thing you think of afterwards that should have been said at the time.

Stick to your dictionary and someday you will be as great as Noah, that is, if you live to be as old as Methuselah.

If there weren't so many pallbearers for this depression it wouldn't be half as bad as bad at it seems.

It's rained so much during the past two weeks, that the county is soaked, and the corn is making so much noise growing that the chickens can't sleep at night. We ean assure you good weather next week though, I break camp on Monday morning, and then perhaps I will be able to write something readable.

A Drinker of Hashish!
In eleventh-century Persia, a secret order was founded by Hassan ben Sabbah, indulging in the use of the Oriental drug hashish, and, when under its influence, in the practice of secret murder. MUSTVACCINATECHILDREN BEFORE ENTERING SCHOOL

Maryland State School Law Requires Treatment Against Smallpox

While you are planning for Bobby and Betty to enter school in September with the rest of the first-graders, remember that they must be vaccinated against smallpox—if that has not already been attended to—before they can be enrolled in any public school in the State.

Last year, one out of every two of the white children and two out of every three of the colored, who were old enought to go to school, and who were examined at the child health conferences held throughout the counties during the aummer, in preparation for their admission into school, were found to be unprotected against smallpox. The proportion of unvaccinated children attending this year's child health conferences, has been equally large.

In reminding parents of the State law concerning vaccination, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said: "The family doctor is expected to vaccinate the young children under his care, at any time after the babies are a few months old. Until the child is ready to go to school the responsibility for having him protected against smallpox rests with the parents. After that it is shared by the teachers. The law says:

"'No teacher in any public school in this State shall receive into such school as a pupil any person who has not been successfully vaccinated * * any teacher neglecting or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section shall on convicition thereof * * * be fined ten dollars for each and every offense.'

"Maryland has had practically a clean slate with but one entry on it so far as smallpox is concerned, for over two years. During the last five years, 45 cases have been reported to the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health—5 in 1926; 9 in 1927; 22 in 1928; 8 in 1929 and one in 1931. The disease is prevalent in other States and in many countries abroad, and serious outbreaks are continually occurring in places in which vaccination is not required. The weekly reports of the U. S. Public Health Service show just where the disease is appearing thruout the world. During a single week of the current summer—the week ending July 4—569 cases were reported from different parts of the United States. You can estimate from this the amount of smallpox in this country during an entire year. In 1929, 38,432 cases were reported; in 1929, there were 41,705.

Smallpox is an unnecessary disease. We have an effective weapon against it in vaccination. Maryland's comparative freedom from it is due to the way our people have cooperated in the observance of the State vaccination law and of course, we are depending upon their continued cooperation."

You'll be convinced that your money buys more in a Chevrolet. You'll understand why, month after month, Chevrolet has been leading in sales.

Like all Chevrolet models, these cars are sixes. And you know, as well as engineers do, that multi-cylinder design is standard practice among practically all cars today. Six-cylinder smoothness is built-in, quiet, economical smoothness. Drivers of sixes never want less!

In addition, these six-cylinder Chevrolets provide a long wheel-base, parallel-mounted springs, smart bodies and unexcelled economy. Owners write that Chevrolets definitely cost less to operate and maintain!

Yet with all these quality features, Chevrolets are offered at prices among the very lowest for which motor cars are sold. No wonder that the Chevrolet Six is called the Great American Value.

GOV. RITCHIE COUNTS HIMSELF OUT

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, regarded himself as one of the likely candidates for the Democratic nomination for President, but in a speech the other night he committed himself to Wilsonian internationalism. He said our era of isolation was over and regardless of our traditions we were in the maelstrom of world economics with no chance of making a distinction between economics and politics.

America never had an era of isolation. Governor Ritchie and other Wilsonians talk as if the United States were behind a mountain barricade in a valley and never came out of it. The country has felt the effect of world conditions, sometimes favorably and sometimes unfavorably. The infant republic began by fighting to make Mediterranean trade routes safe to its commerce from African piracy and by competing with the British marine for the Far East trade. It stepped into world complications in its first pair of breeches and has been in them ever since.

Wilsonian internationalism which Gov. Ritchie as a candidate adopts, does not break into a monastic cell to call America into the world, because no such cell exists. The Wilson doctrine insists that the United States shall commit itself in advance of events to certain courses of action without knowledge of what the events will be or where its interests will lie and do so by joining certain European organizations and signing a number of compacts. Americans who object to this surrender of independent judgment are not isolationists nor are they confounded every time a European condition requires American attention. The United States has always had to take into account the effect events elsewhere might have on its own conditions.

Mr. Wilson thought it advisable or necessary for the United States to join a world political organization and sign away independence of action. Most of his fellow countrymen did not think so. There is no evidence that they have or should change their minds. Although this country is not isolated it has a detachment, socially, politically and geographically, which is to its advantage. The first President recognized it and urged Americans to keep it in mind. The advantage has lost none of its value.

It is probable that the Democratic party has had enough of the repudiated internationalism in spite of the Wilsonian elements in the party. It is certain that the country at large will not support this theory of American entry into European federations.

The Maryland governor has made it improbably that he will go far in the national convention of his own party and impossible that he should go at all as a candidate for election—Chicago Tribune.

An Interesting Fact

FROM CITIDEL TO CHURCH—OLD FORT CUMBERLAND

After the surrender of Fort Necessity, General Washington, on July 4, 1754, returned to Will's Creek, Md., and began the erection of a fort on the site where the present City of Cumberland, in Allegany county, now stands, and named it in honor of the Duke of Cumberland, commander-in-chief of the British Army.

It was here that Braddock assembled more than two thousand men, about half of whom were British regulars, and wholly unaccustomed to frontier life and warfare, and began his fateful journey to subdue and capture Fort DuQuense. It was of this expedition that Braddock was described as "desperate in his fortunes, brutal in his behavior and obstinate in his sentiments," but "intrepid and capable," declared that "DuQuense can hardly detain me three or four days * * * these savages may, indeed, be a formidable enemy to your raw American militia, but upon the king's regular and disciplined troops, sir, it is impossible they should make any impression."

The results of that expedition are too well known to need further enlargement. Had the British general listened to General Washington and followed his advice, given out of his great ability and experience, "Braddock's Defeat" may have gone down in history as "Washington's Victory."

In the construction of Fort Cumberland, troops from New York, North and South Carolina were assisted by a Maryland company.

It has been indirectly asserted by some writers of the history of the French and Indian War that Maryland did not do her full share in providing men and money for the defense of this and other provinces against the dangers of attack. But the facts do not bear out this assertion or inference. We read in Scharf's History of Western Maryland that after the completion of Fort Cumberland, and after an officer of the Colonial forces had written that "by the present situation of the French, they are not to be driven out of their forts unless our numbers are greatly increased."

Governor Sharp, of Maryland, finding the military law defective, convened the Assembly on December 24 (1754), which body passed a law for the levying of troops for the campaign. In passing, it is interesting to note that at this session of the Assembly what was probably the first pension provision was passed, for it was enacted "that if any citizen of the province shall be so maimed in the service as to be incapable of maintaining himself, he should be supported at the public expense."

Maryland did not find it difficult to procure volunteer soldiers and more applications for enlistment were received than the Governor could make provision. It was recorded in the Maryland Gazette of February 6, 1755: "We are assured that in Chestertown, in Kent county, several men enlisted immediately upon the arrival of the officer in that town before the drum was beat, and that the officer who wanted but thirty men, got his complement and marched with them."

More than a century and three-quarters have passed since this old fort witnessed the presence of Washington, Braddock, Governor Sharp, the Revolutionary hero Cresap and a host of Colonial pioncers who shaped the destinies of this Republic, but our gratitude and admiration for them should increase rather than be dimmed by the passing of time.

The familiar quotation from Isaiah, "And they shall beat their swords into plow shares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not life up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more," is recalled when we consider that on the site of Fort Cumberland, erected for the successful prosecution of a war, there now stands Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church, ivy-covered and indescribably beautiful, erected in honor of the Prince of Peace.

From Washington it is reported by the Passport Division that the number of passports issued during the fiscal year ended June 30, show a decrease of 25 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

In Arkansas, farmers aided in the drought of last year by Oklahoma farmers, this year are sending truck loads of corn, oats, cabbages, tomatoes and other vegetables and grain to the citizens of the latter state as an earnest of their gratitude.

THE WILL TO PEACE

In a recent address in which he urged the aid of the people to bring about disarmament, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, said:

"There is no greater power at large today than the repressed yearning of all peoples the world over for uninterrupted peace. The topmost function of modern statecraft is to utilize that power. Those professed leaders who attempt to balk and frustrate the human will to peace, who pluck the ancient strings of national hate and envy, of racial suspicion and fear, are the modern traitors, traitors to their native lands and to all humanity as well.

"Reports from abroad are not very encouraging. Altogether too many sabres are rattling throughout Europe. Too many young men in gaudy uniforms are parading the streets, too many rounds of ammunition are being burned up in target practice, too much brain power, too much inventiveness are being diverted from peaceful pursuits to prepare for the next war, although in the pact of Paris we all gave our sacred word that such a dread event shall not occur.

"These large provocative military establishments are a dangerous hobby. They who ride it are playing with national passions, with national suspicions and fears. They are playing a game which has in the past always culminated on the blood-soaked battlefield."

All of which is undoubtedly true. But what is there that the people of the United States can do about it? We certainly are not responsible for the thousand-year-old political and racial hatreds of Europe. There are no responsible leaders in America preaching war, none preaching hatred of any European nation. And we are not taking part in military parades.

There is in America a profound desire for peace. We covet the territory of no other country in the world and do not wish to send any other people under the yoke. About the best we can do is to go about our own business, seeing to it that Uncle Sam has enough defensive armament to prevent there being any war carried into America, and helping restore the buying power of our own market, which is the greate.t in the world.

Certain it is that our joining any sort of international league or alliance to enforce peace in Europe, simply for the sake of getting a disarmament agreement in Europe would be poor business. We would lose our own freedom of action in all international crises and would be bound up with all the political difficulties of Europe.

If there is, as Senator Wagner says, a profound will to peace among all of the peoples of Europe and they are being held back by designing leaders, it is up to the people to get rid of these leaders and substitute some with the will to peace. But the people will not do this and this leades to the suspicion that they are not so anxious for peace as they let on, unless it is peace based on their own nationalistic requircments.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Lewis Upperman, pioneer sawmill operator, was engaged in setting up a mill for H. W. Hesen, which he had purchased from Alpheus Hinebaugh.

H. J. Mayers, druggist, placed in his store one of Edison's phonographs, which was attracting considerable attention, and many nickels were being dropped in the slot to bring forth the music. (In the light of present day achievements the phonograph was a crude affair. In order to hear one had to place rubber tubes leading from the cabinet, in one's ear in order to hear the sound, which was very low even with the aid of the ear phones.)

William White, of near town, reported having raised 350 bushels of wheat on 14 acres of his farm land, or an average of twenty-five bushels to the acre, which was a heavy yield.

The question was asked: "What is the matter with our police? Two fights on the street and no arrests made."

G. A. R. Day was scheduled for August 18 at Mountain Lake Park.

Union young people's leagues of Oakland will meet Sunday evening at 7:00 o'clock in the M. E. church, with Joseph Sollars, leader. The topic, "What nature teaches about God," will be discussed. This will be a splendid meeting and should be attended by the youth of the community.

Joseph H. McRobie, accompanied by Mrs. McRobie and their daughter Miss Coral McRobie and Miss Esperance Ashby, was taken to Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, this morning for treatment and possibly an abdominal operation. Mr. McRobie has been ill for some time but it was not until the past few days that his condition gave his family alarm.

St. Mark's Lutheran Brotherhood will meet on August 18 in the Sunday school room of the church. The meeting will be in charge of Mr. T. C. Bittinger, president. There will be an outstanding address made. A business meeting to arrange for the Brotherhood rally to be held in St. Mark's on Sunday afternoon and evening, September 13, will be held at this time.

Mr. Oran McCormick, publisher and world traveler, will address the Oakland Rotary club at its weekly luncheon at the William-James Hotel tomorrow evening. Mr. McCormick will speak on his world travels, particularly concerning a trip he made into the Arctic region, which will be profusely illustrated. The address promises to be quite interesting and educational.

The Unemployment Committee of the Mountain Top Ministers' Association desire to recommend Mr. E. B. King, of Mountain Lake Park. Mr. King's daughter recently died leaving a number of children dependent upon him. He is anxious to find work of any kind, on the farm or in town, ditching, clearing land, rough carpentry and painting or odd jobs of any sort. The committee recommends him as an honest, capable and industrious worker.

Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Dawson and Miss Nine, of Rowlesburg, West Va., were here for a short time Saturday afternoon. Mr. Dawson, who is fire chief of the volunteer fire company in his home town, was loud in his praise of the work accomplished by the Oakland firemen at the recent blaze that destroyed about $25,000 worth of property at Rowlesburg and which probably would have destroyed the greater part of the town had it not been for the work of the local department in confining the blaze to a relatively small territory.

Mr. J. Max Jarboe returned to Oakland Sunday night from Atlantic City where he had spent a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carter spent the week-end in Washington, D. C. Mrs. A. K. Baker and Miss Velma Goodwin, who had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Carter for the past few days, accompanied them to their home in the Capitol city.

Mr. Harry Harm, Miss Bertha Harm and Mrs. J. E. Senft, brother and sisters of Mrs. C. A. Shilke, and Prof. Johnson Krodle, of Columbia, Pa, are guests at the Lutheran parsonage, Oakland. Mr. Harm and Prof. Krodle will return to Columbia, while Miss Harm and Mrs. Senft will remain here several weeks.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Matthew's Episcopal church is planning to have a lawn fete for the benefit of the church the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, August 19. At this time cakes, fancy work, etc., will be sold and supper will be served. There will also be an attraction for the children. Everyone is invited to attend.

Cheston Browning is having a new garage building erected at his filling station on Third street, which will be practically fireproof, as tile and steel only are entering into its construction. In addition to the storage of cars a repair shop will be operated which will be in charge of Clyde Shipley, who is said to be an excellent mechanic.

The Lutheran church at Bittinger has made special preparation for a large annual picnic to be held in the Broadwater Grove on Saturday, August 22. Miss Huff, of the Federal Extension Service, will conduct community singing and make an address on the forward look of the Allegheny Tableland Association and the coming music festival at Somerset, Pa. Rev. Shilke, Oakland, will conduct games for the children.

Mr. William R. Beckman, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Beckman, Reverdy Beckman, Miss Alma White and Harry O. Durst were at Akron, Ohio over the week-end where they visited Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Slabach and witnessed the christening of the dirigible ship Akron by Mrs. Hoover. The party from Garrett county also attended the Maryland picnic at Nesmith Lake on Sunday. The gathering was composed of former Marylanders, who are now residing in Akron, and their friends. The party also visited Cleveland and other places and were accompanied home by Fred. Slabach and Carl Dickerhoof, of Akron, who are visiting in this community.

Mrs. F. I. Johnson, of New York, who directed the School of Missions at Mountain Lake Park, and with her husband, Dr. Johnson, just recently returned from a tour of the countries of the East, where they studied the national movements and the men directing these movements in the various countries, will occupy the pulpit in St. Mark's Lutheran church on Sunday morning at 10:45 o'clock. Mrs. Johnson will speak on "The new religious movements of the East and some of their leaders." The people of the community are invited to hear this interesting and instructive message to be delivered by one fully competent to speak on the subject.

Hearing a noise on Highway 37 near their home Sunday night, Mr. and Mrs. Thane O. White were awakened from their sleep. Peering from a window in the upper portion of the house, Mrs. White saw an automobile stop a short distance up the highway and remembering that only a few nights before their automobile had been drained of its fuel, she waited a few minutes and then fired a shotgun in the direction of the garage on the property. The car which had stopped along the highway was put in motion very shortly afterward and the following morning an empty five-gallon gasoline can was found in the barnyard which had evidently been abandoned by the intruder whose intent to steal more gasoline had been simultaneously changed with the firing of the shotgun.

St. Matthew's Church Lawn Fete

W. VA. WATER POWER ACT UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Court Sets Aside Transmission Company's Permit for Power Developments

The 1929 water power act, under which licenses were sought by two companies for hydro-electric projects aggregating $40,000,000 in estimated cost, was held unconstitutional "in its entirety" by the state supreme court of West Virginia yesterday.

The appellate court set aside the order of the Public Service Commission in granting authority to the West Virginia Power and Transmission company, a West Penn subsidiary, to construct eight power developments in the Cheat and Blackwater rivers, dismissed the power company's application and reversed the decision of the Kanawha county circuit court, which had held the act constitutional but had reversed the findings of the commission in granting the license and had remanded the case to the commission.

The decision held that the water power act was in contravention of article five of the state constitution providing for separation of legislative, judicial and executive functions.

The projects approved by the commission in the license were: Blackwater river—Blackwater storage development; Blackwater power development No. 1 and Blackwater Power development No. 2, all in Tucker county. Cheat river—Beaver Hole development, Monongalia and Preston counties; Middle Cheat No. 1, Preston county; Middle Cheat No. 2, Preston county; Albright, Preston county, and Preston and Tucker.

Girl Scouts Leave For Camp Minnetoska

Twenty-four girl scouts and four leaders left Oakland by truck Monday morning for Camp Minnetoska for ten days. The troop committee, Mrs. N. I. Broadwater, Miss Grace Jones, Mrs. Townshend Naylor, Mrs. Milton Sincell, and Mrs. Frederick Thayer, were at the scout hall to see the girls off.

After a slightly rough ride the girls arrived at Camp Minnetoska. In a short time they were settled and ready to explore. All were introduced to camp activities by a dip in the lake. Swimming tests were given and four girls, Betty Broadwater, Virginia Fraley, Ruby Iman and Mary Lynn McIntire, passed tests for advanced swimming. All the girls are receiving sewing instructions twice daily. The girls in the advanced class are working on junior life saving tests.

All of the scouts are working on some nature projects, such as trees, wild flowers, ferns, insects, etc.

The girls work on definite schedule and have classes in folk dancing, archery, nature work, and scout activities, such as fire building, trails signs, signalling, and outdoor cooking.

Meyersdale Fair Starts Next Tuesday Morning

What promises to be the greatest fair ever held in Somerset county, Pa., starts next Tuesday in Meyersdale, with a parade of Scout troops, pony races and a parade and drill contest of seventeen or more drum and bugle corps from Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, including Oakland.

Wednesday will be educational day when school children will be admitted free, and Dr. W. Turner, of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry, will demonstrate practical methods for the control of parasites in sheep.

A county-wide horseshoe pitching contest is scheduled for Thursday.

There will be fireworks, wildlife display, grange exhibitions, free attractions, carnival and races at the fair grounds.

CORPORAL THOMAS CURRIE RETURNS TO THE SERVICE

Seriously injured on the evening of September 8, 1930, on the Philadelphia road on the outskirts of Baltimore as he was attempting to overtake a truck, Corporal Thomas Currie, of the State police, who was attached for several years to the LaVale substation and did road work in Oakland and Garrett county, has returned to the service and is now stationed at Substation C at LaVale for light work.

Corporal Currie is well and quite favorably known in Oakland and the nearby towns and the news of his return to service is a source of gratification to his friends. He will be assigned to patrol duty for at least a month, due to his weakened condition, following an operation in the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore, recently. Corporal Currie, after his discharge from Havre de Grace Hospital in January, 1931, visited his mother in Peebles, Scotland, near Edinburg. He had been granted a six-months' furlough several days prior to his accident for his trip to Scotland.

Promotions in Service

A number of promotions in the service have been announced recently, among them being that of A. M. Spioch, from first class officer to corporal; A. E. Markley, formerly stationed at Oakland, to first class officer, and E. D. Dryden to officer first class.

Lesson for August 16

SOWING AND REAPING
(Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 6:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Obeying the Law.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Obeying the Law.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping (Effects of Alcohol).
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping (Effects of Alcohol).

In chapters three and four Paul presented in a masterful way the heart of Christianity; namely, that justification is by faith in the atoning work of Christ rather than by the works of the law. In chapters five and six he made practical application of the doctrine to the affairs of life. Gracious justification by faith is the dynamic for right living. Those who are freely justified in Christ will manifest the fact by the following conduct:

I. Restore the Sinning Brother (v. 1).

1. Who he is. "The one overtaken in a fault." The idea expressed by the word "fault" is not to minimize the sin, but to show the suddenness of the temptation. One's spirituality is shown by his willingness to help in such a case.

2. What is to be done. He is to be "restored." Restore is a surgical term which means the placing back of a dislocated member to its normal place. Christians are members of the body of Christ. Therefore, the sinning of a brother should as really give us pain as the dislocation of a member of our body.

3. How it is to be done. "In a spirit of meekness." Harshness has no place in the life of a Christian. The fruit of the Spirit is love, meekness, etc. The believer must show his right to claim the life in the heavenlies by stooping down to help the brother crippled and besmeared in the dirt of earth.

4. The incentive. "Lest thou also be tempted." No one is immune from temptation. The surest way to be fortified against temptation is to go sympathetically to the rescue of the fallen.

II. Bear One Another's Burdens (v. 2).

Many are the burdens of life: burdens of weakness, temptations of a fallen nature, sorrow, suffering, and sin. Some have more temptations than others. Since believers are inseparably bound together, the strong should bear the infirmities of the weak. Christ is the supreme burden bearer. When we bear one another's burdens, we fulfill the law of Christ. Many have inherited the appetite for intoxicating liquors, and the spirit of burden bearing will move us to make our utmost endeavor to remove far away the temptation to strong drink.

III. Bear Our Own Burdens (vv. 3-5).

There are some burdens which can be borne alone by the individual. Personal responsibility cannot be escaped. In a most real sense every man lives his life alone. Helpful as is sympathy, human and divine, greatly as we need the helping hand of our brother, the individual must live his own life. The law of God which is in harmony with the law which controls the individual declares, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

IV. Support Teachers of God's Word (vv. 6-8).

It is incumbent upon those who are taught in God's Word to give of their means for the support of the teacher. To repudiate this obligation is to mock God (v. 7), for God has ordained that they who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel (I Cor. 9:14). The declaration, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," sets forth a law which operates in all spheres of life.

V. Be Earnest in Well Doing (v. 9).

The harvest is sure. Sow good seed and patiently wait for the reward. The same unfailing law which eventuates in a harvest of corruption to those who sow to the flesh will bring life everlasting to those who sow to the Spirit.

VI. Work for the Good of All Men (v. 10).

The believer in Christ who realizes his freedom will have sympathies and interests as wide as the race. While especially endeavoring to help those in Christ, he will be reaching out to all men. He will be seeking to win them to Christ. This obligation to work for the good of all men applies in such matters as the abolition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages.

The Righteous

The righteous are as trees of life; the fruits of their piety and charity, their instructions, reproofs, examples and prayers, their interest in heaven and their influence on earth are like the fruits of that tree, precious and useful, contributing to the support and nourishment of the spiritual life in many.—Matthew Henry.

When Learning Is Useful

Education is useful, but when it ignores God it is destructive.—Babson.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

Resident County Agent,
J. H. CARTER,

HANDLING THE PEONY

By W. R. Ballard, Specialist in Landscape Gardening, University of Md.

One of the most satisfactory herbaceous perennials either for the garden or for commercial production of cut flowers is found in the oldfashioned peony. Its cultural requirements are simple, although it responds readily to good treatment. It has a pleasing habit of growing and the foliage stays in good condition throughout the season making it particularly well adapted to landscape use.

The peony is long-lived and seems to resent being disturbed. The best time for planting or transplanting is during September and November. Root growth is made before freezing weather and plants get established and ready for early spring growth.

A deep,well-drained clay loam is preferred for this flower and an open site should be chosen. A little light shade is beneficial in preserving delicate tones of color in some varieties, but competition with the roots of vigorous trees is disastrous. In planting peonies, the crown should be set two or three inches below the surface.

Heavy fertilizer is not necessary unless the soil is very infertile. As a rule manures are to be avoided unless dug in deeply. Its presence on the surface seems to promote the bud blast and other fungus diseases. Bone meal or a complete fertilizer will be found satisfactory if mixed thoroughly with the soil.

Keeping the surface soil stirred will keep plants in good condition.

In order to control the more common diseases it is good practice to cut the foliage off close to the ground at the end of the growing season and burn the material. Many disease spores will thus be destroyed.

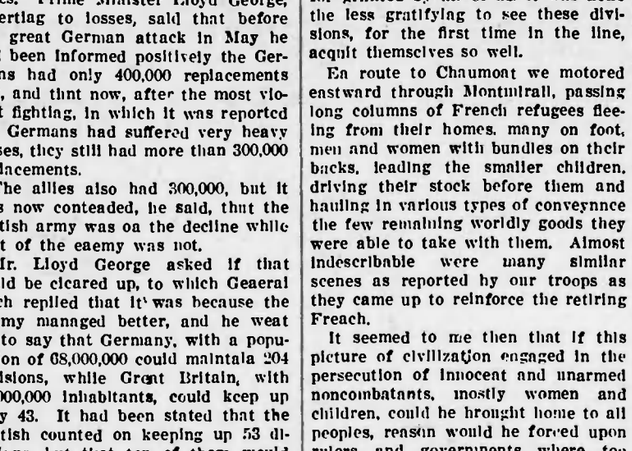
CHAPTER XLIV

Further conversation at the session of the supreme war council showed the uncertainty in the minds of the allies. Prime Minister Lloyd George, revertiag to losses, said that before the great German attack in May he had been informed positively the Germans had only 400,000 replacements left, and that now, after the most violent fighting, in which it was reported the Germans had suffered very heavy losses, they still had more than 300,000 replacements.

The allies also had 300,000, but it was now conteaded, he said, that the British army was oa the decline while that of the eaemy was not.

Mr. Lloyd George asked if that could be cleared up, to which Geaeral Foch replied that it was because the eacmy managed better, and he weat on to say that Germany, with a population of 68,000,000 could maintala 204 divisions, while Great Britain, with 46,000,000 inhabitants, could keep up oaly 43. It had been stated that the British counted on keeping up 53 divisions, but that ten of them would be practically American.

Then, in response to a further question by Mr. Lloyd George, General Foch said he could not pretend to say where Germany procured her replacemeats; possibly it might be froia prisoners returned from Russia.



American Troop Train Pasaing Through a French Town.

Three Map Program.

After further argument on discrepancies of various figures, and insistence by Geaeral Foch that the number of divisions be maintained, the consideration of the transportation of American troops in June and July was resumed. The discussion having reached an impasse, it was suggested that Lord Milner, British war minister, General Foch and I should undertake to draw up a program.

In the consideration of the question by us the point of my contention was won when General Weygnad, who was Foch's principal adviser, remarked that it would be as well to leave the aew drafts to he trained at home a month or so longer.

Although my arguments had failed to make any impressioa on Geaeral Foch, he at once approved Weygand's suggestion.

Agreement on U. S. Troops.

With this out of the way we soon drew up the agreement embodied in the following cablegram sent to Washington June 2:

"(a) For Juae: First, absolute priority shall be given the transportation of 170,000 combatant troops (viz., six divisions without artillery, ammunition trains or supply trains, amounting to 126,000 mea and 44,000 replacements for combat troops); second, 25,400 mea for the service of railway, of which 13,400 have been asked by the French minister of transportation; third, the balance to be troops of categories to be determiaed by the commander in chief, American expeditionary forces.

"(b) For July: First, absolute priority for the shipment of 140,000 combatant troops of the nature defined above, four divisions minus artillery, etc., amounting to 84,000 men plus 56,000 replacements; second, the balance of the 270,000 to consist of troops to be designated by the commaader in chief, American expeditionary forces.

"(c) It is agreed that if available toanage in either month allows the transportation of a larger number of men than 270,000 the excess tonnage will be employed in the transportatioa of combat troops as defiaed above.

"(d) We recogaize that the combatant troops to he dispatched in July may have to include troops with insufficieat training, but we consider the present emergency to justify a temporary and exceptional departure by the United States from sound principles of training, especially as a similar course is being followed by France aad Great Britain. (Signed)

"FOCH, MILNER, PERSHING."

The prime ministers cabled President Wilson expressing their thanks for the promptness of American aid ia the preseat emergency.

Yanks at Chateau Thierry.

The Second and Third divisions, facing the Germaas near Chateau Thierry, had made their places in line among the officials lest the city be taken. Plans were made to remove the goverament to Bordeaux and we ourselves were prepared to remove our offices

CHAPTER XLV

The Second division assumed the offensive June 6, 1918, and began a series of attacks which culminated some three weeks later in the capture of the last German positions in the Bois de Belleau by its marine brigade and of Vaux by its regular brigade.

The fighting during most of this period was of peculiar intensity. The German lines were favorably located on commaading ground and were made more formidable by the exteasive use of machine guns, especially in Belleau wood.

In the initial advance Harbord's marine brigade captured Bouresches, and Lewis' regular brigade took Triangle farm aad Bois de la Barette. During the next few days our troops progressed piecemeal. Juae 15 the Seventh Infantry, Third division, arrived to relaforce the marine brigade engaged in the wood. This regiment relieved the brigade oa that date nad the marines were rested for a week, when they again entered the line. Against stubborn resistance, they drove the eaemy from the wood Juae 25.

Regulars Capture Vaux.

Meanwhile the regular brigade continued its attacks intermittently, aad July 1, with great dash, captured Vaux aad the Bois de la Roche. The operations of the divisioa in this vicinity were practically at an end when the new lines were stabilized on the high ground captured from the enemy.

The casualties in the division were about 9,500. More than 1,600 prisoners were captured from the eaemy.

The gains by the Second division were won with little aid on either flank by the French units, which were still in poor shape, and were made against an enemy determined to crush this early American effort. The success of this division and of the First at Cantigny aad the Third on the Marne, following as they did the crisis of May 27, were loudly acclaimed by the French, and for the time being had a very stimulating effect upoa French morale.

With the transfer of activities to the French front northeast of Paris, our plan to build up an American corps near Amiens had become impracticable, and as I had offered General Petain the services of our divisioas wherever they might be needed it now appeared possible to form at least a corps and possibly an army somewhere along the Marne salient.

U. S. Divisions Relieve French.

I had suggested that we should bring other divisions to join the Second and Third for that purpose, and accordingly the Twenty-Sixth and Forty-second were relieved from the inactive Vosges front, and five American divisions from the British area were designated to be sent to that quiet sector to relieve French divisions. The assembly of four American divisions in aid of the French on that front would more than offset their recent losses.

General Petain, in his letter accepting my offer, said in part:

"I must express my deep gratitude for the prompt and very important aid you are bringing in the present crisis. The American troops already cagaged in the battle are the unanimous admiration of the whole Freach army. The power of the effort which your country is at preseat showing, as well as the resolute aad generous spirit with which you enter the struggle, is for the allies—aad above all for France—a comfort in the grave times through which we are passing, and a pledge of hope for the future."

What If Paris Should Fall?

Leaving the suggestion with Geaeral Petain, without further discussioa, I returned to Paris, arriving June 8. The next morning I called oa Premier Clemenceau, and oa that morning the fourth phase of the great German offensive started between Montdidier and the Oise. Reports indicated that it was meeting considerable success.

Mentioning this to M. Clemenceau, I asked him what he thought would be the result if Paris should fall.

M. Clemenceau replied that he aad Mr. Lloyd George had considered that possibility, and had reached the conclusion they would do everything in their power to save Paris, but if it should be lost they would go on fighting.

As I was leaving he came to the door with me, and I said: "It may not look encouraging just now, but we are certain to win in the end." He clung to my hand and in a tone that showed the utmost solicitude he replied: "Do you really think that? I am glad to hear you say it."

This was the first and only time that I ever sensed nay misgiving in the mind of this resolute maa. Notwithstanding our occasional rather heated discussions on the use to be made of American troops, I admired him greatly. It always seemed to me he represented the true spirit of confidence and courage of the French people.

I then motored to General Foch's headquarters at Bombon. We considered my proposal to form an American corps near Chateau Thierry, to which he readily agreed. He spoke especially of the fine work of our troops.

I asked how a German drive which threatened or perhaps captured Paris would affect the armies and the people. His reply was almost word for word like M. Clemenceau's. They had evidently discussed the possibility of losing Paris. He, too, was certain the armies would go on with the war. Foch spoke so positively and with such evident feeling that I was moved to get up and shake his hand.

Concentrate West of Marne.

Meanwhile the Fourth and Twenty-eighth divisions, en route from the British front to the northeast of France were stopped at General Foch's request in the vicinity of Villers Cotterets, the object being to concentrate several of our divisions on the west of the Marae salient, primarily as a precaution against another German offensive there, but ultimately for possible use on the offensive. The Second, Third, Twenty-sixth and Forty-second were in that area and with the Fourth and Twenty-eighth there was a force equivalent to twelve Freach divisioas, although some of these units were without artillery.

An encouraging circumstance at the moment was the success of the French in holding Von Hutier's attack on the Montdidier-Noyon front. This fourth phase of the German offensive was an effort not only to widen the vulnerable Marne pocket but to secure the railway between Compeigne and Soissoas and open the way to Paris.

The anniversary of the arrival of our advance coatingent in France was the occasion of many congratulations on the part of the French.

CHAPTER XLVI

The demands for American divisions were pressing. The First, second aad Third had already become actively engaged, the First being slated to go to the reserve near the Chateau Thierry salient when relieved from Cantigny. The Second was still in line at Belleau wood, and the Third south of the Marne.

General Foch had asked for five of the divisions recently arrived that were training with the British. Of these the Fourth and Twenty-eighth, while en route to the quiet Vosges sector to relieve French divisions, had been diverted to the reserve near the western face of the Marne salient.

The Thirty-fifth moved to the vicinity of Epinal and the Seventy-seventh was about to enter the trenches in the Baccarat sector to replace the Forty-second, which was to reinforce Gouraud's army east of Rheims. The Eighty-second had started for the Toul sector to relieve the Twenty-sixth, which in turn was soon to relieve the Second.

Thus there were three Americaa divisions in quiet sectors and seven either in the battle line or held in readiness to meet any eventuality which might result from further activity of the Germans in the great wedge they had driven toward Paris.

British Displeased.

The British were displeased at the transfer of our divisions from their area, claiming priority to retain them by reason of having brought them over. When General Foch inquired of the coaditioas under which these troops were serving with the British, my reply made it clear that he had entire authority to direct where they should go in the emergency, as without it the theory of a supreme command would fail.

The rapid succession of German offensives had seriously crippled the allies, and not only materially reduced their powers of resistance but had depressed their morale and caused the darkest misgivings among them. They grew more and more fearful lest the enemy might still have untold reserves ready to swell his forces. That the morale of the allies was low was shown by the conclusions of many of their soldiers retraing from the front to the rest areas.

Reports from the British front were no better. Their troops continuously told our men who were with them for training that we had come too late and that our entry into the battle would only postpone allied defeat. This attitude seemed so alarming that I took steps to prevent such a spirit from affecting our army by promptly reporting the facts to allied authorities. The presence of such sentiments was another important reason for opposing any form of amalgamatioa.

Vastness of Request Unrealized.

Far short had we fallen of the expectations of the preceding November, when Foch, General Robertson of the British, aad I had joined in an urgeat appeal for twenty-four trained American divisions by the following June. It is small wonder that the allies were now so insistent in urging increased and coatinuous shipmeats of men, trained or untrained.

So serious was the situation regarded that it was no longer a demand for twenty-four divisions but for one hundred. It is probable that the vastness of this request was not fully realized, or else the allies had greatly exaggerated ideas of onr power of accomplishment, surprising as it actually proved to be.

A brief calculation of these demands of the prime ministers showed that they were asking more than 2,500,000 combatant troops by the following spring, which, augmeated by those required for the services of supply, conservatively calculated for a well-balanced force situated in a foreign country under the circumstances that surrounded us, would amount at least to 4,000,000 men.

The American combataat force would thus have equaled 200 divisions of the allies, aad their apprehension may be imagined when we realize that this was greater by one-fourth than the combined allied armies of 162 divisions then on the western front.

Saw 3,000,000 as Limit.

Although no such number as this could have been considered feasible, as it is unlikely that it could have been either transported, equipped or supplied, it was necessary, in view of the situation, to lay plans for bringing over all we could. After giving the question careful study, it seemed to me that 3,000,000 men would be the limit we could hope to reach by the spring of 1919.

This, roughly, would provide at least sixty-six or possibly over seventy combatant divisions, the rest being necessary for the noncombatant service. As we had hitherto made estimates based upon a total force of 2,000,000 men, it was quite imperative that calculations should be made on the increased basis aad that work everywhere in the A. E. F. should now have that end in view.

A cable I sent June 21 set forth the reasons for fixing the program for the future definitely at 3,000,000 men as a minimum, aad urged upon the War department the utmost effort to meet our immediate requirements for the expansion of port facilities and railroads. A detailed study of the troop shipments and tonaage required was included. My cable closed:

"There is nothing so dreadfully important as winning this war, and every possible resource should be made immediately available. Mr. Secretary, the question is so vital to our country and the necessity of winning the war is so great that there is no limit to which we should not go to carry out the plan I have outlined for the next ten months, and we must be prepared to carry it on still further after that at the same rate or maybe faster."

CATARACTS DEVELOP FROM OPTIC STRAIN AND ABUSE

Incorrect Use of Eyes Cause 75 Percent of Cataracts

By Dr. J. Fred Andreae, State Board of Exnminers in Optometry

The term "cataract," to indicate a disorder of vision is a misnomer and originated from the fact that such a disorder frequently gives one the impression of a mist or fog falling down before their eyes, hence the term "cataract."

There are over eighty listed causes of catracts, but three-fourths of them may be summed up in this one heading: "Incorrect use of the eyes."

Those who are the greatest sufferers now are often those who have abused or neglected their eyes the most in the previous years. Any type of eye-strain will hasten or encourage the development of this disorder. Self-selected glasses purchased in a store as merchandise; wearing the discarded glasses of some other member of the family, using incorrectly fitted glasses, or in some cases, using none at all, will cause the disorder to rapidly develop.

The woman who persists in using her eyes for extremely fine work for long periods at a time, as well as those who put off the wearing of glasses, are good prospects for "cataracts," for, after all, more cataracts develops from strain and abuse of the eyes than from any other cause. It is so often observed by eye examiners that the possessor of cataracts has been guilty of neglecting the care of her eyes, that every means possible is taken to encourage frequent and periodic eye examinations.

Some people are predisposed to "cataracts" by their physical characteristics. Defective kidneys or any condition which tends to prevent the proper elimination of the body poisons, will aid or hasten the coming of cataracts.

Brighter Prospects For Bloomington Road

The first definite assurance that the Bloomington-Oakland road will be improved, says the Piedmont Herald of last Thursday, came on Saturday from Clinton Uhl, chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, when he assured a delegation of Bloomington residents that he is in favor of the improvement of the road and would have three miles surveyed within sixty days.

The distance from this community to Oakland by the Bloomington road is only 23 miles. Part of this route is over the Kitzmiller-Oakland road, which has already been hard-surfaced. Only twelve miles or so are unimproved. Just west of Bloomington there is a grade of a mile or more and beyond that the road is practically on the level and could be built with few curves.

The road would be a connecting link between several West Virginia and Maryland roads and would greatly shorten the distance between Cumberland aad Oaklnnl, also providing a route with only one short hill to climb.

With this road improved Deep Creek Lake, which affords splendid facilities for fishing, boating and for swimming, would be easily accessible to the people of the Tri-Towns and neighboring communities. Already local residents have purchased camp sites on the lake and are planning the erection of cottages there. With the completion of the road many others would erect cottages and the lake and adjoining territory would become the playground of this entire region. Due to the high altitude, the temperature there is usually several degrees cooler than here in the Tri-Towns, and for years has been a popular summer resort. When the new road is completed it will be possible to drive to the lake in a little over half an hour.

With increased tourist traffic and development of the lake region as a resort, the hard surfacing of the road would prove a great convenience to all this section and a profitable investment for Garrett county.

RANDOLPH SHIELDS WINS IN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Beats D. O'Loughlin in Finals of Men's Singles; Miss Frances Grimes Wins Women's Singles

TROPHIES ARE PRESENTED

Randolph Shields, Washington and Lee ace, of Winchester, Va., won the men's singles in the twelfth annual Western Maryland Championship tennis tournament at Mountain Lake Park last Saturday afternoon by defeating Dave O'Loughlin, of Pittsburgh, Pa., one of the eight seeded players.

Shields has been in the United States for only five years, his parents being medical missionaries in China, where he was born. Three years ago he entered the Mountain Lake Park torunament and was put out in the first round. Last year he returned and remained in the going until the third round when he was eliminated. This year he returned to capture the title against strong opposition.

On his way to the finals, Shields eliminated Bartrand Welsh, Rockville star, who was picked to reach the finals and contend with O'Loughlin for honors.

Miss Frances Grimes, 17, Mountain Lake Park, won the women's singles by defeating Miss Rose Straub, of Johnstown, Pa. It marked the second time in the history of the turney that a Western Maryland representative captured the women's championship, Miss Sara Wright, of Frostburg, having won it in 1924. The latter was put out of the tournament this year by Miss Grimes in the quarter finals.

The brother act of Drs. David and John O'Loughlin, of Pittsburgh, romped off with the men's doubles when they defeated their younger brother William, who was paired with Walter Arensberg, also of Pittsburgh. Miriam Sullivan and Frances Grimes won over Rose Straub and Mildred Miller for the championship in women's doubles, while Miriam Sullivan and Randolph Shields won over Rose Straub and Jack Lauler in the mixed doubles.

Dougles Thomas, Martinsburg, won the consolation round in the men's singles by defeating C. E. Delauney, of Baltimore.

The annual tournament is sponsored by the Women's Civic Club of Mountain Lake Park and is sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Cups were presented to the winners in the men's and women's singles. The new challenge cups for these events, first placed in competition in 1929, were won by B. F. Arkle, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Bob Considine, of Washington, D. C., in 1930; and Miss Mary Will Wakeford, Mobile, Ala., Miss Margaret Carspeken, Morgantown, W. Va., 1930. These cups become the permanent property of the player first winning three times, not necessarily in succession.

Stole Lodge, Auto and Legion Cards from Local Bank Cashier When Helped Monday, July 27

A man, representing himself as being Berne Teter, of Oakland, who last Thursday told authorities in Cleveland, Ohio, that he had lost his wife, car, and had been robbed of $40, is an imposter, the man having stolen the lodge card, the American Legion card and the automobile cards from the real Mr. Teter, who had given him a lift along the Terra Alta-Oakland highway on Monday, July 27.

The man, who said his name was James Moran, told a hard-luck story, saying he was hitch-hiking from Lansing, Mich., to Richmond, Va., to visit his wife, who was ill. He said he had lost his job in Lansing and had just barely been able to save his home. He also said he was a native of Belfast, Ireland, and had been in American for several years.

The report of the loss alleged to have been suffered by Mr. Teter came from Cleveland, Ohio, last Thursday, where police said a man who gave his name as Berne Teter told them he had lost his wife, car and cash while patronizing a speakeasy with a stranger. There he was set upon and robbed of the cash, and returning to the spot where he had parked his car, found the machine and his wife both gone.

The story was thought so good that it was sent to nearly every paper in the United States by the Associated Press and was also broadcast over the radio Thnrsday evening.

Mr. Teter discovered that his cards were missing a few days later when a request for $25 came to his home lodge at Philippi, West Va., from Washington, D. C., the man stating that his car had broken down while on an eastern trip and he needed the money immediately. Failure to make an accurate copy of the signature of identification on the lodge card caused the money to be returned, without the impostor gaining any benefit.

The real Mr. Teter, who is cashier of The Farmers Bank in Oakland, who has his wife, his car, and some money, was astonished Friday morning when he was asked early in the day—really before he was out of bed—by The Republican representative to explain his lightning-like trip from Oakland to the middle west.

Cleveland authorities have been notified that Mr. Teter was not in their city on the day he is supposed to have met with the sad misfortune credited to him.

Moran, according to Mr. Teter, was well dressed, about 40 years of age, and in speaking had an Irish brogue.

The cards obtained by the man were taken from the side pocket in Mr. Teter's car.

Boys' Band Receives $50 Check From Baltimore Elks

A check for $50 was received by R. R. Gilbert, director of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland from Baltimore Lodge, No. 7, B. P. O. Elks last Friday morning.

The check was in recognition of the band's assistance during the Elks' parade in Cumberland on Wednesday, August 12. The local band led the Baltimore delegation of the order and headed the entire parade.

The letter accompanying the check stated in part: "Every member of our lodge who attended the convention were more than delighted with your Boys' Band, and nothing but praise has been heard from everyone."

RAM SALE IS ANNOUNCED FOR SATURDAY, SEPT. 12

Will Be Held at Fair Grounds, Oakland, Beginning at 11 A. M.

A purebred Ram show and sale will be held in Oakland on Saturday, September 12, according to information just received from County Agent J. H. Carter. This event will be the first of its kind ever held in this section. Purebred ram shows and sales have been held in other places with great success, and it is expected that this event will have a strong appeal to sheepmen in particular and to all farmers in general.

A special feature will be the show of all the rams in the sale at 11 o'clock in the morning. The sale proper will start at 1 o'clock in the afternoon on the Fair Grounds.

Oakland is said to be well situated for a sale of this kind because there are around 25,000 lambs annually shipped from West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland within a radius of 40 miles of this town. The lambs of this territory have a high reputation in the Baltimore and other eastern markets.

Mr. K. A. Clark, Animal Husbandman for the University of Maryland Extension Service, is manager of the show and sale. He states that the rams will be an excellent lot. Several flocks from some of Maryland's best sheep breeders will be represented in the consignment.

County Agent Carter says that the people of Oakland are anxious to help entertain everyone who comes, no matter if he is interested in buying or not.

Sunday Schools Urged To Have Delegates At Convention

Letters and report blanks have been sent by E. R. Jones, vice-president of the Garrett County Council of Religious Education, to every Sunday school in the county, requesting two delegates from each school, pastor and Sundey school superintendents of all departments, to attend the annual convention to be held at Accident on Friday, September 4.

The theme of the convention is based around "Our Teachers, their spiritual, their mental and social equipment." The speakers will include Dr. Davids, Miss Lillian McCormick, Miss Jeaneete Lampson, Dr. Jones, Rev. W. B. Brock and Maurice R. Hamm.

Purchases Building Sites

Former County Commissioner Harvey Gortner has purchased from Carlton McComas a delightfully located building lot on the shore at Deep Creek Lake upon which he will erect a bungalow this fall, expecting to have it completed for occupancy by September 15th. The lot purchased by Mr. Gortner is just north of the bridge on Route 37 and commands a magnificent view of the lake and its surroundings.

Mr. Earl S. Bellman, of the sociology department of the University of Maryland, who has been in Garrett county for the past three weeks studying conditions of persons over 65 years of age who are dependent to a degree, will leave Oakland today for a point near Wheeling, West Va., where he will attend a nation-wide meeting of the students of sociology.

Before his departure, nowever, Mr. Bellman purchased a building site at the top of Rodeheaver's Hill, above Sand Flat, six miles north of Oakland, upon which he will erect a summer home the early part of next year.

During his stay in the county, Mr. Bellman stated that he had never seen a more delightful country nor met with more delightful people than the Garrett countians in all his travels from the Rocky Mountains eastward.

Lumbermen's Hero Becomes Real Man in Music Pageant at Somerset September 5 and 6

Characters in the maple sugar pageant which Garrett Countians will portray in the music festival of the Allegheny Tableland association, to be held at Somerset, Pa., on September 5 and 6, have been chosen, according to Rev. C. A. Shilke, county chairman.

Little Miss Betty Beachy, of Grantsville, has been chosen queen; master Claude Stanton, Jr., the court jester; and Master Bayard Keller, Jr., the Indian. The remainder of the court will be announced later and will consist of a princess from each of the eight counties represented in the Tableland area. This pageant on Saturday will be in charge of Miss Holmes and Miss Wallace, of the Holmes-Wallace studio, Grantsville.

The text for Saturday's pageant has been written by Darcy Wilson, Morgantown, W. Va., and those depicting the various activities set forth are rehearsing. Miss Sara Huff, of the Federal extension department, has charge of the sacred pageant for Sunday which will consist of a Sunday school and worship period in the morning, and the rendition of sacred musical numbers in the afternoon.

For the Sunday festival Miss Huff is asking that all organizations and people who expect to attend familiarize themselves with "Praise Ye the Father," by Grunod; "Send Out Thy Light," by Grunod; and the following hymns; "Joy to the World," "O Love that will not let me go," "Now the day

Prizes Given By K.'s of P. To Be In Parade on Labor Day

An attempt to have every car awarded at the annual Knights of Pythias picnics since 1920 in the line of parade on Labor Day this year is being made by Guy Yutzy and Alva R. Martin members of the committee in charge of that part of the twelfth annual picnic.

The lineup of cars would consist of Fords, Chevrolets and Overlands, and if all of them can be found there will be ten in line. A bedroom suite was given away in 1921.

The cars presented in former years were to the following: 1920, W. D. Parks, Newburg, W. Va.; 1922, Walter McRobie, Ford, Crellin; 1923, a resident of Confluence, Pa., Overland Redbird; 1924, A. R. Martin, Ford; 1925, Mrs. Henry Foglepole, Ford; 1926, Mrs. Dwight Speicher, Accident, Ford; 1927, George D. Sprague, Oakland, Chevrolet sedan; 1928, Cecil Smith, Oakland, Chevrolet sedan; 1929, Samuel Aronhalt, Oakland, Ford roadster; 1930, R. R. Gilbert, Oakland, Ford roadster.

This year a Plymouth two-door sedan is the prize.

Acceptances have been received from a number of Grand Lodge officers to be present at the picnic, according to those in charge.

The picnic grounds are located at the intersection of Route 37 and Fourth street, just on the north edge of town.

In addition to the published list of amusements the committee has arranged for a husband-calling contest and a hog-calling contest during the afternoon.

Only Eight Reactors Discovered Among Six Thousand Cattle

Only eight reactors have been discovered in approximately 6,000 cattle tested, according to veterinarians in charge of the work. The cattle are being tested for tuberculosis, and the work is being carried on by five veterinarians of the State extension department.

The reactors were found in widely scattered areas. The doctors expect to complete their test the latter part of September.

FROM WINCHESTER, VIRGINIA, TO PARKERSBURG, WEST VIRGINIA, ON THE NORTHWESTERN TURNPIKE

By OLIVER MARTIN
Editor of The Transmitter

(This is the first of a series of articles describing scenes and towns along the Northwestern Turnpike, and includes that part of the highway which is between Winchester and the South Branch Valley.

If one were checking up on the old turnpikes in the United States that are about one hundred years old and two hundred miles long, he would hardly expect to find one of them lying almost wholly in West Virginia—a state which did not come into existence until 1861 and which even today has many unsettled areas. But the road is there. It is called the Northwestern Turnpike, probably because it was located entirely in the northwestern part of Virginia at the time it was built. It runs across the state from Winchester, Virginia, to the Ohio River at Parkersburg. The section of it that is in West Virginia is 193 miles long. This road is now part of the coast-to-coast highway.

Practically all old roads in the eastern part of our country follow old Indian trails, and the Northwestern turnpike is no exception. In sections of the country where great forests abounded, it was necessary for the Indians, in getting from one place to another, to stick closely to these trails on account of the difficulty in traveling through the underbrush. This was particularly true in what later became West Virginia, for it was a aort of No Man's Land among the Indians. It was not used by them as a place to live, but rather as a hunting ground and a battlefield. The trails were usually not more than 18 inches wide—just enough for one person at a time—but they extended for hundreds of miles. One of them extended from the northern part of New York to the Carolinas.

The tribes were frequently at war with one another—especially the tribes in New York and the Southern tribes—and the paths were used by the Indians in going forth to battle. To these trails may be traced two expressions in common use today—"on the warpath," indicating that somebody is seeking a fight, and "Indian file," meaning to walk one behind another. Some of the paths were also used on hunting expeditions and later, when the white man came, for trading.

The white men found these paths and naturally followed them, on foot and on horseback. Gradually the trails became widened and after a lapse of many years wheeled vehicles could be used.

There was such a trading path all the way across what is now the State of West Virginia even before the Revolution and hunters and trappers would bring their furs over it into Winchester, carrying back salt, iron and supplies. It became a rough wagon road between the Revolution and the close of the century and some of the trading between Virginia and Kentucky was later done over it, the supplies being floated down the Ohio River.

Winchester is in Virginia, as was Parkersburg before 1861. But Winchester is in the Shenandoah Valley and Parkersburg is in the Ohio Valley, and between the two are many miles of mountains. Indeed, the entire journey between the two cities is over and between mountains. There is harly a minute of the time, if you travel during the daylight hours, when there is not a peak or ridge in sight.

Considering the fact that the route lies through so much mountain and forest land and that there are so few towns along it, one wonders why the people of Virginia ever took the trouble to build it. The answer is that the settlers beyond the Alleghenies wanted a road eastward to the more settled parts of the State and that they knew how to get it. They simply brought political pressure to bear. To this fact must be added the fact that the building of the road was Virginia's bid for the trade of the West against New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland. The Northwestern Turnpike was regarded espccially as a rival of the Natlonal Pike, which had been built a few ycars before through Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The first definite effort to secure the road was made in 1819, when a general law was enacted defining the limitations and restrictions of the proposed company. The plans were unsatisfactory to the western counties by reason of a failure of the state to offer what the western counties regarded as reasonable assistance.

Not until the legislative session of 1830 was the matter fought to a finish. The western senators and delegates had been demanding "internal improvements" for scveral years, clalming that the section of the state beyond the Shenandoah Valley was not receiving its share of state revenues.

Meanwhile, the other senators and delegates—or some of them—had been shaping up a plan to have the state build a great road from the Potomac River through the Shenandoah Valley to the headwaters of the James. Statesmen from every section sprang into action during the 1830 session to combat or favor the measure.

But a new and unexpected situation presented itself. It was found that the western counties held the balance of power.

Their delegates were not slow in pressing the advantage. They agreed to carry the Valley Turnpike charter through if the others would agree to build a road from the Valley to some point on the Ohio River.

The fact that the road is there today and has been for nearly a hundred years, is evidence that they "got what they wanted." It was completed as far as Romney in 1837, and was laid out by Colonel Claudius Crozet, a distinguished military engineer who had served under Napoleon in the Russian Campaign and who had afterwards taught at West Point.

The road was used for many years much in the same way as the National Pike; stagecoaches traveled over it, as did the great wagons of the men whose profession it was to haul goods and provisions. Covered wagons on their way to the new lands of the west found their way over it. Great droves of cattle, sheep and swine were driven over it from time to time.

Then, like the National Pike, it had its period of decline. A railroad was constructed over the mountains. Stagecoach and covered wagon becamc obsolete. Years later the old road, again, like the National Pike, was granted a new lease of life. The automobile came into being.

Although Winchester is in a wide valley you are but a few minutes on your journey from that town when you strike the foothills, and less than half an hour when you cross the line from Frederick county, Virginia, into Hampshire county, West Virginia. You leave the Valley while you are yet in Virginia, crossing the Great North Mountain just before you get to Gore. This ridge is the same as that called Fairvew in Maryland and forms the western wall of the wide and well known Valley of Virginia.

Roads through mountains are naturally curved roads, but Virginia seems to be doing a good job of straightening out some of the worst bends in her part of the Pike, and as you travel along out of Winchester you will perhaps see what is a comparatively familiar sight along Virginia highways—a prison camp. This means that road work is being done in the vicinity.

Gentle reader, do not get the impression that these unfortunates are desperate criminals. In most cases they are not. Perhaps if full justice were done you and I would be there with them. Many of them are probably bootleggers and crap-shooters, and occasionally a razor-wielder—men who have come into personal and painful contact with some of civilization's puzzling problems and who have broken some of civilization's puzzling laws, and who, instead of being placed behind iron bars, are put at useful labor. As we ride in comfort over the roads they have built in tribulation, let us not be too conscious of our own virtue.

The first village reached after leaving Winchester is Gore, named for the Gore family. You are now in a grazing country and are likely to see sheep from time to time in the fields or to meet a drove of them along the highway. Sheep haven't any sense at all. Instead of going to the side of the road to let an approaching automobile pass, they will turn and back and run ahead of it, covering the distance they have already traveled.

You will also meet droves of young steers being driven to market after having been fattened on the mountain grass. But the steers waste no energy. They calmly pull off to the side of the road and let the vehicular traffic go by.

It is not generally known that West Virginia has more blue grass acreage than Kentucky or any other state. The ideal lay-out for profitable stock raising in West Virginia is a valley farm and a mountain pasture. During the past five years the number of sheep in West Virginia increased at the rate of 25,000 a year. There are now 600,000 sheep in the state. The state has a beef cattle population of 250,000.

Before you get to Romney you cross the Great Cacapon River, which is really a humble little stream which runs by the village of Capon Bridge, 20 miles from Winchester and three miles west of the Virginia state line. The most interesting thing about the town is that it has three churches for a population of 250.

You will observe that thc river has one more "ca" in its name than the town, and you can readily guess that the name is of Indian origin. It means "river of medicine waters." In Hardy county, adjoining on the south, this stream is known as Lost River. It disappears beneath Sandy Ridge and emerges a few miles away as Cacapon River.

The spelling of the river appears in a different way in the journal of an officer who went through this part of Virginia with part of Braddoek's army in 1775, on the way from Alexandria to Cumberland. Here's what he wrote: "Oct. 20. Crossed Cape Caton, a beautiful prospect and the best land I ever saw. We encamped this night on top of a mountain."

In the same journal is an entry which clearly indicates that the Indians were learning something about the fighting qualities of the Irish. "Oct. 31. An Irlshman arrived at the fort with two scalps. It seems he was thc Sunday before taken prisoner by a party of 52 Indians and left in custody of two whilc the party proceeded toward the inhabitants."

If you have plenty of time and would like a little side trip to view one of nature's curiosities, turn off at Capon Bridge and proceed about seven miles over a dirt road to Slanesville, then go about four miles to North River Mills and in the vicinity you will find Ice Mountain, at the base of which, even on the hottest day in summer, you can dig up pieces of ice.

Farther south in the same county, not far from the Cacapon River and reached by a road out of Gore, are the Capon Springs, famous in other days. These are reputed to have the same analysis as the springs at Carlsbad and were visited by Daniel Webster, Franklin Pierce and other noted men.

If you continue on the highway you will pass through Augusta, a tiny village, and Shanks, another tiny village, and up to the top of Branch Mountain, from which you can drive down into Romney, one of the oldest towns in West Virginia.

If you happen to make the journey in the fall o fthe year, you will meet on the road between Romney and Winchester many truckloads of apples on their way from one city or the other. From the little B. & O. station at Romney were shipped 150 carloads of apples in one week during the Autumn of 1929. The Valley of Virginia, as you probably know, is noted for apples, as are the mountain sides to the west of it. Occasionally you will see an orchard at the very top of a mountain, its even rows in striking contrast to the massed trees of the surrounding woods.

By the way, both the Grimes Golden and the Stark Delicious apples originated in West Virginia. What is said to be the only monument in the world to be erected to the memory of an apple tree may be seen in Brooke county, where stood the first Grimes Golden tree, on the farm of the man for whom the apple was named.

As early as 1804, apples from what is now West Virginia were shipped on flatboats down the Ohio and the Mississippi to New Orleans. West Virginia today ranks eighth among the apple producing states.

Hampshire county now has 420,000 apple trees. In addition, it has 140,000 peach trees, which is more than any other county in the state. Mineral county comes next, with 73,000. With so much land in orchards and pasture, one would not expect much in the way of grainn crops. Neverthcless, Hampshire has 2,300 acres in rye, more than any other county in the state.

While Romney is an old town, it does not look its age. And that's a puzzling thing about this whole road. Knowing that the turnpike was built in the years immediately following 1829, the traveler naturally expects to see plenty of old homes and log cabins. But he doesn't see them. They might have been there fifty years ago, but if they were they have disappeared.

Except in thc towns and villages, where you find modern homes, there are few buildings of any kind for miles and miles. Just a winding, up and down road through and among the hills, with the eye now resting on a wooded ridge and now looking down into a narrow valley, and occasionally looking squarely in front at a seemingly impassable mountain wall. But there is always a way to get through or around, even though the jagged rocks come right down to the roadside. And after a while you become accustomed to ten curves to the mile.

Along the road to Romney the observant traveler will notice small stones set up by the side of the highway at intervals of one mile, with an inscription like this: To R 11 M. This means 11 miles to Romney. The figure, of course, varies with the distance. These stones have probably been in place a long time, for they are marked by the elements. The distance from Winchester to Romney is 44 miles.

You will be likely to notice these little roadside stones for the reason that there are practically no advertising signs to divert your attention. I hesitate to mention this fact, fearing that the manufacturer of somebody's soup or somebody's soothing syrup might read this article and ruch out there to correct what to him must seem an abnormal condition.

And you will find practically no roadside stands except those of farm boys who sell apples, cider and other farm products. Consequently, you will not have been tempted to dull with pickles, peanuts and popcorn the splendid appetite you have picked up in the hills, and you will be able to enjoy the really good fifty cent lunch you can get at Romney.

There's not much to be seen at Romney. The Hampshire County Court House looks fairly modern and so do most of the other buildings, but the upstairs part of the Green Palm Restaurant has about it a look that makes me think that in other days it was a tavern. I'm beginning to nave an eye for taverns that would do credit to a wandering minstrel of ancient days.

An empty store bears a sign that ls interesting—June 13th. Probably some optimist started in business there on that day and decided it was a good name for the store. He was probably too much distressed to tell thc world on what day it was that he closed up.

While there is nothing in particular in Romney to make you think of other days, Romney has known historic times, both before and during the War between the States.

The town was laid off in 1762, when Lord Fairfax directed that a survey be made. It is said that George Washington made the survey. There are, however, a lot of things said about George Washington. He might have helped with it, as he was in the employ of Lord Fairfax from time to time and helped to survey Fairfax's land. Apparently there are many people who do not read and who have the opinion that George Washington did all the surveying between the Chesapeake Bay and thc Ohio River in the years from 1732 to 1799.

In 1763 a fort was erected at Romney for protection against the Indians. The present cemetery was an Indian burying ground. The remains of an Indian mound may be seen there.

At Hanging Rocks, four miles from Romney, there is a cliff rising 300 feet above the South Branch of the Potomac. Near this cliff was fought a fierce battle between the Catawba and the Delaware Indians.

The big building that you see as you enter Romney from the east is the West Virginia State School for the Deaf and Blind. It is not a permanent home for deaf or blind children, but a school at which the afflicted are prepared to earn a living.

In the history of this institution is evidence that Romney has always been a center of culture and learning. One of the buildings was once occupied by the Romney Classical Institute. Ten men of Romney founded in 1819 the Literary Society of Romney. They raised money to establish a classical library, erect a building and founded a school. The building was erected in 1846 and at the beginning of the War between the States there were 3,000 volumes in the library. Most of the members of the society joined the Confederate forces and when they returned after the war they made an attempt to reorganize. When the State of West Virginia decided to establish a school for the deaf and blind, the society offered its buildings free if the State would locate the school at Romney. The offer was accepted.

Romney was the home of one of West Virginia's early governors, John J. Jacobs. It is at present the home of one of West Virginia's recent governors—J. J. Cornwell.

The town lies in a rich agricultural district watered by the South Branch of the Potomac. For a hundred miles or more, from source to mouth, this stream is bordered by fertile fields, making the valley a center of industry and prosperity. It didn't take the early settlers west of the Blue Ridge long to discover this paradise and naturally this valley had people and farms long before the more mountainous sections to the west. Likewise, it had a road to Winchester long before the building of the Northwestern Turnpike.

There was a road from Winchester to Morgantown, by way of Romney, as early as 1786.

Between the years of 1781 and 1796 Bishop Francis Asbury, of the Methodist Episcopal church, made long trips on horseback through what is now West Virginia and has left us in his writings a word picture of some of the conditions at that time.

Writing on June 7, 1781, he says: "I set out for the South Branch of the Potomac—a country of mountains and natural curiosities. We found some difficulty in crossing Great Capon River; three men very kindly carried us over in a canoe, and afterwards rode our horses over the stream, without fee or reward."

Speaking of one of the national curiosities, he says: "I had a view of a hanging rock that appears like a castle wall, about three hundred feet high, and it looks as if it had been built with square slate stones; at first glance a traveler would be ready to fear it would fall on him."

Crossing the mountains was difficult. "We had hard work crossing the Fork Mountain, being sometimes obliged to walk where it was too steep to ride." And further: "After a twenty-mile ride we came to Clarksburg, and man and beast so outdone that it took us ten hours to accomplish it."

In the early part of the War between the States, the Federals occupied Romney with 5,000 men, based on Grafton. Stonewall Jackson, the famous strategist, was in charge of the Confederate forces at Winchester, and he decided that it was not wise to allow the Federals to remain at Romney, although the time was in the middle of a severe winter and it was not likely that they would make any move until spring. And while he was about it, he decided to force them out of all the surrounding country. Colonel Henderson, in his Stonewall Jackson and the American Civil War, describes what took place.

On January 1, 1862, nine thousand Confederates marched from Winchester towards the Potomac. Jackson's first objectives were the villages of Bath (now Berkeley Springs) and Hancock. By dispersing the Federal garrisons he would prevent support being sent to Romney; by cutting the telegraph along the railroad he would sever communication between Banks at Frederick and Rosecrans in West Virginia.

Under cold gray skies the column scaled the mountain ridges; on the winter wind came a fierce storm of snow and hail. Delayed by the steep grades and slippery roads, it was not until the next morning that the wagons came up. The bivouac was as cheerless as the march. Without rations and without covering the men lay shivering around the camp fires.

At the next nightfall the Confederates had not yet reached the outskirts of Bath. Once more they had to bivouac in the open; tents, rations and blankets were far behind with the supply train. A blinding snowstorm added to the discomfort.

But Jackson pressed on over bad roads and with inexperienced officers and made the attack. The Federals crossed the river hastily, leaving behind their cozy winter quarters. That night Jackson's men had food and warmth in plenty.

The next day Jackson shelled Hancock, but withdrew without forcing a surrender. While the batteries had been at work, the infantry had done a good deal of mischief. Two regiments had burned the B. & O. bridge across the Great Cacapon, the canal dam was breached and many miles of track and telegraph were destroyed.

On the morning of the 7th, Jackson moved southward. The weather grew colder and colder, and the mountain roads were little more than sheets of ice. The sleet beat fiercely down on the crawling column. The men stumbled and fell on the slippery hills; wagons were overturned; the bloody knees of the horses bore painful witness to the number of times they had fallen. The provision train lagged far in the rear.

Despite the example of their commander, they pushed forward but slowly through the bitter weather. Jackson was everymhere, putting his shoulder to a wheel of a gun that the exhausted team could no longer move or urging the wearied soldiers to press on.

In the end, Jackson's will triumphed over every obstacle. They came at length in sight of Romney, lonely and deserted amid the mountain snows. The Federal garrison had vanished, abandoning its camp equipment and supplies.

Such was Jackson's march on Romney. I first read about it several years ago and never do approach Romney over the mountains from east or west that I do not think of Stonewall Jackson and his tired and hungry men dragging heavy guns up those ice-covered hills in a snowstorm. Stonewall Jackson was peculiar in some things, but when it came to a job requiring what the soldiers call guts he was very much of a man.

On January 24 Jackson returned to Winchester. He had driven the enemy across the Potomac and destroyed for a time an important line of supply.
